Girls Who are in Demand.

The girls that are wanted are good girls—
Good from the heart to the lips;
Pure as the lily is white and pure;
From its heart to its sweet leaf tips.
The girls that are wanted are home girls,
Girls that are mother's right hand,
That fathers and mothers can trust to,
And the little ones understand.

Girls that are fair on the hearthstone,
And pleasant when nobody sees;
Kind and sweet to their own folks,
Ready and anxious to please.
The girls that are wanted are wise girls,
That know what to do and to say;
That drive with a smile and a soft word
The wrath of the household away.

The girls that are wanted are girls of sense,
Whom fashion can never deceive;
Who can follow whatever is pretty,
And dare what is silly to leave.
The girls that are wanted are careful girls
Who count what a thing will cost,
Who use with a prudent, generous hand,
But see that nothing is lost.

The girls that are wanted are girls with hearts;
They are wanted for mothers and wives;
Wanted to cradle in loving arms
The strongest and frailest lives.
The clever, the witty, the brilliant girl,
There are few who can understand.
But, oh! for the wise, loving home girls
There's a constant, steady demand.

COUSIN CASSANDRA.

BY HELEN FOREST GRAVES.

The March winds were blowing their trumpets down Shegauk Valley, as only March winds know how to blow, and the daffodil glow of sunset lay over the brown fields, streaked here and there in shady corners with bars of late lingering snow, as Patty Greer came to the kitchen door to shake the crumbs off the tablecloth.

"How pretty it looks down the valley!" she thought. "I'm glad Grandfather Greer built this house just here, instead of under the rocks. One gets such a view! I do believe the maples along the edge of the swamp are beginning to redden already. And there," with a flush on her cheeks which almost rivaled the red of the maple copse, "is Arad Temple—at least, I think it's he—coming by Old Mill! I shouldn't a bit wonder if he were coming here."

She stood a moment, watching the black speck against the daffodil shine; a moment more, her lips apart, her brown eyes strained.

"Patty!" called her mother. "Why on airth don't you shut that door? The cold draught comes in like a hull pack o' wolves!"

"I—I—was—only looking," said Patty, as she closed the door with a sigh.

The black speck had disappeared; it did not reappear again.

"I thought so," said Cousin Cassandra, a lean, high-shouldered woman, with a tuft of scanty flax-colored hair, hair-pinned on the top of her head, and a checked cape drawn across her narrow shoulders.

She spoke so close to the girl's ear that Patty gave a little jump.

"Thought what?" said she.

"That he'd gone into Lewis Hibbard's store," nodded Cassandra. "The young fellers they're all dreadful partial to Lew's store sence they put in the billiard tables. Dear me! dear me! I do wonder what this world is camin' to!"

The red in Patty Greer's cheeks was genuine peony color now.

"I don't see what harm it is," she retorted, "if he has stopped in for a minute."

"I do!" said Miss Cassandra. "Anything but a dissipated young man!"

"He isn't dissipated!" cried Patty.

"Well, p'r'aps he ain't," said Cassandra. "I'm sure I hope so. But there ain't nothin' would induce me to marry a man if there was the least doubts of!"

"What a comfort it is that you have never been tempted in that way!" said Patty, vindictively, as she folded the tablecloth in a series of jerks and put it into the closet.

And then Patty went up to her own room and had a good cry.

"I do think, she said to herself, "that Cousin Cassy is the most spiteful creature I ever knew! But, all the same, Arad might have come here tonight. He knew I was expecting him."

When her eyes were dried at last and her new frill satisfactorily adjusted, Patty came down stairs.

But the wistful glance she cast into the room was unrewarded. No one was there but her mother, piecing patchwork, on one side of the chimney-corner, and Cousin Cassandra, knitting a preposterously long stocking of blue yarn, on the other.

And the subject of conversation had apparently remained unaltered, for Cousin Cassandra was still hammering away on Lewis Hibbard and the new billiard tables.

"It's what I call a snare for souls!" groaned she. "Them balls a-clickin' about and the doors always opened wide, for every loafer in Shegauk to stray into! I allays did despise Lew Hibbard—a lazy, shiftless creetur', like all the Hibbards afore him! They do say he druv his first wife into her grave, and his second only lived two year, out of pure grit. Parson Pooley he says, if the women o' Shegauk would only take a stand—Oh, Patty, is that you? Well, I've put the dried apples in soak for the sass tomorrow, and the meat is ready to chop for mince pies."

Patty had seated herself at the table and listlessly taken up a book.

"I don't wans to chop meat tonight," said she. "Tomorrow morning will do just as well."

"Disapp'inted!" whispered Miss Cassandra, behind her hand, to Mrs. Greer, who was slightly deaf. "Sort 'o calc'lated on Arad Temple bein' here tonight. Wal, mebbe it's just as well. Arad he's too partial to Lew Hibbard's place."

Patty could have murdered Cousin Cassandra. She jumped up and went to the door to let the cat in.

"Why Arad!" she exclaimed, as pussy darted in, and a tall figure appeared in the background.

Cousin Cassandra opened the inner door and craned her neck forward

"Well, I never!" said she. "It's you, arter all, ain't it? We sort o' reckoned, me and Patty, that you'e found your way into that new store o' Lew Hibbard's."

"I did stop in there," said Arad, coolly.

Miss Cassy shook her head.

"I knew it," said she, "jest as well's if I'd seen ye with my own eyes."

Mrs. Greer lighted the fire in the best room, with true maternal solicitude.

"What's that for?" asked Miss Cassy. "Ye don't s'pose, do ye, that they'll hev anything to say that we can't hear jest's well's not? I wouldn't let Patty keep company with any man that goes to Lew Hibbard's place, ef I was you, Sarah; it's a reg'lar well of iniquity!"

"I guess Arad Temple's a pretty steady young man," said Mrs. Greer, timidly, as she adjusted the best duplex lamp on the table, and set the big family Bible and the new photograph album straight.

Cousin Cassandra stalked grimly out of the room.

"Don't say I didn't warn you!" said she.

Patty came to her mother that night just as the big kitchen clock was striking eleven.

"Mother," said she, "Arad Temple has asked me to be his wife."

Mrs. Greer looked quickly up.

"What did you tell him, Patty?" said she.

"I—said—yes! Oh, mother, why shouldn't I? He is so good, so nice—and he loves me so dearly!"

"But your Cousin Cassandra thinks—"

"Mother," whispered Patty, nestling her head down on her mother's shoulder, "I did say something about Lewis Hibbard's store. I made believe I was angry, mother, and he looked so hurt, and he let my hand fall so, mother" (with a pretty little piece of pantomime), "and he said, "If you can't trust me in everything, Patty, don't trust me at all!' And I said I'd trust him, mother, to the very end. Did I do right?"

"Well," said Mrs. Greer, tenderly enfolding Patty with her loving arms, "it's just the answer I should have made your father, Patty, when we kept company; that's all I know. And your Cousin Cassandra—

"Oh, let Cousin Cassandra mind her own business!" said Patty, coloring up. "She always was a meddling, prying, disagreeable old maid, and I think she grows worse every year."

Miss Cassandra Greer heard the news of the engagement with an ominous shake of the head.

"It's a dreadful resky thing," said she.

"I wouldn't run the chance, that I know!"

Patty had it on the tip of her tongue to retort that it was extremely unlikely she would be called upon to hazard any such danger, but she thought better of it, and didn't.

She was so happy that she couldn't afford to be magnanimous!

"Me and Mrs. Squire Rudder and Miss Betsy Hall and some other of the church ladies," said Miss Cassy, "we're gwine to try and get that place of Lewis Hibbard's shut up! And I don't think none the more of Arad Temple for his goin' there so much. But law! Patty's completely infatuated with him, and there's no use talking, to her 'bout it!"

"Patty," said young Temple to his fiance, the week before the wedding, "you have trusted me, and you've done right. But I don't like to see the troubled look on your face whenever that old meddler gives tongue on the subject of Hibbard's store. I have been there a good deal lately, but I've never spent a cent. I've been earning money instead, at my trade, putting up a new barn and line of sheds at the rear—and that was my business there! But I would not please Cousin Cassy so much as to tell her that. Isn't it strange that people can't mind their own business?"

"Oh," said Patty, laughing, "Cousin Cassandra never could!"

Patty was sewing the last fleurette of white ribbon on the unpretending wedding gown of snowy albatross, when Miss Cassandra came in, rather flurried.

"White may do very well for you," she said; "but for a woman o' my years, I sort o' think dove color would be more suitable. How many yards d'ye think it would take, Patty, for a dress for me?"

The girl opened her eyes very wide.

"Why, Cousin Cassy," said she, "are you going to be married?"

Miss Cassy gave a spasmodic giggle.

"Why, yes," said she, "I am."

"To Parson Pooley?" gasped Patty.

Miss Cassandra shook her head.

"He's too bigoted," said she. "I would-not hev him!"

"Peleg Rudder!"

"La, no! He's poorer'n Job's turkey."

"He's a good, well-to-do widower," said Cassandra; "and a man that has buried two wives will know how to take care of a third; and in his business he needs a stirrin, active helpmate."

"But you haven't told me who it is, Cousin Cassy?" persisted Patty.

"Hain't I? La' me, how forgetful I be!" simpered Miss Cassandra. "Why—it's Lewis Hibbard?"

A Novelty in Advertising.

A poor congregation found itself badly in want of hymn books. The clergyman applied to a London firm and asked to be supplied at the church rates. The firm replied that on condition that the hymn books contained certain advertisements the congregation should have them for nothing. The minister sorrowfully complied, thinking to himself that when the advertisements came they could be removed from the leaves. The hymn books arrived, and they contained no interleaved advertisements. At the thanksgiving service the parson gave out the Christmas hymn, and the congregation sang the first verse. When they reached the last line they found that this was what they had been singing:

"Hark! the herald angels sing. Dash's pills are just the thing; peace on earth and mercy mild, two for man and one for child."

A City's Shame.

The city of Philadelphia may well feel ashamed that the remains of Benjamin Franklin lie in an abandoned cemetery in that city, his grave long neglected and uncared for. Now that the growth of the city must soon demand this spot for buiding purposes, the Philadelphians are beginning to realize that such a condition of affairs is not befitting the memory of the man, and are talking of moving his remains and that of his wife to the city hall, and placing them in a granite sarcophagus under the dome.—Exchange.

NEW YORK, April, 1891.

DEAR PATRIOT: Here comes your dear old Auntie again, as I hope all my gentle readers will be tempted to call me and yield as easily to the temptation as we should to take a plate of ice cream or a glass of lemonade. I see in you all, my sweet nieces and my gallant nephews, for I used to look into your bright, beautiful faces when you were little bits of girls and boys. You have long since forgotten me for that venerable, lusty and long-lived gentleman—Time—who is so thin and carries a scythe in his hand, has been after me. So now I am getting ancient like that celebrated mower who has done more mowing than all the farmers on the globe put together. Now I am as old as the hills, but the hills you know on good authority can skip and clap their hands.

You have heard of me I am sure—that frisky female or to be more polite to myself that gentlewoman so active and generous that she climbed a tree, had a stick to boost her and then all the time threw corn to feed the hungry hen of the male persuasion who unlike the ghost of Hamlet's pa could not a tail unfold because it had been curtailed that the young ladies might have fine feathers to trim their hats with to make fine birds of themselves. I am not climbing now as much as I used to do. But I am still fond of chickens, if the sunshine of only a few summers has nestled in their top knots. I like them boiled or broiled, fried or fricasseed, very much indeed. I am sure they take the lead of all fair, fat fowls which are foiled and felled by foul play, in their opinion, for dinner. It is only chicken-hearted folks I am sure who do not care to be helped to chicken but once at the table.

Robert Martell.

My great-grandchild Dell who admires the drama and is a good theatrical critic too, took me to see this romantic actor the other evening in the handsome Fourteenth street Theatre. I do not like this plain name in figures just one number ahead of the unlucky number. I could not have consented to go if the play had been in Thirteenth street for I know how unlucky it is to have only thirteen cents in your pocket when you need twenty-five for a speculation at the "Bargain Counter." But I must speak of this splendid actor in the old play from the French—Monbars. He is just perfect in form and feature and a face of manly beauty and with a rich musical voice which he uses with consummate skill and attractiveness. His acting was superb and he was greeted by a full house who called him before the curtain several times with the leading lady Mrs. Behrens, a superior actress. Mr. Martell has a military gracefulness in every step and attitude. He has the rare genius of whispering with remarkable force so that each sound and syllable can be heard all over the house. He is distinguished for power and pathos, too. My dear courteous readers when Robert, my favorite, goes to Boston, you go too and then you will say, what I dare say you will hear everybody say, that he is a brilliant star.

Now there is a great actress up-town—great only on the scales, I mean, as she weighs something less than three hundred pounds. Her name is Anna Odelia Solomon Lola Montez Dissde Bar. She is a good deal shorter than her name. She takes the character of Cupid, in tights, and shoots with a bow and arrow. Goodness gracious me! what a naughty girl. I hear she is a bad shot. I wouldn't go to see her for the world—would you?

AUNT JEMIMA.

Removing Children's Teeth.

The extraction of the sixth year molar in the mouths of children is a much disputed point, but briefly it amounts to this: Too often parents neglect the mouths of children, believing that new teeth will come in place of those decayed.

The sixth year molar is the first of the permanent set of teeth, and where, at the age of eleven, or before the appearance of the twelfth year molar, it is found so badly decayed that the pulp must be or is destroyed it is frequently wiser to remove it (and its fellow in the same jaw if that is decayed), hoping that the erupting twelfth year molar will then appear further forward, and eventually the space be obliterated. Thus the wisdom tooth has plenty of space and becomes more useful than usual.

Where the same condition prevails after the appearance of the twelfth year molar it is not so easily decided, though in many cases even then it is more beneficial to remove than to retain the pulpless tooth.—A Dentist in New York Herald.

He Had Been Gunning.

In a certain Vermont town where the war of sects still rages with much of its old time bitterness, dwells a Presbyterian clergyman, who looks upon all the world outside the pale of his church as in darkness, and the bondage and gall of iniquity. Especially does he regard the Unitarians as the children of darkness, and at least once a year he is accustoned to preach a sermon aimed at their particular heresies.

This clergyman has an only son, and the son, so far from being bitter against the sects which so excite the holy wrath of the father, is utterly indifferent to the whole lot, Presbyterian included. His father has endeavored to instil into him some of his own spirit, but apparently without the slightest success; and the young man is theologically the blackest of black sheep, although morally there is not much which could not be said in his praise.

One beautiful Sunday last Autumn, when game was plenty in the woods, the young man took his gun, and while his father was at church inveighing against the devil and all his works, the son was engaged in the most open Sabbath breaking, a sin against which he has no scruples whatever. When night came he presented himself at home with a well-filled game bag, much to the horror of his father.

"My son," the old man said, "did you shoot those today?"

"Yes, father," was the ready reply. "Didn't I have good luck?"

"Oh, my son," the other groaned in answer; to think you should go gunning on the Lord's day! Why, I had almost rather you had gone to the Unitarian meeting.—Boston Courier.

For the Realm Beyond.

The writer, familiar with the woods and woodcraft, has hunted all animals in our northern forests from the lynx down to the rabbit and is familiar with the habits of all. Not one of them but what takes some form of bath each day. In nature, cleanliness follows the appeasing of hunger and here humanity gets a solid lesson. Take it to heart, add Brussels soap, and thus make clearer your path to the celestial realm.

Foreign Letter.

We copy the following interesting letter written by a gentleman of Braintree about his travels in Europe, from the BRAINTREE OBSERVER.

ST. PETERSBURG, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The streets of this city are thronged with vehicles of all kinds. Riding is cheap. It is said there are 20,000 droskies in daily use. The drivers of all carriages are in uniform. Private carriages are surmounted with coachman and footman adorned with a most gorgeous array of gold lace and cocked hat. The horses are beautiful. I never saw so many fine, large, black, high and proud-stepping horses in any other city. Generally they are fair travellers, and are driven at a rapid pace through the streets of the city.

Soldiers are to be seen everywhere. The climate being treacherous, overcoats are much worn in midsummer. On Sunday we visited the cathedral of St. Isaac. It is a magnificent structure, built in the form of a Greek cross, 350 feet long by 298 wide. Upon each side of the church there is a portico, the architrave of which is supported by beautiful round-finished granite columns, highly polished, the capitals and bases of which are of bronze. There are 56 of these columns in the four peristyles, 60 feet high, 7 feet in diameter and weighing 128 tons each. The cupola is 66 feet in diameter, and supported by 24 Corinthian columns 35 feet high and weighing 64 tons each. The cross at the top of the cupola is 336 feet from the ground The cost of the building is said to be $17,000,000. The immense doors are all of bronze, decorated with figures in bas-relief.

The general impression one receives upon entering is, that it is a massive building, of fine proportions, and constructed of magnificent materials. The walls and floor are of polished marbles of various colors, taken from Russian and Siberian quarries. The church is dark, and the pictures cannot be seen without artificial light. The altar is flanked on both sides with four beautiful columns of malachite and two columns of lapis lazuli, each of which cost $30,000. Mosaic pictures are inwrought into the walls, which are fine works of art. Paintings of Christ and of saints, some of which are very gaudily set in silver and gold, surrounded with precious gems, are seen in different parts of the church, constituting shrines where people constantly gather for worship and adoration.

The first proceeding of a good Russian upon entering a church is to buy a candle; then he approaches the shrine, sinks upon his knees, bowing his head to the floor, crossing the breast repeatedly with the thumb and two fingers of his right hand; then he lights the candle at the holy lamp and sets it in upon a large silver stand which is provided for the purpose; then he falls upon his knees before the altar, and before he departs he kisses the picture of his saint, which is covered with glass. The candles are not allowed to burn long after the worshipper departs, but are taken down and snuffed out by the attendant, and the remnants are remelted and sold again, to be burned before some other saint.

Within the large altar may be seen the innermost shrine of the sanctuary, into which women are not admitted. It contains a small circular temple the dome of which is supported by eight Corinthian pillars of applied malachite, eight feet high, with gilded bronze base and capitals, which cost $125,000. The doors which enclose the large or high altar are of bronze, very large and very showy, being profusely gilded and ornamented. During service they are swung wide open to reveal the inner sanctuary, silver candelabras and other silver ornaments, also the full length picture of the Saviour upon the huge stained glass window. The side altars and shrines are rich in decoration, with swinging and burning censers and candelabras, large, heavy and ornate, all of solid silver.

Pictures are numerous in the Greek church, but all images are rejected. There are no pews and no reserved places; all the worshippers are on a common footing, and as there are no seats, the rich and the poor alike must stand upon the marble floor during the service. The church is open for all, it is free to all, and the poorest Russian peasant has the same rights and privileges in church as the most prosperous and most cultivated citizen of the metropolis. The priests are draped in very gaudy and richly decorated vestments; they wear long beards, also their hair so long that it rests upon their shoulders. While the priests repeat their prayers, etc., the people are at times bowing, and bowing again, kneeling to the pavement, and crossing and recrossing themselves.

There is no instrumental music allowed within the hallowed walls, but the singing of human voices is magnificent. The choir is made up of 100 male voices, men and boys, and has an accomplished leader, who stands within the altar enclosure, beating the time. I heard them on Sunday morning at service, and such singing I never heard before and never expect to hear again until I return to Russia. It was simply superb. The men had the roundest, clearest, purest and most massive and powerful tones that I ever heard from the human voice, and the boys the sweetest and purest of tones, which in conjunction produced the most sublime music that ever fell upon mortal ears. I cannot forget the resonance, solidity and purity of those tones, and it seems almost inconceivable that such majestic music could proceed from human voices.

We visited Kazan church, which is modelled after St. Peter's at Rome. It is a massive and beautiful church. Its roof and dome are supported by polished granite columns from Finland. It contains many statues, and is hung with many flags taken from the French, the Turks and others. It contains a picture of the Virgin which is magnificently crowned and adorned with diamonds and precious stones of immense value. At the doors of all the churches the black nuns and beggars congregate to solicit alms.

The Greek church is said to be richly endowed, yet it is constantly seeking to obtain money from the people in every way possible. The church, it is said, makes a great deal of money from its trade in candles. When people marry, when they are sick or when they die the church makes loud calls for money. If a person is very sick three or four priests will take a copy of a picture of his saint for him to kiss or adore, for which money must be paid. If he is very sick and can pay handsomely for the service then the priests will take the original picture and not a copy. As I left the church I met a carriage which had just returned with priests who had been out on service to the sick with the picture of some saint.

Sunday afternoon we visited the convent of Alexander Newski, which was founded by Peter the Great. In the church connected with it we saw the tomb and monument in silver of Saint Alexander Newski, the tombs of some members of the imperial family, and attended mass, which was conducted by the monks. There is an academy connected with this monastery which has a large number of students, a valuable library and a large collection of manuscripts. The monks are robed in black, with tall black hats and black veils hanging therefrom. These monks are large, heavy, well-formed men, with long hair and beards, looking as though they were well fed and enjoyed life, although secluded from the public gaze. At the religious service men, women and children came in to participate, and they went through the customary bowing, kneeling and crossing themselves, while the monks did the singing, which was very good, but not equal to that at St. Isaac's. The men's voices were very heavy, deep and resonant, like the sub-bass of an organ, but not having the boys to aid them it lacked completeness.

How Nannie Retrieved Herself.

Almost all children have a troublesome habit of telling the truth about things, and blurt it out in season and out of season, and keep their relatives in a state of abject terror at the way in which they often betray family opinions. Nannie was no exception to this rule, and her mother, like other mothers, found it difficult to teach her that while truthfulness is essential, the truth—or rather facts which some people mistake as the only truths—should not always be spoken; that while we must not say a thing is good which is altogether bad, it is permitted us to keep silence without any transgression of the moral law.

One day Nannie was taken in to see the new baby and cousin. After viewing it with great gravity for several moments she said, "I t'ink it's a berry homely baby."

After they had reached home her mother took her to task her for her plainness of speech. Nannie, of course, insisted that the baby was homely and she had only told the truth. "But, Nannie," said mamma, "it would have been better not to have said anything; or you could have said it had pretty hair, for that is true. I'm afraid you hurt auntie's feelings."

On the next visit Nannie hastened to retrieve hersolf. "Auntie," she remarked, after a long look at the small creature, "Auntie, I t'ink your baby is berry decent!" and her mother in despair came to the wise conclusion to leave Nannie in the future to the promptings of her own innocent mind.—New England Farmer.

Deaf Mutes.

F. G. Jefferson of Toronto, Canada, thus writes to the Mail of that city: "The following case has come under my notice: A farmer married his cousin, and both possessed all their faculties, and they have nine children, of whom five daughters were born deaf mutes. Three of these daughters married speaking and hearing husbands. The first one has three deaf mute children out of five, the second one has two deaf mute children out of three and the third has one deaf mute child out of two. This proves that Prof. Bell of Washington, United States, has made a mistake by publishing largely that the intermarriages of deaf mutes bring a deaf mute race, when the fact is that deaf mute children proceed from married cousins possessing all their faculties. In the Belleville deaf mute school there are 240 pupils, and not one of them has deaf mute parents. There are many other similar cases in England and the States."

A New Glove Mender.

It is quite a difficult matter to repair one's gloves so neatly and perfectly that it cannot be detected as a nonprofessional's work, but there is a little invention which facilitates this work to such a degree that even untrained hands can do it with neatness and dispatch. The apparatus is made of nickel, and consists of two parts, which press against each other by means of a spring. Part of the top edge is provided with small teeth in close range to each other. The seam of the glove to be mended is carefully pressed between these teeth, and the needle passed in and out at every opening. Repairing done in this manner is so perfect that it cannot be noticed.—New York Journal.

An Old Directory.

John McPherson's directory of Philadelphia, published in 1785, has been unearthed. Among the prominent names it contains are these: "Franklin Benjamin, his excellency, 1 Franklin court; Morris Robert, merchant, 101 Market street; Rittenhouse David, 109 Arch street; Hamilton Alexander, 855 Second street." Although on the title page Macpherson spells his name in that manner, in the body of the work his name appears as John Mc Pherson, broker, 7 Chestnut street. That all the people of the town were not in sympathy with his work is inferred from these entries: "I shall not give my name," 43 Stampers alley; "I won't have it numbered," 478 Green street; "I won't tell you my name;" "What you please," 49 and 59 Market street.—New York World.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton,
Friday, April 3, 2 P. M.
Indications for Saturday: Fair weather; stationary temperature.
H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

The Storm.

Friday's storm caused considerable damage along the coast. The storm was central Thursday over the great lakes and worked rapidly this way, reaching the sea board at about ten o'clock Thursday evening. It reached its height at four o'clock Friday morning, when the wind swept across the bay in terrific gusts, driving a penetrating rain and drizzle before it.

At Neponset, a large three masted schooner which was moored to the easterly pier of the draw, snapped its bow hawser and swung around, crashed into the railroad bridge and carried away the cable house, ripping off some thirty feet of railing, and crushed its long boat which hung over the schooner's stern on the davits. The trains were considerably delayed by this accident.

The tide came up over the track at the Boston side of the Crescent avenue station, washing the road badly.

Wreckage, dories, and landing stages were strewn along the coast from Quincy to Boston.

All of the swamp and low land in Quincy was completely submerged by the unusually heavy rain.

The streets were badly gullied.

D street, South Boston, where the railroad goes over, was under water.

A large schooner went ashore on Federhen's beach, Quincy Point, early Friday morning.

The applications of many candidates were then considered.

Interesting remarks and wholesome advice was then offered by each of the grand officers. Grand Scribe Cole, a veteran in the service recalled a period 45 years ago, when Odd Fellowship flourished in Quincy, when there was a grand procession in which the Quincy, Randolph and Stoughton lodges participated, and Bro. W. E. Parmenter delivered an address.

Grand Patriarch Phelps commissioned P. C. P. Richardson as district deputy, and he accepted the responsible position, speaking earnestly on the work of Odd Fellowship.

About 7 o'clock there was an intermission for supper which was served in the commodious banquet hall. Patriarch Wales was caterer, and he spread a very good bill of fare.

It was shortly after eight o'clock when the encampment again convened. The Patriarchal degree was worked by Shalom Encampment, No. 12 of Dorchester, from which a majority of the charter members of the new encampment had with-drawn.

Boston Encampment No. 38, of Boston, Charles D. Stone degree master, advanced thirty-nine candidates for Manet Encampment to the "Golden Rule" degree Wednesday evening.

The work which was beautifully rendered, was very impressive, that of High Priest Alford, being especially fine.

The work over the patriarchs enjoyed one of Caterer Wales' suppers, after which speeches were in order from the visitors.

Thursday evening Massasoit Encampment No. 1, of Boston, accompanied by their Deputy, Freeman O. Emerson, exalted thirty-nine of the members of Manet Encampment to the "Royal Purple" degree. The visitors arrived on the 6.30 train and were first seated at the tables, and partook of a supper. This over the degree was worked upon two of the members, the others being around to witness the exemplification which was rendered in a very solemn manner, which must have made a lasting impression upon the two candidates who were fortunate enough to have been selected from so many to have the degree worked upon them.

The degree staff was made up as follows:

C. P.,—S. B. Knights.
S. W.,—A. F. Loomer.
H. P.,—C. N. Choate.

When the car left the track Hayden, stuck bravely to his post and perhaps averted a more serious accident. At the time there were but two passengers in the car who otherwise than receiving a general shaking up were uninjured. The cause of the car leaving the track was probably a stone on the rail.

The resignation of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Muse, was read and with deep regret was accepted, to take effect when the Presbytery acts on the case.

Real Estate Sales.

Joseph D. King has sold to Michael McCarthy, 13,363 square feet of land, with buildings, on the south side of a private way in Quincy, on estate of Peter Reinhalter, $1585.

The Sherman & Nickerson Land Company's and Wood, Harmon & Company's representatives had their hands full Fast day, escorting around the crowds of buyers that came from Boston, to look at the lots of land at Wollaston.

G. A. R. Anniversary.

Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., will hold a meeting at Hancock hall on Monday evening, April 6, at 7.30 o'clock, in honor of the formation of the first post of the Grand Army at Decater, Illinois, on April 6, 1866. The twenty-fifth anniversary entertainment will consist of speaking, a history of Post 88, singing and music. The public are cordially invited to attend.

☞ The committee of the Y. M. C. A. have been hard at work the last few weeks, and have arranged an unusually fine programme for their public meeting next Wednesday, as will be seen by their advertisement in our columns.

—The oldest house in Kingston, occupied by Henry R. Hernhardt, was burned Wednesday.

ATLANTIC.

Mr. Sanford Small of the firm of Timberlake & Small of Atlantic has returned from his excursion to Jamaica with the grocers.

The Atlantic Young Men's Lyceum Club, gave a sunlight dance at Music hall, Fast afternoon. Messrs. Thomas Whelan, John Mahoney and George Hardy, were in charge.

Arthur Priest, one of the young men employed at T. Gurney's store, attempted to play circus in the barn Tuesday afternoon, and was making rapid strides toward perfection when he slipped and fell to the floor, barking his nose and leaving other marks which will be a gentle reminder to him for some days.

It may not be very generally known, but it is a fact that a very convenient church car leaves Atlantic, Sunday, at 10 A. M., Beale street at 10.10, and runs through without change to School street. It returns at 12.

Mrs. Owen Grady is sick with la grippe.

Miss Kendall is spending her vacation with friends out of town.

A number of Atlantic people attended church at Neponset, Sunday.

Mrs. J. Cunningham has moved into her new house on Squantum street.

Mr. McVey, the barber, is to move from Quincy to one of Pope's houses on Squantum street.

Joseph Lucas, who has been boarding at Atlantic, has gone to housekeeping at Meeting House hill.

The High school scholars of Atlantic are buying their season tickets which makes it look as though the school committee had decided not to furnish tickets.

Two young men of Atlantic indulged in a boxing match near the depot last Saturday, and as a result one wears a yard of sticking plaster on his nose and the other walks lame, his leg having been sprained.

Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Stocker received a call from some friends out of town, who left their horse tied to the lamp post. Shortly after, the lamplighter drove up and placed his ladder against the post, which frightened the horse, who broke his hitching-strap and ran down the street where he was stopped, but not before the buggy was quite badly smashed.

Easter day was fittingly observed at Atlantic in the Memorial church. The sermon by the pastor at the morning service was on the text: "The walks to Emmans." There was a solo by Mrs. Perkins. Mrs. Coe presided at the organ. The flowers at the altar were gifts from Messrs. James F. Gay and Louis Tebau.

The committee in charge of the Easter concert were Misses Grace Parker and Maud Rice, and Mrs. Perkins. In the absence of the Superintendent, the assistant superintendant, George E. Todd, took charge.

A Mystery Solved.

The body of Daniel Cronin, of Neponset, who was last seen at Atlantic one night in January, was discovered Wednesday morning floating in the Neponset river near the draw bridge.

The face was badly disfigured from some accident.

A Neponset undertaker took charge of the remains.

Cadets of Honor Elect.

The Cadets of Honor connected with the Memorial church have elected the following officers:

Commander,—Emelio Paul.
Vice Commander,—Gertrude Hall.
Secretary,—Eva Bassett.
Treasurer,—Nellie Hope.
Guard,—Herbert Moxom.

The cadets are to give an entertainment in the church April 22.

SOUTH QUINCY.

M. R. Bartlett is putting in a cellar on Albertina street.

J. B. Plicard and Joseph Trepannier are putting in cellars on Rodman street.

John A. Caven left for a two months' visit to Dumfries, Scotland, Fast day. He sails from New York Saturday, on the Umbria, Cunard line.

Malnati Bros. have made quite an improvement at their works on Liberty street, having turned their shed around, put up a large derrick, etc.

The other evening the granite cutters at Craig & Richards' granite works were surprised to see a messenger come for Mr. Scarborough, and he had hardly time to lock his tool box. But it was found out later that he was a father.

The funeral of the late A. B. MacLean, a highly esteemed member of Bay View, L. O. L., No. 187, took place last Sunday afternoon. The brethren of Bay View lodge, headed by Worshipful Master, W. F. McCalder, and District Master Robert Cox of Cambridge, led the funeral procession. A delegation from the carpenter's union was also present. At the cemetery the solemn burial service of the Orange order was repeated.

The Clan McGregor literary society met in Doble's hall on Saturday, the subject being "Ambition," and the essayist Mr. John Wyllie, who, though young in years, gave a thoughtful and well-meaning contribution.

John Cashman is erecting a large derrick at South Quincy for Garrity Bros.

Mr. Gordon, formerly of the Quincy cricket team, will play with the Hyde Parks this season.

Surprised.

William Elerick, Quincy's popular tenor soloist, was most pleasantly surprised on Wednesday evening, at Doble's hall by over one-hundred of his admirers, who presented him with an elegant French clock.

The festivities opened with dancing which continued until ten o'clock, when an adjournment was made to the banquet hall for refreshments. Here it was that Mr. R. C. Allen made the presentation speech, which so overcome Mr. Elerick that he was unable to utter a word and was finally obliged to express his appreciation in a song. This was followed by reading and singing by those present, after which dancing was resumed until midnight when after eating another supper dancing was again continued until 2.30 o'clock.

This was a surprise to Mr. Elerick in more ways than one, as he had been led to believe the surprise was for some other party and he had worked hard to have a large party present and to raise the necessary funds.

WOLLASTON.

The large grass fire on Third Hill, early Thursday evening, made a brilliant illumination.

A. L. Baker, Wollaston, has moved his office from the Taylor building to the Perry building.

The Wollaston Unitarian Ladies' Aid Society will meet Wednesday, April 8, with Mrs. E. F. Taylor, Hancock St.

Several of the Wollaston young ladies gave an impromptu whist party and hop at Perry's hall, Thursday evening. There was about eighteen couples present.

As there was not a quorum present at the annual meeting of the Wollaston Land Company, held in Boston, on Wednesday, the meeting was adjourned to meet in one year from date.

Miss R. Lillian Pinkham conducted the last meeting of the Elliot club, Wollaston, which met on Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. A. A. Lincoln. Mythology was discussed and was illustrated by tableaux representing several of the most important Greek gods and godesses.

The Wollaston W. C. T. U. will be represented at the Norfolk County Convention which will be held at Walpole on Wednesday, April 8.

The young people connected with the Wollaston Unitarian Society to the number of about thirty couples had a hop in Perry's hall Thursday afternoon.

There was a union service at the Wollaston Baptist church on Fast day. Rev. Preston Gurney preached, taking for his text, St. Mark IX, the 28th and 29th verses. And when He was come into the house, His disciples asked him privately, "Why could we not cast Him out?" And He said unto them, "This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting."

Large congregations attended the Easter service at the Wollaston churches. The floral decorations were very elaborate, more so than those of past years.

There was no special musical programme at the morning services of the Congregational, Methodist, and Baptists churches.

Concerts were held at the three churches named in the afternoon and evening, and attracted large audiences.

At the morning service of the Unitarian society there was a special musical programme. The pastor, Rev. W. S. Key, took for his subject, "The True Significance of Easter."

Rev. Edward A. Robinson of the Congregational church preached from the twentieth chapter of St. John, the last clause of the twentieth verse. "Then were the desciples glad, when they saw the Lord."

Rev. Preston Gurney of the Baptist church found his text in John XX, twenty-fifth verse:

"The other disciples therefore said unto him, 'We have seen the Lord.' But he said unto them, 'Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.'" There was a baptismal service in the evening.

Rev. Luther Freeman took for his text Luke XXIV, sixth verse: "He is not here, but is risen; remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee."

The order of the Golden Lion was to have instituted a lodge in Wollaston, Tuesday evening. Owing to a lack of applicants the meeting was adjourned.

The Sherman and Nickerson Land Company of Boston and Wollaston have put up a large sign, twenty by seven feet, at the corner of Beale street and Standish avenue.

A very unique feature of the Easter service at the Unitarian church, Wollaston, last Sunday was the distribution of a very pretty Easter card folded in three. On one fold were Easter lilies; on another the words, Unitarian church, Wollaston Heights; Easter greetings, with the autographed signature of W. S. Key, pastor, and on the third, passages of the Scripture bearing on the resurrection. The interior contained words and music of a very pretty Easter carol composed for the occasion, and which was sung by the congregation. The children of the Sunday school sang several pretty carols, and Mrs. Frank Page sang a solo. Mr. Key gave an address on the Resurrection and Easter Sunday. There was a beautiful display of flowers, including a tall cross gracefully entwined with ivy.

Conundrum T.

The Whatsoever Ten, King's Daughters of Wollaston gave a unique entertainment in Perry's hall, Wednesday evening. The entertainment was in the shape of a conundrum tea, followed by instrumental and vocal selections, and readings. Mr. Litchfield favored the company with three vocal solos; Mr. Dickey with a solo on a cornet; Miss Howard read Whittier's last poem "The Captain's Well;" a piano solo by Mr. Fairbanks; and an instrumental trio by Miss Prescott, Mr. Proctor and Mr. Quimby.

As Mr. F. J. Perry gave the use of the hall the "Ten"—Mrs. F. J. Pendleton, Miss Gifford, Miss Godfrey, Miss Prescott, Miss Howard, Miss Kolb, Miss Roberts, Miss Foster and Mrs. H. H. Kent,—netted forty dollars from their entertainment. The menu:

Survivors of '49.

In the autumn of 1849 the ship Civilian sailed from Boston with about sixty New Englanders in search of riches in California. Fast day the few survivors were entertained by Mr. Josiah Hayward at his residence, Boston Highlands. Mr. W. G. Prescott of this city was one of the number.

About 800 granite employes of Milford are out awaiting an adjustment of claims. The union demanded some months ago 33½ cents per hour for 53 hours' work in the week. April 1 was the time they desired this to go into effect, but the manufacturers paid no attention to the demand.

☞ There will be a meeting of the King's Daughters and Sons, April 8, at Park street church. Mrs. Isabella C. Davis and Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson will be present; members of the original circle of the Central council, New York. Afternoon at 2; evening at 7.30 o'clock.

WINDOW SHADES

At best are not particularly ornamental, but rather a disfigurement to the well-furnished room. It has long been a study to remedy this and bring out a shade that would contribute to the room's furnishing, and still not be a conspicuous detail of the completed whole. We have this week opened three cases of

Damask Hollands,

One of the first shipments to this country of a new article, and a novelty in this line. The effect is similar to the self-colored wall hangings now so popular, a delicately outlined figure appearing on a ground of same color. A beautiful cream tint and a deeper buff are the only colors they are made in at present. We feel confident these goods will meet with popular favor, and invite house furnishers to an inspection.

We have some novelties in Usages of Electricity.

The usages to which electricity is applied is legion. One of the latest is its use for drilling granite. The apparatus, which is controlled by the Edison General Electric Co., being known as the Marvin system, invented by H. C. Marvin, a young man about 27 years of age. Heretofore this work has been done by steam drills which would drill not over two inches per minute and rarely that. With the electric drill, four inches per minute are drilled in the hardest of granite.

An exhibition of the workings of this wonderful machine was given last week Friday, at the quarry of Churchill & Hitchcock, by the Edison Company, the machine being operated by its inventor, in the presence of a large number of well known granite men, who were more than pleased at its workings.

Among those present at the exhibition were:—Sidney B. Payne, E. A. Todd, A. T. Starkey, A. B. Bush, W. H. Austin, George F. Steele, W. G. Spear and Charles Pierce of the Edison Company: William A. Schlesinger a mining expert; George H. Webb of Worcester; Theodore Hardwick, John Q. A. Field, Peter Fallon, M. P. Wright, Thomas Burke, J. F. Desmond, John McGilvray, Thomas McDonnell Chas. Wilson, Louis Dell, Henry McGrath, Wm. Mitchell, Wellington Mitchell, C. H. Newcomb and Wesley Fuller, all well-known granite men; W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., George A. Voorhees, superintendent of Quincy Electric Light and Power Co., George Safford, A. G. Durgin, John H. Dinegan, and B. J. Weeks, superintendent of the Quincy & Boston Street Railway.

Parish Meeting.

The adjourned parish meeting of the First church was held Monday evening when the remaining business was transacted.

It was voted to raise $4142 by taxation on the pews to defray current expenses for the coming year. The following committees were also appointed:

Flowers,—Miss Bessie Pratt, Miss Georgianna Lane, Mrs. Caroline C. Faxon, Miss Alice Emery, Miss Flora Underwood, Mr. John O. Hall, Jr.

Music,—Mr. Walter M. Packard, Dr C. W. Garey, Miss Mabel A. Shaw.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of Christ's church was held Monday evening, with Rev. H. Evan Cotton as moderator and William P. Martin secretary. The records of the last annual meeting were read and approved, and the reports of the secretary, treasurer and finance committee read and accepted. The following officers were then elected:

Senior Warden,—J. Francis Hayward.
Junior Warden,—Elisha Packard.
Clerk,—Charles F. Brown.
Treasurer,—Weston W. Osborne.

Vestrymen; William Amory, Zenas S. Arnold, Sigourney Butler, Frank F. Crane, John R. Graham, Frederick L. Jones, William P. Martin, Weston W. Osborne, J. E. Sewall, John E. Sprague.

Delegates to the Diocesan convention which will be held in May, at Trinity church, Boston; Zenas S. Arnold, Elisha Packard, George H. Brown.

It may not be generally known, but this is the third oldest Episcopal parish in the State.

Small Assessments Advisable.

The Lynn Item speaking editorially on sewerage assessments says:

"There is no special reason why the sewerage department should be self supporting. There are plenty of departments that do not pay their way, and were never expected to. The health of the city as a whole is of sufficient importance for the city to pay the entire cost of construction and maintenance. That the abutters shall however, pay a part of the expense has come to be recognized as quite proper, and few object to it. The law overrules the objection, and therefore it cannot be considered. The rate at which abutters can enter the sewers is a fair one. Other cities may demand higher tolls, but other cities have not so many small homesteads as Lynn. The policy here has always been to encourage people to acquire real estate and improve their small holdings. In his reports the city engineer has favored an increase, even to the extent of an area assessment, if that is the right term to use. But while it is only natural that he should desire to increase the earnings of his department, and quite commendable to be sure, we cannot agree with him that the plan would be either just or wise. A careful consensus of opinion of men who are interested in the progress of our city discovers a strong feeling of opposition to the proposed ordinance calling for an increased drainage assessment. It is well enough as it is, for the present at least."

The Dedham Transcript is doing a commendable work for that town in obtaining light as to sidewalk building and repairing, the materials, cost, etc. Dedham probably is not any worse than many other places, but sidewalks seem to be something which towns in particular and many of the cities wofully neglect. There is a proposition before Dedham voters to make a large loan for sidewalks, which the present condition of her finances would seem to warrant.

Some argue that the town cannot afford to improve them, but a progressive citizen rightly says: "The truth is, the town cannot afford to have them remain in their present condition. I certainly hope that our citizens will take immediate steps toward securing an improvement in this direction. The extra expenses which your proposed loan would entail ought not to frighten any one."

Did it Ever Occur to You?

That the city of Quincy has ordinances.

That several of these amount to little.

That one of these concerns the grade of cellars.

That the approval of the Commissioner should always be obtained.

That last year over one hundred houses were built and not one-half obtained permits.

That public conveyances should be conspiciously numbered, and

That the rate of fares should be posted inside each carriage.

That all wagons for the collection of junk must be licensed.

That dealers in gunpowder should so state on sign over door.

That some amendments to ordinance are not in force.

That they have never been published as required.

That the salaries of firemen and some officials are affected by these.

That few awnings fulfil the requirements.

That other points might be raised.

That Spring is near.

That the grounds will soon require attention.

That the assessors would like to see everything neat and tidy six weeks from now.

That all improvements will be noted and estates taxed accordingly.

That dog licenses should soon be renewed.

That there are over 1000 dogs in this city.

That the city is too lenient in enforcing the law against unlicensed dogs.

That when the warrant is given the officer it instructs him to do a certaian thing, but

That he is generally told to do otherwise.

That that is one way of doing business.

That the price is 5½, however.

That this is by agreement of the local association.

That it may soon be more.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, April 1, 1891.

Next week Wednesday a hearing will be given by the Committee on Water Supply on the petition of the Mayor of Quincy, taken from the files of last year, for a law to allow the city to supply itself with water.

A resolution has been reported from the Railroad Committee, which will probably be passed in some form or other, urging Congress to take action for automatic couplers and train brakes for freight trains. Statistics show that thousands of railroad employes are killed and wounded every year and that a large proportion of the accidents might be avoided by the use of such safety appliances.

By vote of 172 to 4 the House has agreed to the constitutional amendment to abolish the property qualification of the Governor.

Long hearings have been given by the Committee on Public Health on the matter of arsenic in articles of common use, especially in wall paper. Here in Boston quite a local excitement has been raised on the matter and the names of prominent people who have suffered from arsenical poisoning personally or in their families have been published in the daily press. In behalf of the defence, manufacturers have come from New York who have said that this whole excitement is a "Boston fad." But it is hardly that, I think. I have seen a letter to Representative Thurston from Col. E. H. Gilbert of Ware, telling how his own sister was poisoned from the presence of arsenic in wall paper. Evidence to this point seems too wide and too direct to be overlooked and it is likely that something will be done to prevent the excessive use of this poison in articles which come close into the daily life of the people.

A humorous occurrence is to be reported. For many years a bust in Doric hall (the main entrance of the State House) has been labeled "Samuel Adams," but there was so much doubt about the genuineness of the inscription that a commission consisting of Edward G. Porter, Samuel Greene and John C. Ropes, all of them competent men, was appointed to make a thorough inquiry. They have reported to Gov. Russell that there is no evidence whatever that it is a bust of Samuel Adams, but it is an exact copy of a bust of Washington in Christ church in Boston of undoubted authenticity and there is another copy in Philadelphia which has always been known as Washington's. So all the veneration which has been lavished upon Samuel Adams proves to have been misplaced.

Once more the woman suffragists have been defeated. This year they elected to have their bill reported in the Senate, instead of in the House as their custom has been, but the result has been no more encouraging. Including pairs, there were 12 yeas to 25 nays. This was almost exactly the proportion by which the House defeated the bill last year, but it is a larger adverse vote to the suffragists than they have usually had.

Legislation against the car stove is still further contemplated. After consultation with the railroad commissioners and with the railroad managers most interested, the Railroad Committee has reported a bill to forbid the use of car stoves or heaters after Nov. 1, 1892. This gives the roads this summer and next summer in which to make the changes, for the alterations in the cars must be made in summer time.

Tuesday afternoon the House took up again the bill to compel the sale at public auction of new issues of railroad stock when the market price is above 110. The bill had been admitted by 111 to 56, but it was refused a third reading by 92 to 114, including the twenty pairs. While there is no doubt that railroad influence was exerted against the bill, yet the vote does not prove, so far as I can judge, that the Legislature is so subservient to the railroads.

The Senate has defeated the bill for the assay and inspection of liquors, which was agreed to by the liquor interests and by the temperence people, for a wonder. It was said to be in the interest of the sale of pure liquor, and doubtless was so, but there was a feeling that it would greatly increase liquor selling by druggists and so it was defeated.

A contest seems inevitable over the bill to compel the registration of doctors and the opponents have scored the first run, for the bill has been sent back to the Committee on the point of order that it requires the registration of facts which do not pertain to the practice of medicine.

By 57 to 81 the House defeated the bill to make the daily hours of labor of railroad employes ten within eleven consecutive hours.

Wednesday afternoon an attempt was made to reconsider the rejection of the bill for the sale of new railroad stock at public auction, but it failed by a vote of 89 to 109.

The Labor Committee is unanimously in favor of a bill to make eight hours a legal day's work for all laborers, workmen and mechanics in the employ of the State, county, city or town, and propose to have the new arrangement take effect Jan. 1, 1892. But they have reported unanimously against a Saturday half-holiday and against legislating that the hours of labor for women and minors in mechanical and manufacturing establishments shall not be more than fifty-six in a week. People all over the State seem to wake up on the matter of factory legislation and on Wednesday many petitions were presented from Worcester, Holyoke, Pittsfield, Webster, Lowell and other places against any further reduction in the hours of labor for factories.

Both branches have voted to send a sub-committee of the Committee on Federal Relations to Chicago in order to learn what must be done for a suitable representation of the State at the World's fair. It was found to be impossible to get the necessary material at home. RULE.

Josiah Quincy.

The following excellent pen sketch of our able and distinguished townsman we find in the Clinton Courant:

"The leader on the democratic side of the House is Josiah Quincy, of the third generation of this historic name; he was born in Quincy, in 1859 and is therefore in his 32d year; he is a lawyer, and in 1888 was the candidate of his party for Congress, in his district; he was a member of the State House of Representatives in '87 and '88 and again in '90, and is now serving his fourth term, being placed upon the committees on Rules and Cities; he has been occasionally called to fill the speaker's chair, temporarily, where he has discharged the duties of a presiding officer with marked ability. Mr. Quincy does not boast of aldermanic proportions but is above the medium height; as a speaker he is logical and forcible without being demonstrative; his voice is smooth and clear possessing peculiar modulations, which attract the attention of his hearers; he rarely if ever uses gestures and not infrequently rests his left hand upon the back of a chair while he talks; he begins his remarks without prelude and concludes when he is done; he never smiles without cause, and never frowns with cause. Mr. Quincy is strictly devoted to his plans and business which leave him little time or opportunity for converse on other topics; but this fact does not preclude his ability to be genial and communicative; he acts and votes on his personal judgment, and occasionally deviates from what is recognized as the average democratic sentiment; but by his clear brain and adroit management he commands the respect and homage of his party associates."

For the Patriot.

Sympathy and Kindness.

A very pleasant feature in connection with Easter observance at Rev. Mr. Norton's church, on Sunday last, was, I understand, that of sending Easter lilies or other beautiful flowers to those who, through sickness, age or infirmity, were unable to be present.

I do not know to what extent the custom has prevailed in this or other churches in Quincy. However that may be, it is most praiseworthy. What can be more pleasing to the sick, the aged or the infirm than unexpectedly to receive at such a time so simple yet so beautiful and tender a message of love and sympathy? This is certainly imitating the example of Him who went about doing good. Let us have more of this kind of Christianity.

A great fault with many churches is that they fail to reach the people for want of sympathy and kindness. There is apt to be, unconsciously perhaps, too much selfishness and a lack of kindly feeling shown. This has estranged many who might be active and useful church members but who are in a large sense non-church-goers.

I have no desire to praise unduly any particular church, but I am glad to know that we have at least one church in Quincy which has, under the leadership of its able, eloquent and earnest pastor, gained the good-will and won the hearts of a very large number of our people, and it is such acts as that mentioned which tend to enlarge its sphere of usefulness and strengthen its hold upon the minds of the people. Success to its every effort! OBSERVER.

Foresters' Ball.

The Coliseum was a scene of splendor Tuesday evening, the occasion being the first annual concert and ball of Quincy Court, No. 76, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters.

Carriages containing the fair participants and their escorts began to arrive shortly after 7 o'clock, and as they were ushered into the hall by the efficient reception committee, many were the looks of surprise at the manner in which the barn-like ball room had been transformed into a scene of beauty, by the yards of red, white and blue bunting.

His Honor Mayor Fairbanks and daughter were among the early arrivals and were soon followed by many of the prominent city officials and members of kindred societies from far and near. These were the especial care of the reception committee who left nothing undone for their comfort and enjoyment during the entire evening.

At 8.30 the Germania orchestra commenced the promenade concert which lasted until after 9 o'clock. Then came the grand march, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dinegan, who were followed by Mayor and Miss Fairbanks, Ex-Mayor Porter and Mrs. S. M. Donovan and others to the number of one hundred and fifty. The march was made a very brilliant affair by two calcium lights which threw colored lights upon the throng as they marched round the hall.

The order of some twenty numbers was entered into and continued until midnight when Caterer Nash served one of his tempting banquets in the upper hall. This over dancing was again resumed.

Among the interesting spectators of the grand march were Rev. Fathers Frigugletti and Cuffe.

Quincy Court in their first annual have achieved a success that will insure them a large party at their second annual, for without exception it was one of the pleasantest occasion that has taken place in this city for many a day.

Relief Corps Masquerade.

A very successful bal masque was held at Hancock hall, Friday evening, under the auspices of Paul Revere, W. R. C.

The variegated costumes were marked by originality and elegance, with just enough grotesque costumes in the throng of masqueraders to give a charming kaleidoscopic effect to the animated picture. Altogether the carnival was a fine success and fully met the expectations of the assemblage, which comprised many well-known people of Quincy and neighboring towns.

The floor was in charge of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, who appeared in three different costumes during the evening, the first being as a domino, then as a nightcap and lastly as a school girl. Miss Furnald was assisted by Mrs. Emma Marnock and Mrs. Alice Litchfield.

The social hop of the Woman's Relief Corp Fast night was well attended as usual, and an enjoyable party. Another will be held soon.

Co-operative Bank Nominations.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank held a meeting Wednesday evening and nominated these officers:

President,—Dr. W. L. Faxon.
Vice President,—Dr. J. F. Welch.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Richard D. Chase.
Directors,—Warren W. Adams, Horace F. Spear, John F. Merrill, Albert Keating, Theophilus King, Joseph W. Dennen, John Evans, George H. Field, Andrew Milne, James Thompson, W. Walter Ewell, Thomas F. Burke, Osborne Rogers, Frank E. Hall, William S. Williams.
Auditors,—Horace B. Spear, Weston W. Osborne, Wilson Marsh.

$600 was sold for 20 cents and $850 for 15 cents.

Its English, You Know.

Dr. Everett's idea that a man is as well justified in announcing himself a candidate for a political office as for the ministry, the bar or medicine upsets the popular idea that the office should always seek the man, but the Quincy schoolmaster is right just the same. Down South when a man aspires to an office in the gift of the people he advertises his wishes in the newspapers. Perhaps we may adopt that plan of campaign some day.—Herald.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy.

Norfolk Conference.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Norfolk Conference Sunday School Society was held in Randolph, Tuesday, with the First Congregational church. It was very largely attended.

Rev. W. H. Bolstor of South Weymouth, delivered the address at the morning service on "Lesson Preparations its Method, Aim and Result." Discussion followed, participated in by Rev. Messrs. Balcom of Rockland, Warfield of Brockton, and Messrs. C. W. Carter of Quincy and Fearing of Braintree.

The nominating committee presented a list of officers for the ensuing year as follows: Secretary, Frank A. Arnold, Rockland; executive committee, C. W. Carter, Quincy; Rev. H. C. Alvord, South Weymouth; J. O. Sanborn, Hingham; Deacon Leonard Belcher, Holbrook.

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"The Senator" has attracted large audiences the present week, and the three weeks engagement promises to be even more brilliant than the past. Mr. William H. Crane, in the character is, if possible, better than on former occasions. Miss Hattie Russell as the susceptible widow, is capital, and the whole support is good. The business man, the broker, the politician and the ladies are all interested in "The Senator." The play will continue two weeks longer.

Boston Museum.

The new play by Jerome K. Jerome "New Lamps for Old" is a very funny three act farce, founded on the question "Is Marriage a Failure?" Since its first presentation Monday night at the Museum its success has been assured and during the week has delighted large audiences. "New Lamps for Old" preceded by "The Open Gate" a short romantic play, which serves the purpose of making the fun of the second play more enjoyable and laughable.

Won by Proxy.

The Herald prints the following despatch from Brockton:

A Campello young man recently met a handsome young woman, with whom he fell deeply in love.

Being bashful, he asked a friend if he would not propose for him, and, if successful, he would pay $100 for his friend's services. The friend succeeded in making the proposal, and the young man was accepted.

The marriage took place recently, and the friend asked for his $100, but the young husband refused to pay.

The claim has been placed in the hands of a lawyer for collection."

Fresh To-Day

AND

Dry To-Morrow.

A complaint often made about cakes and breads. This "peculiar dryness" is caused by the ammonia or alum in the baking powder.

The leavening power of Cleveland's Baking Powder is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, and food raised with it keeps moist and fresh for days.

Cleveland's is the only baking powder having this quality.

Signs of Spring.

GEORGIA BAZOO.

There's a kind of curious, lazy, lullin' feelin' in the breeze,
An' the early buds are bendin' 'neath the weight of honey bees;
The downy doves are matin' in the woodlands where the stream
Is a clear an' shin'n' mirror where the sunbeams love to dream.

You can see the buds a-swellin' on the branches once so bare,
An' the cattle—they are grazin' where the tender blades appear;
You can hear the birds a-chirpin' in their nests or on the wing,
But—"Inclosed please find a poem," is the surest sign o'spring!

Household Receipts.

MASHED POTATOES. Pare your potatoes very thin, and let them lie in cold water one hour. Put them into boiling water slightly salted, and boil steadily until you can pierce them with a fork; then pour off the water, sprinkle them lightly with salt, and add, to one dozen medium-sized potatoes, a piece of butter the size of a hen's egg; mash them with a wire masher, add half a cupful of hot cream, and beat them until very light and white.

STEAMED CORNED BREAD. Put two cups of cornmeal into a bowl, add a teaspoonful of salt. Dissolve half-teaspoonful soda in a tablespoonful of warm water, and add to it half-cup of molasses. Add this to the cornmeal, and then add sufficient sour milk, not quite a pint, to make the batter so that it will drop from the spoon. Put this into a well-greased mold. Put on the lid and steam it for four hours; then remove the lid and bake it for thirty minutes.

ABOUT PIES. When you take pies from the oven, press the crust down upon the filling to insure it from drying, as it will if the air is allowed to remain there. The pie will not be soggy, but will keep more moist in consequence.

In buying cooked lobsters remember that a lobster that was alive when thrown into the boiler will have the tail curled up to the body, while one that was dead has the tail extended.

By rubbing with a flannel dipped in whiting, the brown discolorations may be taken off cups which have been used for baking.

Ordinary soup stock should be made from the collection of bones left over from the table; for instance, the bones of roasted beef, mutton, veal and chicken should be saved in a cool place and boiled twice a week. This stock will not make clear soup, but can be used for tomato or cream soups.

Very few householders know anything about the respective qualities of red ash and white ash coal. In many small cities white ash is all that can be had. For range use, however, a good red ash coal gives out more heat and is more economical than anything else. The cook does not like it so well if she is inclined to be indolent, because it does not burn up so rapidly as white ash coal, and cannot be started so quickly, but when it is once started and burning its lasting powers are surprising.

—A woman who is a passionate lover of flowers, and, being city bred, regards them as a luxury, says that after wearing roses an entire evening she is enabled to bring them to life again by a hot-water bath. When she finds that from any cause whatever the blossoms droop and threaten an early death, she clips the stems, and, by letting the stalks rest for a while in steaming water, finds every leaf revive and freshen under the process.

—Miss Ella Ewing of Scotland County, Mo., is eighteen years old, eight feet high, and she weighs 245 pounds without carrying an ounce of surplus flesh. When she was born Ella tipped the beam at 7 1-2 pounds. She is said to be the belle of Scotland county, and a New York reporter, who saw her recently as she passed through the metropolis on her way to Europe, testifies that she is "exceedingly pretty." Her feet are eighteen inches long.

—In Pawtucket, R. I., recently, Frank Mohan, 14 years old, was playing with a toy balloon whistle. He sucked it into his throat. Efforts to relieve him proved unavailing, and the lad died a few hours later. The rubber bag was found to have been carried to the right lung.

☞Warrants have been issued for the arrest of all the officers and directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, from president down, who have been held responsible by the coroner's jury for the deaths of the victims of the recent Harlem tunnel disaster.

Anecdotes.

Teacher (to new pupil)—"What is your last name my little man?"

New Pupil—"Tommy."

Teacher—"What is your full name?"

New Pupil—"Tommy Jones."

Teacher—"Then Jones is your last name?"

Tommy—"No, it isn't. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other for a month afterward."

"I hear the Bradley's are going South this winter. I thought they'd lost all their money?"

"They have. That's the reason they are going. They can wear their summer clothes all winter, you know."

Mrs. De Flat—"What is that horrid smell?"

Mr. De Flat—"I judge from the odor that it's one of those odorless oil stoves."

Guest at Hotel—"How did you persuade your waiter to feed the baby?"

Fond mother—"Oh, I feed the waiter."

Rev. Peter Swunn—"Well, my dear, I have made eleven hearts beat happily tonight; I have married five couples."

Mrs. Swunn:—"Eleven? How can that be five couples?"

Mr. Swunn:—"Oh, you haven't counted me in; I received $10 from each bridegroom."

"Oh, Aunty, Harry has a tooth!" shouted little Gertie, "and there is another one coming." Then continuing and counting. "And after that he will get another, and then (pausing and recollecting her own experience) he can have one pulled."

Ladies, life will be a continual watermelon picnic and clambake holiday if you will use Brussels, the no rosin soap, for all household purposes.

Woman's C. T. Union.

The meeting of the W. C. T. U. Schools of Method for Scientific Temperance Instruction, in the Bromfield street church, Boston, Friday March 27, was a delightful success. At an early hour the commodious building was well filled and after a short time spent in devotional exercises, the President, Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, called the meeting to order, and in a short and spirited address, stated the object of the meeting and gave the topic:

Why should the enforcement of our temperance education law, now be the leading line of our temperance work? and what steps must be taken to secure such enforcement? The discussion which followed, under the leadership of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt was highly interesting.

At the suggestion of Mrs. Fessenden, the audience resolved itself into an imaginary school board giving a hearing to the local superintendent of this work, for better enforcement of the temperance educational law. The local superintendent, Mrs. Mary E. Newton (Mass. Superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction) accompanied by Mrs. E. B. Greene, representing the Total Abstinence Society. Every objection ever made by a school board to the proper pursuit of this study, were presented by the members, and pertinently answered by the petitioners and Mrs. Mary H. Hunt. This object lesson was highly entertaining as well as very instructive.

The afternoon session was, if possible, of still greater interest. And the discussion led by Mrs. Hunt upon the topic, "What shall be done when the school board delays action?" was very helpful to the local workers in the different departments. Following this discussion the audience again resolved itself into a supposed school board convinced that public sentiment demands a better enforcement of the law, and received a representative committee in behalf of the same. Questions on course of study, books, methods, &c., were asked by members of the board and ably answered by Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Greene and Mrs. Swallow.

Through the able and persistent efforts of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, aided by members of the W. C. T. U. in state, county and local unions, compulsory temperance education laws have been secured in thirty-three States and all the territories. Eighty-two towns and six states were represented at this meeting.

Boston Amusements.

Globe Theatre.

Mr. Richard Mansfield, returns to Boston, Monday, and will appear for a brief engagement at the Globe Theatre, in "Beau Brummell" one of Mr. Clyde Fitch's best works. There is no actor on the stage today in whom there is such an interest felt as there is in Mr. Mansfield, for he is ambitious, and earnest in his work. "Beau Brummell" is undoubtedly his latest and greatest success. On Wednesday afternoon at a special matinee "Prince Karl" will be presented. Seats are now on sale for the engagement.

Boston Theatre.

Mr. H. A. McGlenen, the popular business man of the Boston Theatre, is to have his annual benefit Monday night, when that laughable play "A Midnight Bell" will be presented. Let us all rally around friend McGlenen, Monday night, and give him an overflowing house. "A Midnight Bell" will be presented for two weeks and then give way to "The Soudan." No play presented in Boston, has pictured rural country life and people with so much realism and healthful fun as "A Midnight Bell" and its revival will be warmly welcomed.

Growth of a Nickel.

Some time ago the Ladies' Aid Society agreed to invest a nickel in some kind of article, and sell it at a profit and reinvest it in something else, and so on, to speculate on this capital for two weeks and see how much each one could make. One lady on the same evening of the meeting bought a cabbage with her nickel. She carried it home and sold half of it to her neighbor for a nickel. She invested that in vinegar and pickled the remaining half and sold the pickle for twenty-five cents. She then bought twenty cents' worth of cloth and a spool of thread and made it up into three aprons, which she sold for twenty-five cents each, and took the seventy-five cents and bought molasses, and gave a candy pulling to the children, making them pay ten cents a plate for the candy. The molasses made twenty-one plates of candy, so she made $2.10 on the nickel in two weeks' time. How money will grow if properly used!—Reading Telegram.

The Scotch-Irish Congress.

The third annual Congress of the Scotch Irish people of America will be held in Louisville, Kentucky, from May the 14th to the 17th, next. The Congress at Pittsburgh, Pa., last year was attended by President Harrison and his Cabinet, besides hundreds of other distinguished men. The gathering this year will be still more notable. It will assemble the best elements of the race, from all parts of the United States and British America.

The objects of the society are historical, educational and social. It is strictly nonpartisan and non-sectarian. The only requisites for membership are Scotch-Irish blood, in any degree, good character, and nominal dues, for which members receive the valuable historical works issued by the society.

The South,

By some, is thought to be overestimated as the coming industrial center. This may be true of some localities, but when you go to Bristol, Virginia and Tennessee, and find five railroads already built and under actual construction, and three of these roads connected with coal and coke, and two with vast deposits of Bessemer iron ore, and all within two or three hours haul of each other, with immense virgin forest of almost every variety of timber. You can make no mistake in such a place, whether it be north, south, east or west. It must come to the front. Bristol is not on paper, she now has everything enjoyed by most large cities except high taxes. See advertisement in another column.

PALPITATION OF THE HEART. An excessive palpitation of the heart can always be arrested by bending double, with the head down and the arms pendant, so as to produce a temporary congestion of the upper part of the body. If the respiratory movements be suspended during this action the effect will be only the more rapid.

☞"Tired and cross" is a common expression, and most of us know what it means. A friend of mine, a most agreeable woman, says that when she finds herself getting "tired and cross," she takes a nap, a bath, a walk or a drive, goes to see some one whose walk in life is less pleasant than her own—does anything different from the work that has tired and worried her. In this way she preserves health and temper, governs well her children, and keeps her entire household in a state of peace and happiness.

☞As the fly glides rapidly over a smooth surface every step presses out a supply of gum strong enough to give him a sure footing and to sustain him in safety if he halts. So strong is the cement that that upon one of his six feet is quite sufficient to sustain the weight of his whole body. But if he stands still the gum may dry up and harden quickly, and so securely fasten the traveler's foot as to make a sudden step snap the leg itself.

The Teachings of Science.

But very soon after being taken into the stomach the alcohol begins to be absorbed and carried to other organs, and it speedily reaches the brain. Free portions of it are retained there, and produce other effects to be described. Though alcohol is a narcotic, producing its more ordinary effects like other narcotics by its peculiar relations to the vital properties of the brain, yet unlike most of them it has chemical or mechanical effects upon the brain's structure. From the peculiar composition of this organ, and perhaps from its containing more moisture than other organs, a larger quantity of alcohol after its imbibition, is found in its substance than in other tissues of the body. By its great affinity for water it takes from the soft, delicate and moist tissue a portion of its moisture; and when the alcohol is free in quantity it takes the water to such an extent as sometimes to coagulate the jelly-like matter; but ordinarily it produces a slighter physical change in the brain's structure, but which nevertheless interferes with these minute motions which take place in the performance of proper functions.

The long continued use of quantities, not immediately so disastrous, produces various structural changes which are often remarkably perceptible, and in chronic alcoholic disease hardening of the brain structure, increase of the connective tissue with diminution of the proper brain cells, thickening of the membranes and effusions of serus fluid into the ventricles or cavities, are among the appearances often found. All these changes are usually accompanied with more or less inflammatory and other degenerate processes, with a lowering and preversion of function and with premature decay of all mental and physical powers. But the more common and therefore more important effects of alcohol upon the brain, usually produced by smaller quantities than cause the gross chemical and mechanical effects just referred to, are produced by its narcotic or vital, rather than its chemical or physical properties. Other narcotics, such as morphine, atropine, nicotine, prussic acid, produce their effects independently of any recognized chemical or physical action, and alcohol produces its more ordinary effects by properties which do not produce these gross changes. The special cause of such effects, the particular change produced in the brain and nerves, is not in all cases known. But the fact is known that changes in the vital conditions and actions of these important organs do occur, and when enough of the poison is taken all action is arrested and death is produced, although no gross changes of composition and structure are discovered.

Without further attempts to explain the cause of the peculiar action of alcohol on the brain and nerves I shall endeavor to describe the leading phenomena which we see that it produces. Alcohol, chloroform, arsenic, opium, or any other narcotic or poisonous substance may be taken in such minute quantities as to produce very little or no perceptible effect. A single whiff of chloroform may make an impression upon the sense of smell without any further effects being noticeable. So a single sip of wine or a small quantity of brandy, as used in cooking, may impart a flavor and possible cultivate a taste, but without producing any other observed change in the organism. When, however, sufficient of any of the alcoholic liquids is taken to produce appreciable or more marked effects upon the brain and nerves four stages may be observed.

These stages shade off into each other and are determined by the quantity taken and the susceptibility and other conditions of the person. When a moderate quantity, as a glass or two of wine or of spirits and water is taken by one not much accustomed to the use of these articles a flush of nervous action is immediately experienced, and, as already stated, is chiefly conveyed from the stomach. There is usually an increased disposition to motion or to some form of action, a greater sensibility to some impressions and a more ready response to them. There is often, perhaps generally, a more rapid flow of ideas and more agreeable feelings are commonly experienced, and if there be a sense of fatigue it is apt to be relieved. A feeling of coldness, if existing, is abated, and by an impressiom made upon the nerves controlling the vessels of the surface, they become more expanded, more blood is brought to the skin, especially of the face, and increased external warmth is often perceived.

☞A New York physician, who has for several years been studying the relation of eye strain to headache, etc., in children, has published the result of his labors. He finds that cases of short sight, far sight and irregular sight often go unrecognized until the continued eye strain results in a chronic headache and lassitude, or even more serious nervous disorders. The most approved modern treatment in certain cases of headache is to order the use of spectacles.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

What is the Reason?

EMMA C. DOWD.

I told Hezekiah to tell Widow Gray
To tell Mother Brown, next door,
To tell Dicky Dwight, who goes that way,
To tell Deacon Barnes, at the store,
To tell the old stage-driver, Timothy Bean,
To come for me, sure, and in season;
But I've waited all day, and no stage have I seen;
Now what do you think is the reason?

For the Patriot.

The Lady of the Violets.

BY MISS WOLLASTON.

> "My Name is Love and I rule the World"
> —A Simple Truth.

"Esther! Come quick! Do you know her?" the speaker a lovely type of maidenhood of scarce sixteen summers, who was just from school at Laselle, and was spending her vacation at Mrs. Charlotte Canby's, in the companship of Esther Canby, the daughter.

Rose Allen, her schoolmate, was then sitting in her drawing-room window of the Canby's, and it was this something that excited her attention and quick exclamation.

Esther arose and hastened to the window.

"Isn't she one of the ton. Oh, my! what a stylish cart and what a skilful whip she has;" delightfully cries Rose and who was all eagerness for her companion's reply.

"Say, do you know her, Esther?"

"Yes and no," replied Esther, "only as the Lady of the Violets."

"Well that is singular. How long has she been in the place? "Tell me about her, won't you," coquettishly asked Rose.

"Well, I will tell you, Esther replies, "just to satisfy Miss Curiosity. What I know about this strange personage, what I can say is very little, though I should like to know more but cannot for the best of reasons. She is avoidably a stranger to us all, and now for the story.

Something like a year and a half ago she came in our midst to dwell in Fenn's cottage. You know right there on the cliff near the break water at Red Rocks. Fenn's was unoccupied for more than three seasons before this mysterious lady came, and then carpenters were set to work, painters make busy, and gardeners were kept diligently clearing up and beautifying the grounds and the whispers that went around Swampscott; Who is coming?

Her advent was simple, she came costumed in black, a perfect fit to her superb figure and that Madonna-like face which seemed to invite charity and love, right into our hearts, and with her was a sweet little girl and an aged lady.

"Perhaps a widow," was the oft repeated remark, "and has come for the benefit that the sea air might give to mind and body—but none the wiser. We came to know her by the spray of English violets she wore—she was never without them.

Every Sunday found her in the pew of the little chapel on the hill, and it was said her contributions were large. If there were any sick among the poor she would send groceries and luxuries from her own table, and then come herself to administer to their feeble wants, and give a word of cheer and love. Who were they to thank? only the Lady of the Violets So it was counted bad taste to know further about her. Suffice it to be she was good and kind, that was enough to lift their poor hearts to earth's emphyrean.

"Do you not have any inclination to know more about her?" asked Rose.

"I did at first," replied Esther, "but that has since wore off. I am contented now to know her as she is."

"Does she not make any fashionable calls," asked Rose.

"Well, what an interest you take in her," laughingly replies Esther, and then to answer her. "No, only when assistance is needed, then she comes and goes unasked like an angel of mercy. "Let me help you," she will say, then will come a bountiful supply of good things.

Why, when poor Mr. Rogers fell from the staging, in building the Herrick house, and fractured his thigh, besides a broken leg, she with her own dear hand splintered it until a physican came and properly attended him; then she paid all bills. This is her goodness shown—but never her name. Yes, she would have it so.

Well, do you know Esther, I cannot understand. I should think she would want those to know who they are to thank emphatically," answered Rose; and then hastily asks: "Did you ever have any words with her, Esther?

Except only the day's greetings, and her pleasant "I hope you are well," mildly spoke Esther; and then she moved away from the window, showing she was tired of the subject. But Rose the impatient little body still resumed by saying:

"Do you think she will ever throw off this reserve?"

"Perhaps," carelessly replied Esther; and then the sound of a horse's brisk trot was heard.

"Here she comes again," cried Rose in ectasy and jumping from the chair. "I wish she would look this way I would bow. Yes I would, Esther. What does this mean she has reined up to the door?

"Oh you hightitity, keep calm. I will call Jane to wait on the door," and Esther rapidly went to the hall way and called: "Jane, go to the front gate at once," and then return to Rose, who had half concealed herself behind the draperies. There they both awaited breathlessly the meaning of this call. At last Jane returned.

"You here mum!"

"Yes, Jane! What is it?" excitedly answers Esther.

"Only this mum!" at the same time handing her a dainty visiting card. "At last the mystery explained," their anxious looks seemed to say, and they both hastily read—Mrs. Jack Gardner.

Staunton, Virginia.

The above cut represents Hotel Altemonte, a beautiful public house to be erected at Staunton, Virginia. It will stand on a lofty eminence in the midst of a beautiful park, commanding a range of the Blue Ridge mountains for hundreds of miles.

Staunton is situated in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley; at an altitude of 1,450 feet above sea level, and is very pleasant and healthy the year round. It is only six hours' ride from Washington, D. C.; at the junction of two large lines of railway, and being in the centre of rich iron ores, is attracting, at the present time, much attention from capitalists.

Miscellany.

Helen Kendall's Rosy Wrapper.

"Beautiful, beautiful, but perfectly useless!" exclaimed Helen Austin, as she lifted a cashmere wrapper from a box in which it had been packed, and shook out its soft folds.

It was beautiful, in truth. The ground was a lovely rose-color, over which meandered a delicate vine, with sprays of wild roses and buds of a deeper tint, and faint green leaves. A little, not too much soft lace finished the neck and sleeves, while one or two bows gave piquancy to the whole. It was a bridal present which had just come to Helen Austin on the day before her marriage.

"It is just like Cousin Mary," continued the bride-elect; "fine, dainty, exquisite; but it would be utterly out of harmony with my blacks and browns and grays. I could never wear it in the world."

"But, my dear, is there any law compelling you to wear only blacks and browns and grays?" asked Mrs. Lindley, the friend to whom she was showing it.

"Certainly there is; the law of fitness, of propriety. An elderly spinster who marries a doctor of divinity with four boys, keeps his house, and does her share of parish work, ought to be attired with becoming sobriety."

"But the colors would be so becoming to you!" pleaded her friend.

"Yes, I used to wear those colors in my young days, and if I were eighteen, or even twenty-eight, instead of forty-eight, as I am, it would be just the thing. But will you look at the label—'A Rainy day Wrapper!' Whatever does Cousin Mary mean?"

"Just what she says, Helen. She wants you to wear it in your new home to brighten the dull, rainy, depressing mornings for your husband and children."

"I thought Cousin Mary had a better sense of correspondence. Now, if I could ever bring myself to put on this dainty thing, it would be upon some cloudless Sunday morning in early June. I should want to sit upon the piazza, with the flowers blossoming and the birds singing, and the blue sky overhead, and everything in harmony. Even then, I'm sure I should feel like a brown sparrow in the feathers of a bird of paradise. A rainy-day wrapper, indeed! No, thank you. My gray one with the Persian trimming will do well enough for rainy days."

"My dear, you are wrong, believe me, and Cousin Mary is right She has lived in a household of brothers all her life, and knows, as I do, that the masculine eye delights in soft pretty colors. Men don't always know what it is that pleases them, but they are pleased with bright, cheerful colors in a woman's dress. You should wear the wrapper for the sake of your husband and boys."

"Oh, as for Dr. Kendall, the dear man—he is so absorbed in his studies that he would never know whether I was robed in sky blue, or grass green, or dandelion yellow or poppy red—bless him! As for Phil and Teddy, they are rampaging boys, too young to know, or care what anybody wears, while Max and Howard are young gentlemen of such fastidious tastes, I'm sure they'd laugh to see their new old mother tricked out like a young girl. No, my dear, I know my duty better."

"You are incorrigible."

"Not at all. I have simply thought out this whole question of clothes, as it concerns myself, and reduced it to an exact science. You see, with my complexion, I can't wear blues and greens; reds and yellows are out of the question for one of my mature years and my profession of 'pastoress'; purple I do not like; so there is nothing left but blacks and browns and grays, and I assure you I am fully equipped with them. I have run through the whole gamut, and can produce almost any shade of them from my wardrobe at a minute's notice."

"But what will you do with your wrapper?"

"Oh! I'll keep the lovely thing, and remember Cousin Mary, and delight my eyes with looking at it. It is a delight to the eye."

So the wrapper was folded away, and the next day it went with Helen Kendall to her new home. Time passed, and in the absorption of her new duties and fitting herself into her new place, the box and its contents were almost forgotten. One day, in making some changes, the box happened to be brought to light, and the wrapper was taken out to be put in some other place. Before it was disposed of, Helen was interrupted, and it lay upon a chair in her room all night. The next morning was dark and rainy. She was late, and in hurrying her dressing she remembered that her ordinary gray morning dress was out of repair. Hesitating a moment, her eyes caught sight of the card with "A rainy-day wrapper" on it. She smiled at the ridiculousness of wearing such a thing on such a morning; then, as she paused, a sudden inspiration came to her. "What if I should? I declare I'll do it!" she exclaimed, and in a spirit of mischief, she hastily threw it on. A glance in the mirror assured her that at forty-eight the color was still becoming to her clear, dark complexion and brown hair and eyes. But she went out and took her place at the table a little shamefacedly, it must be confessed.

"O mother, how pretty you look!" was the greeting of Teddy, the youngest, and privileged pet of the household, as he came around to give her the good-morning kiss.

"It's her pretty dress," commented outspoken Phil.

"Yes, I guess it is," said Teddy, surveying it critically. "It's so rosy. Where did you get it, mother?"

"I've had it ever since I came here, only I thought it was too gay for the mother of such big boys to wear."

"Oh, it isn't," protested Max, the eldest, a young man of twenty-one. "It's good to see one bright spot in this wretchedly dull morning I wish you would wear it every time it rains."

"'Making sunshine in a shady place,'" quoted Dr. Kendall mischievously, but looking at his wife meanwhile with admiring eyes.

It was a merry breakfast spite of the pouring rain outside; and after her husband and boys had separated to their several employments, Helen Kendall did some serious thinking. The boy's evident pleasure in the pretty wrapper was a revelation to her. Could it really make any difference to them how she was dressed? Was it not possible that perpetual browns and blacks and grays, even of different shades, might in time become monotonous and depressing? And especially upon a dull morning, when it was so easy to strike a minor key-note for the day? Neat she always was, with immaculate collars, and cuffs, and frills; but couldn't she add beauty to neatness sometimes? Could she not strengthen her influence over the boys by making herself more pleasing in their eyes? Yes, Cousin Mary and Mrs. Lindley were right. How blind she had been not to see it before? She would henceforth wear that wrapper whenever there should be occasion.

Occasions came in plenty. Once, when Teddy was sick, he asked, beseechingly, if his mother wouldn't put on that "rosy dress," and when she did he quieted down and went off into a refreshing sleep.

One morning before she left her room there was a tap at the door, and on opening it a crack, Howard whispered through: "Mother, won't you please put on your 'rosy wrapper' this morning?"

Wonderingly she complied, for it was a bright morning, and it had come to be understood that the garment was for dull days.

"I'm all out of sorts, mother," Howard explained; "got a desperate fit of the blues, and I thought a sight of that 'rosy wrapper' would do me good."

Happily, Helen was able to provide a more effectual remedy in her ready counsel and sympathy; still, she had no doubt the wrapper did its part in bringing sunshine back to the clouded face.

One time Dr. Brown was visiting them. He was an old and dear friend, and one whom Dr. Kendall was specially desirous to honor. In the morning her husband said to Helen:

"Don't you think dear, you had better put on your pretty dress this morning—that one with the roses all over it, I mean—the one you look so beautiful in, you know?

She put it on, feeling half-vexed and half amused, but the visitor was wholly charmed and was never tired of telling his friends afterwards what a lovely woman Mrs. Kendall was, and in what exquisite taste she dressed; hearing which in a roundabout way, she was fain to confess that the wrapper probably did all.

"Mother," said Phil, as he came in one day before supper, "George Benson and Harry White are coming over here this evening."

"Are they? All right. I shall be glad to see them."

Phil wiggled about, and twisted himself into all sorts of shapes on the arms and posts of his mother's chair, until she was convinced he had something on his mind.

"Can I do anything to help entertain them? I can set out a little spread of apples and nuts and cookies if you like. Will that do?"

"It isn't that!" Phil burst out. "It's—it's—say, mother, won't you wear your rosy dress this evening?"

"Why, Phil, that is only a wrapper for morning. It will hardly do for evening."

"Oh, yes it will! The boys won't know the difference.

"But why would you like me to wear it?"

"Because I was over to George Benson's yesterday, and his mother's new dress was on the sofa, and it was all bows and lace and fixings, and it was green or blue or some color—I don't know which; and George said, Wasn't it the prettiest dress I ever saw, and I said No, my mother has one ever so much prettier; and he said he didn't believe it, and I said for him to come over and see it himself—so won't you please wear it tonight, mother?"

Here was a situation, but Helen was equal to it. Her boy should not be put to shame and she promised him to wear the wrapper. Attired in it, with an extra bow or two pinned on, she did the honors for the admiring guests, and nobody but herself knew her secret terror lest some of the session, or of the session's wifes, should drop in and find her tricked out in such unseemly finery. But she had her reward. George Benson was heard to declare that the rosy dress was "a stunner," and Phil was triumphant.

This incident gave her food for further thought, and resulted in the purchase of a deep ruby wool, which she had made up as tastefully as possible for home afternoons and evenings. The boys often importune her to wear it to church or down town, but here she draws the line and stands firm. Her husband declares that she has grown ten years younger since her marriage, and she retorts that, if she is made to dress like a girl of twenty, she must be expected to act like one; but that she will keep her gaiety and giddiness for the home circle, and not expend it on the parish.

The rosy wrapper, like other mundane things, began to show signs of wear, and Helen was anxiously contriving how she could renovate it, when, upon the first anniversary of her wedding day, a package was put into her hands containing materials for another equally beautiful, and attached to it was a card bearing the inscription: "To mother, from her boys."—Louisville Christain Observer.

Eat Less as You Grow Older.

The majority of people eat about a third too much. The average American really dines three times a day, with his beefsteak breakfast, chops for lunch and roast beef at his six o'clock dinner. And he does it all at his peril, for this habit of overfeeding, especially of eating so much meat, is one of the provoking causes of so many sudden illnesses and so many premature deaths. Three meals a day of hearty food is exhausting to all the vital processes, and even the strongest succumb finally to this "wasteful and ridiculous excess. Americans are a nation of brain-workers, and cannot safely indulge in high living. High-thinking, or constant use of the brain in any direction, calls for a plain but nourishing diet. Brain-workers especially ought to live sparingly. Luxurious feeders require much exercise in the open air and freedom from the pressure on the brain.

For the aged, or even for those above fifty, luxurious living and over-eating are especially dangerous. As functional activity lessens with increasing years, the supply of food should be decreased accordingly. The hardiest races live on the simplest fare. Frugality in diet, that is, a minimum amount of the right quality, serves far more certainly to prolong life, insure health and well-being than a rich abundance and variety, which is accountable in a large measure for the ill-health and dissatisfaction of the present time.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Thrifty Housekeeper.

She takes note of the kitchen fire and closes up the dampers when she is not using it, and makes one fire do all the work it will at once. She saves her nice "drippings" and makes them serve in cooking instead of butter. She saves all the odds and ends of bread and meat left over from meals and works them up into appetizing and nutritious dishes, instead of throwing them away. Her clothing she keeps clean by the use of aprons; she has suits of clothes suitable for dirty work. She "turns" her sheets when they grow thin in the middle. Her worn table cloths are cut up into napkins for every day use. She keeps rugs spread over places in the carpets that are subjected to the hardest wear. She carefully dries her tin ware so it will not rust out. She keeps her old brooms for rough use, and so prolongs the term of service of her best broom. She uses up her worn garments in making quilts and comforts or in rugs and rag carpets, and so in a thousand ways she saves what if wasted would be pure loss, and do nobody any good.

A millionaire was riding not long ago on a horse car. A cart, laden with bricks, passing along, dropped one in the street. The millionaire got off the car, ran and picked up the brick and carried it in his hands to some houses he was building up town. "Every brick," said he to a friend who was with him, "costs me a cent and a half apiece." His millions he has accumulated by saving littles, and more than one charitable institution has been endowed by his savings.

Of the unthrifty housekeeper the saying is ever true—"A woman can throw out with a spoon faster than a man can throw in with a shovel."—Christian Advocate.

A Good Rule.

The Waltham Free Press says, "We wonder if it ever occurred to our various commissions that when they are purchasing goods of any kind for the use of the city our local merchants have the prior right to be considered? Those who are purchasing goods are altogether too apt to go off into Boston to buy, entirely ignoring the fact that we have local dealers who may be able to sell the same goods just as cheap or cheaper, and who are paying liberally into the city's cash box in the way of taxes. We use the words "right" and "claim" advisedly. Men who contribute to the city's support have a right to any return the city can make and unless those who purchase goods for the city can make a very marked saving by purchasing elsewhere they have no moral right to go outside for goods that the city is to pay for. Patronize your home dealers is a good rule all around."

Refused His Check.

A plain-looking man from the north woods of Michigan had been two days at a Detroit hotel, when he was asked for his bill and offered a check of $25 on a local bank in payment.

"Don't you see that sign?" demanded the clerk, pointing to a placard which announced that no checks would be cashed or money lent.

"But my funds are in the bank," protested the guest.

"Then draw 'em out."

"But this check is all right, and if you will accept it I shall be much obliged."

The clerk turned to the telephone, called up the bank, and asked:

"Has —— any money with you?"

"Yes."

"What's his check good for?"

"Wait a minute. Hello!"

"Well?"

"His balance is $128,354.12. Good-by!"

"Certainly, Mr.——, with the greatest of pleasure! There's your change. Always glad to see you when you come to Detroit."—Detroit Free Press.

La Grippe Microbes.

Dr. Wm. D. Gentry, of Chicago, claims to have captured a microbe of la grippe. Ever since the disease made its appearance a year ago, the doctor has been on a still hunt for the microbes, if any existed. He found that fourteen years ago, and again sixteen years ago, la grippe was epidemic among human beings, and seventeen years ago it attacked horses, causing the still remembered "epizootic." Owing to the recurrence of the disease Dr. Gentry was inclined to believe that the earth at such intervals, passed through a stretch of space impregnated with what astronomers call "star dust." It occurred to him that he might trap some of the dust, or microbes, or whatever it was. Carefully polishing a plank slide, he took it out of doors and passed it through the air. Placing the slide under his microscope, which magnifies 1170 times, he counted seven heretofore unidentified microbes in the field of the instrument. Finally he secured several and had them mounted for the microscope. Then he secured some mucous from a patient afflicted with la grippe, and discovered in the mucous the same sort of microbes. The grippe microbes, as described by Dr. Gentry, are generally of a round form, varying occasionally in outline, but always distinctly marked by a series of seven lines surrounding them. Radiating from these lines are other lines which, in the magnified image resemble fine irregular hairs.—Whitman Time.

Anecdote of Cobbet.

Cobbet hated Quakers, regarded them, unjustly enough, as unmitigated hypocrites and liars, and in illustration used to tell the following story, which is none the worst for having served to support a bad argument:—

"I was," said Cobbet, "while residing on Long Island, acquainted with a well disposed young gentleman of large fortune, whose only fault was the habit of swearing—such a habit that he often declared that he would give half his fortune to get rid of it. This desire came to the ears of a Quaker, who thereupon had an interview with the young gentleman, and said—

"I can cure thee of that bad habit."

Whereupon the youth caught hold of the Quaker's hand, and gave it a hearty shake, saying—

"How can you perform such a miracle?"

The reply was—

"I can tell thee. I have heard that thou art going to travel this day for a period of six weeks; thou art just my size; nobody will know thee; thou shalt come to my house, put on the broad-brimmed hat, the coat without buttons, the knee breeches, the shoe buckles; and thou wilt find that the strangeness of the dress will have such an effect on thee when thou art going to talk that it will restrain thee from swearing—as thou knowest, my friend, that we Quakers never swear."

The young man cheerfully assented to the proposal, and accompanied the Quaker to his house, whence, after changing his clothes, he took his departure in the garb of a Quaker and went his way rejoicing. The period of the young gentleman's tour having elapsed, the Quaker, all anxiety, started on the road to meet him. Having met him, he said—

"Well, friend, how hast thou got on?"

The reply was—

"Very well."

"Hast thou sworn so much with that dress on thee?" inquired the Quaker.

The young man, rubbing the sleeve of his coat, replied—

"Certainly not; but I feel a great inclination to lie.

Test This, Everybody!

The listener observed a very curious and interesting thing the other night. He had occasion to wait for an evening train in a Columbus avenue station. As he entered and sat down there were already eight men and two women sitting on the benches, and having nothing better to do the listener noticed that everyone of the men had his left leg crossed over his right knee, while it was sufficiently apparent that in the case of the two ladies this state of things was exactly reversed. As the listener was meditating upon the reason for this circumstance a lady and gentleman entered and sat down, and immediately the gentleman put his left leg over his right knee, while the lady joined her sisters in the room in exactly their attitude.

By and by more men came and more, and every one of them put his left leg over his right knee, until there were actually seventeen men sitting in that position in the little waiting room. Only one more lady came, but she, two, followed exactly the example of the other women. Seventeen men and four women in one room, all with one knee over the other, but the women's and the men's crossed in reversed directions. Is there any physiologist who can explain why this should be so?—Boston Transcript.

Our Daily Life.

It is daily life that tests us—the manner of men we are. It is not our prayers, it is not our profession, but it is the tone of daily intercourse and conduct that decides how we stand. The little homely graces; the cheerful, every day amenities; the Christ spirit uttering itself in conscious act as in unconscious influence; not so much in deeds as in that subtile aroma which, without name, exudes from the saintly soul to equals and inferiors, to agreeable and disagreeable, to rich, poor, ignorant; to young, to old; bearing burdens, accepting crosses, seeking no great thing to do, content to put self by, and be a servant of the lowest—these are fruits of only one root—fruits that none may counterfeit.—Ware.

General Grant's Monument.

At last the monument to General Grant is to have a beginning, the committee having in charge having decided to break ground for the foundation in Riverside Park, on April 27th, the anniversary of the late General's birthday. Of funds the committee has already nearly $100,000 in hand, and various projects are presented to increase the amount. Meanwhile the project for a monumont to the late General Sherman has been arrived to a successful conclusion; and this fact may have something to do with the unusual activity manifested in the Grant memorial matter. The Assembly of New York State, it is understood, is to be asked to "help out" for the Grant monument, and it is not improbable that a favorable response will be made to the appeal.

Hearing on Water Supply.

No matter at the State House, since the hearing on the city charter, has attracted so much local interest as the hearing Wednesday of the Legislative Committee on Water Supply on the petition of the Mayor of Quincy for the passage of an act to allow said city to supply itself with water. Senator Bradley is chairman of the committee, and all the members were present.

Among those present were Mayor Fairbanks, ex-Solicitor Pattee, as counsel; Engineer Blake, who made the study; Councilmen Newcomb, Bass, Duffield and Rinn of the Council Committee having the matter in charge; also President Thompson of the Council, and Councilmen Holden, Moxon, Roberts, Little, Bryant and Powers; ex-Mayor Porter, Senator Eaton, Representatives Quincy and Burke, the latter on the Legislative Committee; ex-President Federhen of the Council, ex-Councilmen Shaw and Slade, John Quincy Adams, Charles Francis Adams, ex-Representative Henry H. Faxon, ex-Representative J. F. Merrill, Dr. J. F. Welch, ex-Representative James Edwards, A. W. Newcomb, W. T. Babcock, ex-Representative W. W. Adams, Frank P. Waterhouse, Lewis Bass, H. A. Keith, T. L. Williams, F. E. Badger, J. W. Sanborn, Warren Rideout, J. L. Whiton, John W. Sanborn, Rev. H. E. Cotton, A. W. Sprague, Edward Glennon, H. M. Federhen, Jr., Mrs. John Shaw, Mrs. J. L. Whiton.

The following members and attaches of the Quincy Water Company were present: Dr. J. A. Gordon, president; Dr. W. L. Faxon, F. E. Hall and E. R. Stickney directors; Mrs. McClellan, whose husband was the largest stockholder; Elihu T. Spear, engineer; Miss Brewer clerk; J. F. Gleason, foreman. Ex-Governor Robinson and Hon. F. P. Goulding appeared as counsel for the company, and Civil Engineers M. M. Tidd and L. A. Taylor were on hand to give expert testimony.

Braintree was represented by Dr. Dearing, and Hon. J. T. Stevens of the Water Board, Selectman Clark, Hon. F. A. Hobart and others, and ex-Governor Gaston appeared as counsel for Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

The hearing opened at 10.30.

W. G. A. Pattee Esq., who appeared for the city of Quincy first read the certificate of the State Board of Health, already published in full in the DAILY LEDGER.

Hon. F. P. Goulding and ex-Governor Robinson appeared for the Quincy Water Company, and at the outset raised the point that the proposed water supply had not the recommendation of the State Board of Health, the report saying it was impracticable to recommend with present information. That the report was favorable to the company. He admitted that it was in the power of the Legislature to grant the petition, and for the committee to proceed with hearing, but should the State Board of Health be ignored?

Lawyer Pattee said tests and examinations had been made since the report, which he was prepared to submit.

The Committee decided to hear the petitioners.

Mr. Pattee's opening was brief. He believed Quincy would be able to show that a sufficient supply of pure water could be obtained from the proposed source for present needs with an opportunity of increasing the same for future wants. The population was increasing rapidly. Three City Councils, those of 1889, 1890 and 1891 have endorsed the movement, by voting for an independent system. Why did Quincy petition? Because the supply of the present company was bad—bad to the eye, bad to the taste, bad the smell, and bad by analysis. That the supply of the company would not be adequate for future needs, and could not be made so without an exorbitant expenditure, which would involve the abandonment of the present pumping station and building anew. He would show that the existing company was established for speculative purposes; that it went to the first bog hole for water, that it put in a cheap system, that it inflated its stock, and that it was endeavoring to force the city to buy it out. That it was not a local company, there being but two Quincy stockholders outside the officers.

Engineer Blake, who made the study, was first called, and explained the same at length, in substance the same as to the City Council and in his report, but more exhaustive. He was the only witness and an adjournment was made to next Wednesday morning.

Upon invitation of Mayor Fairbanks seconded by Gov. Robinson for the Water Company, the Committee will visit Quincy next Tuesday, arriving at 10.20 A. M.

A Successful Company.

The fortieth annual report of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be found in our columns today. It is very creditable to the president and directors that the business of this insurance company is so carefully looked after.

The past few years have been very disastrous to many companies; fires have been numerous and losses heavy; and some companies have had all they could do to hold their heads above water; but the old reliable Quincy Mutual goes on year after year adding to its cash fund.

Suburban Press Reunion.

The ninth annual reception and dinner of the Suburban Press Association and their lady friends and invited guests was held Monday afternoon and evening at that popular hotel, the American house, Boston.

Dinner was served at half past three and among the guests present were Sergius Stepniak, the noted Russian writer and lecturer; Hon. Elihu B. Hayes of Lynn; Charles S. Fiske, president of the Massachusetts Press Association; Mrs. E. M. H. Merrill, president of the New England Woman's Press Club; William F. Murray, secretary of the Boston Press Club, and Thomas F. Anderson of the Boston Globe.

After doing justice to one of Messrs. Russell & Sturgis' good dinners for an hour or more, President Starbuck of Waltham welcomed the members and guests in his usual cordial manner, and then followed speeches, bright, witty and wise, by the guests and members of the association.

The remarks of Sergius Stepniak were attentively listened to and the sympathies of the press awakened for the Russian people. At one time he edited a Nihilist paper, which was published secretly, but was discovered after a few years and he was obliged to leave Russia. Since then he has published the book, "Underground Russia," which became so famous that it has been translated into fourteen different languages. Mr. Stepniak is lecturing in this country trying to enlist the sympathies of our people for the purpose of forwarding the cause of Russia. His books will be found interesting and should be read by all lovers of American freedom.

Mr. Thomas F. Anderson of the Globe, a young man of marked ability, entertained the company in the evening with his lecture, "The Modern Newspaper," illustrating his subject by stereopticon views; Master Walter F. Starbuck also rendered a piano solo.

The efforts of travelling companies to make Quincy a show town do not prove very successful, and we doubt if the drama will be a success here until we have an opera house or theatre, and the people can feel assured that there is a responsible manager. Friday afternoon, a horse standing in the blacksmith shop of Mr. Mitten, broke lose and took a spin through the Square. At the Robertson block he was joined by N. C. Mr. Hersey's loss was trifling.

Rob offered the prize, twenty-five cents to the boy who should eat the most Washington pies the quickest, stipulating that none of the contestants, some half dozen or more, should be allowed to drink. The new man held the stakes, and Joe came down from the loft to referee.

The contest begun and it was surprising how those pies disappeared, but this is easily accounted for as Doble made them. The boys kept bravely to their work but soon one by one dropped out, and the prize winner was just tackling his third pie when he was left alone in the field. The boys had eaten eight pies. Next!

John Downing has moved from Squantum street to the Glover house on Hancock street.

Mrs. L. D. Brown of Lyndonville, Vt., formerly of Atlantic, has been visiting here and left Wednesday for her home. That night while attempting to alight from the midnight train at White River Junction, while the train was in motion she slipped and had her feet crushed by the cars.

There are lots of Atlantic people who think they know who Miss Wollaston is, but do they?

The Volunteers and Stars crossed bats the score last Saturday, being 3 to 2 in favor of the former. The two nines were made up of the following young men: STARS,—James Thomas, Robert Gifford, Peter Thomas, William Pierce, Herbert Dudley, Dennis Sullivan, Richard Sullivan, Eddie Ego.

VOLUNTEERS,—C. Leary, B. Kerrigan, T. Edwards, W. Duggan, J. Daley, J. Lyons, T. Lyons, C. Partell.

J. E. Drew has put his steam launch into the water.

Mr. McVey the barber moved into one of Pope's houses on Squantum street, Monday.

Martin Concannon, driver of Broderick's depot carriage from Atlantic station, has resigned his position and taken one with the Old Colony.

There was no gospel service by the Methodist people of Atlantic Sunday, as they were unable to obtain a hall without paying an exorbitant price.

Among the talent announced to appear at the minstrel show are Messrs. Carey, Owen, Carver, Curtin, Pratt, Daggett, Reed, Coe, Palmer, Tyler, Hall, Priest and Emerson.

QUINCY POINT.

The account of the Famous Vulture, copied in the LEDGER from the Sunday Globe gives the glory of the victories gained by that glorious engine in '75 '78 and '79 as under the captaincy of Mr. H. M. Federhen. Mr. Federhen was engineer at the time, and the Vulture was under the command of Capt. Chas. F. Lapham and Capt. Elijah S. Brown.

Mr. Walter S. Redding, who makes Quincy Point his summer home has purchased the estate owned and occupied for many years by Mr. Bartholomew Bryant.

A conference of the Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham authorities was held Friday morning concerning bridge repairs.

Councilman Newcomb missed the roll call Thursday evening for the first time in his three years' of service. He was delayed by an accident to the electric car, but he got there just the same.

An interesting game of ball was played on the River-street grounds Wednesday, between the Regulars and Recruits, which resulted in favor of the Regulars by a score of 14 to 12. Eleven innings were played.

On Wednesday evening about six o'clock, as two gentlemen from Rockland were riding along Quincy avenue, a short distance north of the driveway to Mrs. J. L. Eldridge's residence, the horse shied and overturned the buggy into the swamp. It is fortunate no serious accident occurred, as it is quite a dangerous place we learn; no fence being along the roadside to protect carriages from the meadow.

Miss Sarah Malone has accepted a position to teach in the Parson's school, Brookline, and will commence her duties next Monday morning. Miss Malone has taught the D Primary grade in the Washington School for the past eight years. She is an excellent teacher and her place will not be easily filled.

The members of the Norfolk Bar Association, assembled at its annual meeting April 1, 1891, offered their tribute to the memory of their late brother and associate, John Loring Eldridge, who died in Quincy, November 7, 1890, which was published in the Daily LEDGER on Thursday last.

Entertainment.

The entertainment given at the vestry of the Washington Street Congregational church, on Wednesday evening, was well attended, and successfully carried out The programme of thirteen numbers would have been all too short, but for the kindly response to encores by the artists. It was proved beyond question that a union of talent from Wollaston, West Quincy, Quincy Centre and the Point is equal to any that can be secured outside of the city.

Miss Miller's piano solo was well received and was the opening number of the entertainment.

Miss Lincoln's solos were listened to with pleasure, her voice was very sweet and her selections excellent.

The members of the quintette are hereby advised to hold together, and fame is sure to follow.

The instrumental trio came within an ace, we mean came very near being responsible for dancing in the vestry, on account of the music which it selected, and the spirited manner in which it was given.

The duett by Miss Lincoln and Mr. Wight made the entire audience to a man long for the spring to be advanced by thirty days that all might in reality "Go a Maying" in that ideal manner.

Mr. Dickey's cornet solos were finely rendered, and appreciated by all.

The duett by Misses Kittredge and Souther received a hearty encore, and they are requested to prepare a extra number on their next public appearance.

Miss Litchfield won the hearts of the entire audience by her pleasing manner, and proved herself to be an elocutionist of high order. Her recitations were received with rounds of applause to which she kindly responded. It is hoped that she will favor the Point again at an early date.

WOLLASTON.

Mrs. J. N. Emerson, Mrs. Charles R. Sherman and Mrs. E. C. McClintock were the Wollaston delegates to the Norfolk County Convention, of the W. C. T. M., at Walpole.

The Unitarian Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. A. E. Edgarton, corner of Beale and Pine streets, on Wednesday, April 15, at 2.30 P. M.

The gutters at the corner of Central and Newport avenues, are being paved.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Preston have moved into their new house on Park street, First hill.

There never was before such a demand for building lots in Wollaston as there is at present. The place is swarmed with buyers. The large real estate men, like Wood, Harmon & Co., Wilson Marsh, the Sherman & Nickerson Land Company, A. L. Baker, A. W. Sprague and A. G. Olney, have all that they can tend to in showing buyers around the place.

A very pleasant sociable was held at the Wollaston Congregational church, Thursday evening. A rich musical treat was furnished by the Boys' Orchestra of Boston Highlands. After the entertainment, ice cream and cake was served.

Thursday evening was an evening of sociables at Wollaston. The Baptist society also having theirs on that evening. A large company was present to enjoy the excellent programme.

Rev. Frank Burr, of Somerville, will preach in the M. E. church next Sunday morning and evening, at the usual hours.

The steam roller is at work on Beale street, Wollaston.

Two hundred shares of the Wollaston Land Company were sold this week at seventy-five cents a share, and fifty shares at seventy two and one-half cents.

Musical Society.

The regular musicale and annual business meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Musical Society was held on Monday evening, at the residence of Mr. S. P. Moorhouse. The programme consisted of selections from the works of Haydn. The officers for the ensuing year are:

President—Arthur C. Sprague.
Vice President—Miss Elizabeth E. Jones.
Secretary, Treasurer and Librarian—Miss R. Lillian Pinkham.
Two members of Executive Committee—Mr. E. W. Arnold, Mr. Charles B. Dickey.

A Good Man Gone.

Phineas Taylor Barnum, the veteran showman, whose name long ago became a household word, died peacefully at his home at Bridgeport, Conn., on Tuesday evening, aged 81 years. His funeral took place Friday afternoon, and a deep and profound sorrow prevailed throughout the city.

Flags were displayed at half-mast, and emblems of mourning were shown from public and private buildings; and business was generally suspended.

P. T. Barnum has given away during his life time many hundreds of thousands of dollars, and still it is estimated that he has left over $5,000,000.

To Vote on Sewerage Act.

A sewerage bill for Quincy has passed the House of Representatives and also the Senate. Some radical changes have been made. One is that the city shall pay its portion within twenty instead of forty years. Another that abutters may divide their assessments to cover from one to ten years instead of one to three as contemplated. Another that the act shall be submitted to the voters for acceptance, which was not contemplated. The DAILY LEDGER of Friday outlined the various sections of the new draft.

Keegan and Ford Indicted.

The Grand Jury for Norfolk County reported to Judge Bishop on Wednesday afternoon.

Indictments Found.

John J. Ford and William Keegan of Quincy, for breaking and entering and larceny of $7 and $10.50 worth of tools from the shop of Edward Russell at Quincy, Feb. 18, 1891, plead not guilty.

John J. Ford and William Keegan, breaking and entering and larceny of goods valued at $24 50 from the store of William H. Doble of Quincy, Feb. 18, 1891, not guilty.

ENTERPRISING. The Dedham Transcript on entering its twenty-second year, celebrated the occasion in a very neat and pretty manner, by giving its readers a handsome sheet containing many fine illustrations of prominent buildings in the town of Dedham. These illustrations made the paper not only interesting, but valuable for future reference. The publisher, Mr. Hugh McQuillan, has our best wishes for the future prosperity of the Transcript, and may his labors be fully appreciated by his subscribers.

The regular meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening, all members with the exception of Messrs. Claflin, Crane and Sheahan being present.

In the absence of Chairman Claflin, Dr. Gordon was chosen to preside, after which the meeting adjourned.

—A. W. Clapp & Co.'s shoe manufactory at East Weymouth, was entered early Friday morning and fifty pairs of boots taken. As a horse and carriage of Mr. Healy is missing, the burglars probably appropriated them to get away with the goods.

Miss A. L. Newcomb is very sick with la grippe at her home on Adams street.

Not Well Posted.

To the Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

In your issue of April 4th under the heading of "Sympathy and Kindness," the author seems to be quite unaware to what extent flowers have been used in the churches. In the old Unitarian, for fourteen years, the Misses Beals of Adams street, furnished and took the whole charge of the flowers at all the services; after which all the sick, afflicted, and aged were remembered. Following them Miss Carrie Gurney did all that and even more, for eight years; adding the Flower Mission which remembered the hospitals, homes, &c.; the flowers speaking in their own sweet way of "Remembrance" and "Sympathy." I would further add, I think the Unitarians first introduced here the custom of flowers in the church, and now it seems to have almost become part of the services.

The Granite Fountain.

The public fountain has received further contributions from John Hall, A. J. Richards, Mayor Fairbanks, Osborne Rogers, Dr. G. B. Rice, W. G. Corthell, Herbert Whitman and a few dollar membership fees. One gentleman gave $25 another $20 and some have offered to give more if needed, but the committee desire earnestly that the many who own horses and teams who have not yet given do so to enlarge the interest.

The quarterly meeting will be held on the lower floor of City Hall, Monday evening next, when it is hoped volunteers to work for an entertainment to be given at Charles H. Hardwick's house, will be found. The exact sum for plumbing is not known, but about $600 is expected to cover the amount remaining to be raised.

Let all who expect to derive benefit for their horses, or dogs, and all who wish to share in this, the first effort to build a citizen's offering to Quincy, send in some sum either to the Treasurer, Mrs. Annie E. Faxon, to the Cashier of the National Granite Bank, or to the PATRIOT Office, so aid in completion of the work.

CITY COUNCIL.

Not interesting! I don't believe you could have been there, if that is your opinion of the City Council Monday evening. The business was not of as serious a nature as two weeks previous, but after the Council refused to adopt the report of the Committee on Streets on Walker street, the "fun" commenced, and so much time was spent over trifling matters that at 10.20 the Council adjourned without hearing several reports, and before reaching the calendar in which was the deficiency order and other business.

Councilman Drake of Ward Two was the only absentee, and it is to be regretted that he was not there to straighten out his committee, that on streets, which just now appears to be a happy (?) family.

Jurors Drawn.

Upon notification and a motion, Councilman Bass drew three traverse jurors for the court which sits at Dedham, April 13, viz: Edward F. Brault, John Vogel and Charles H. Field.

Plans for City Hall.

Mayor Fairbanks forwarded plans and specifications, prepared by the Commissioner of Public Works, for remodelling the interior of City Hall, which will be explained at length in the DAILY LEDGER of Saturday.

Councilman Moxon moved that they be received and placed on file, and offered an order, to advertise for bids for the work.

Councilman Warner thought the Council was voting in the dark, and on his motion a recess of five minutes was taken to examine the plans.

Councilman Moxon explained that his order called for expense of advertising simply.

Councilman Warner favored some changes in plan.

The order was adopted.

Appointment Revoked.

At the request of the Old Colony the appointment of Walter F. Pratt as railroad police was revoked.

Treasurer's Statement.

Treasurer Adams submitted his monthly statement to March 31, which was referred to the Finance Committee.

Appropriation Exhausted.

Auditor Hall reported the appropriation of 1890 for Hancock street to be exhausted. Placed on file.

Adams Street.

Councilman Holden presented the petition of Charles F. Adams that Adams street be put in good repair. Referred to Committee on Streets.

State Aid.

Petitions of Thomas Munroe and Barbara Talbot for State Aid, were referred to that committee.

The Committee on State Aid reported leave to withdraw on the application of Phebe A. White, which was accepted.

Laid on Table.

Councilman Jones presented the petition of Malnati Bros. to run wire guy across. It was laid on the table that an order might be introduced later, but the sudden adjournment shut it off.

Did Not Appear.

The Committee on Claims reported that Mrs. Emma Castiglioni who claimed damages, had failed to appear at hearings appointed. Claim referred to Mayor and City Solicitor.

Mr. Shute's Claim.

The Committee on Claims favored reference to the Mayor and City Solicitor of the claim of Isaac Shute. Accepted.

Common Street.

The Committee on Streets reported an order appropriating $1200 for paved gutters and drains on Common street, to be borrowed on one year loan. Ordered to second reading and referred to Finance Committee.

Reardon Street.

The Committee on Streets favored an additional appropriation of $1175 for Reardon street, the same to be borrowed on one year loan.

There was more or less discussion over this report, some thinking it was unnecessary to spend so much there, for curbing, paved gutters, etc., and whether or not it should be done under the betterment act. It was finally ordered to a second reading.

Crossing on School Street.

The Committee on Streets reported an order appropriating $60 for stone crossing on School street at the head of Franklin. Adopted.

Walker Street.

The Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw on the petition of Cephas Drew and others for the extension of Walker street.

Councilman Moxon opposed. He said there had for years been a demand for this improvement and it was worthy of further consideration. It was a necessity and he hoped the petitioners would be given a hearing.

Councilman Jones said a hearing had been given in 1890. That the owners of the land were not willing to give it, and he was opposed to the city buying it, especially as it refused to accept some streets now that were all laid out.

Councilman Powers agreed with the last speaker.

Councilman Bryant was opposed to buying the land, but could see no objection to hearing. He said it was the aim of the Committee on Streets to require private ways to be brought to a high standard before acceptance.

Councilman Holden thought there were many other wants more pressing.

Councilman Moxon moved to lay on table, and that the Committee on Streets be instructed to give a hearing.

This was favored by Councilman Wilde, Bryant, Fallon and Sherman and opposed by Councilman Jones and Powers, and prevailed 14 to 6.

Hall Place.

The Committee on Street recommended that the petitioners for the extension of Hall place have leave to withdraw, but in view of the action on Walker street, Chairman Jones moved that it be laid on the table that a public hearing might be given. After discussion, it prevailed 12 to 9.

Walker Street Again.

Councilman Jones than moved to reconsider the action on Walker street, that it might also be given a public hearing, which prevailed 14 to 5.

It was then voted that public hearings be given on both Walker street and Hall place extensions on April 20.

Hancock Street and Betterments.

The Committee on Streets reported an order for $9,200 to complete Hancock street, the same to be borrowed on one year note; also an order for $1,500 for curbing, there being some question as to whether the betterment act should apply to the curbing.

Some member of the committee contended that it was not the intention to make two separate orders, and upon motion the report and order were recommitted.

Gutters and Crossings.

The Committee on Streets reported an order appropriating $3000 for paved gutters and $2000 for granite crossings, the same to be borrowed on one year loan. Ordered to second reading.

Cottage Avenue.

The Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw on the petition to accept Cottage avenue. Accepted.

School Accommodations.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported in favor of the enlargement of the John Hancock schoolhouse by the addition of four rooms, and offered an order appropriating $500 for plans.

Councilman Jones queried if the Committee had considered the need of a building on the new plains, and favored the erection of building there.

Councilman Moxon said the action was taken after conference with the School Committee. The city had land there, the present walls could be utilized, and also the furnaces, etc. It seem to be needed at just that spot.

Councilman Warner favored another building. It was estimated he said that the addition of four rooms would cost $15,000, and that sum would erect an eight room building on the New Plains.

Councilman Bryant said the addition would provide accomadations for about four years. Then it would be time to build elsewhere. The John Hancock was built with view to enlargement.

Councilman Sherman moved to lay on the table.

Councilman Jones favored recommitment.

Councilman Bryant opposed.

Upon motion of Councilman Sherman, the Council adjourned at 10.20 leaving much unfinished business.

The City Council held a special meeting Thursday evening and passed the deficiency order which appropriated $6,655.07 to pay 1890 bills; the same to be borrowed. An extended report appeared in Friday's LEDGER.

25th Anniversary G. A. R.

Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., celebrated the 25th anniversary of the order by a gathering of the comrades, their ladies and friends at Hancock hall Monday evening. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Commander John D. Williams who after welcoming those present introduced Comrade William W. Penniman, who read a brief history of Paul Revere Post, which was in substance the same as published in the PATRIOT of June 1889.

Ex-Mayor Charles H. Porter was then introduced, who said the Grand Army of the Republic was instituted at Decatur, Ill., April 6, 1866; he then briefly stated the objects of the order and with what rapidity it had grown. The ranks are now growing thinner every year, and when taps are sounded two decades from now, but few of the Grand Army will be left, and he hoped the generation that succeeds us will never be exposed to the privations they had undergone, but if they did, he hoped they would remember the boys of '61. He then read a fac-simile of the charter granted to Post Number One of Decatur District of Macom, Department of Ill.

The speaker then read the circular letter of Gen. Veazie, Commander in chief, which was followed by a prayer by Comrade Shackley, after which Mrs. Charles Bearce was introduced who sang, "Crown them with a Wreath of Honor," Miss Flora Shackley officiating as accompanist.

Comrade Samuel Brown gave a reading entitled "Mobile Bay," and responded to an encore with a humorous selection.

Messrs. Walter Loud, Arthur Hall, Willie Draper and George Field a violin quartette, gave a very pleasing selection which received a well deserved encore.

Miss Minnie Litchfield read "The Widow's Light," which called for such a general encore that she read "A Maiden's Prayer."

Comrade Brown again appeared and recited "Kearney at Seven Pines, and a humorous selection in response to an encore.

Mrs. Bearce also favored the audience again and sang that well known selection "Just before the Battle."

The audience then rose and united in singing "America," which was followed with the benediction by comrade Shackley, which closed the exercises.

Expert Swimmer.

Mr. Albert Keating, one of our expert swimmers, who usually enjoys a summer residence at the beach, thought he would try a salt water bath and see if it felt as invigorating as in past summers. While standing in the rear of his new house on Canal street, looking up at its fine proportion on Saturday afternoon, he leaned back against a joist he had placed upon two posts near the water's edge, off it slipped and he quickly went after it, head first backwards without even stopping to take off his hat or boots. It being high tide he went clear to the bottom, but could not tell postively whether there were any clams there or not; one thing sure, he found the mud.

On coming to the surface he struck out bravely for the shore which he successfully reached, and started for home. After removing his wet clothes and enjoying a good rubbing, he appeared in another suit and looked as smart as the best of the boys after a good swim.

Eightieth Birthday.

Mrs. Capt. Jabez Bigelow, of Franklin street, celebrated her four score years on Sunday, April 5th, at the old homestead. Four generations were present, four daughters and son, with their children and grand children. One daughter and husband traveling nine hundred miles to take dinner and drink to the health of her dear old mother, who is enjoying the best of health, and full of old history of ancient Quincy. She comes from honest sturdy ancestry and with all her faculties undimmed, and her young fresh looks and loving kindly words for everyone, may she abide with us another score of years, a blessing to her loving children and neighbors.

Installation of Officers.

Bay View, L. O. L., 187, held a very interesting meeting on Monday evening. Two candidates received the first degree and two were received by card. The officers elect for the ensuing year were then installed by S. G. S. William Dawson of Boston, as follows:

—Holbrook gave 90 majority for no-license, and made an appropriation to enforce the law.

—George E. Richardson was elected grand dictator of the Knights of Honor at the annual meeting Wednesday.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, April 8, 1891.

Though the manufacterers of oleomargarine have ceased their opposition to the bill to prevent the coloring of it to imitate butter, relying upon the original package decision for their protection, yet the farmers are bound to crowd the business to the wall. The Committee on Agriculture has reported a bill which is awaiting further action, which is very stringent. It puts $50 fine for each offence upon every one who sells or offers for sale to a person inquiring for butter any oleomargarine, or butterine, or any object "made in imitation of or resemblance to pure butter, not made entirely from the milk of cows, with or without coloring matter," thus cutting off all butter which has any coloring matter in it; $50 for selling any oleomargarine or any imitation of butter which is not copiously marked and labelled so any one can see what it is; $50 for selling such articles without a sign in the market or store conspicuously posted, "oleomargarine sold here;" $50 or thirty days' imprisonment for the peddler who does not have in large letters on both sides of his cart, "licensed to sell oleomargarine;" $50 on every hotel, boarding-house, eating-house, restaurant or lunch counter using imitation butter which does not have a conspicuous sign, "oleomargarine used here." The bill makes the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture and two others to be appointed by the Governor a State dairy commission, with power to employ all needed experts, agents, chemists and assistants, to enter all necessary places and to enforce the law thoroughly. It is a very strong bill in the farmers' interests and would have great effect if strictly enforced.

The Committee on Taxation seems to have had new light upon the subject of taxing houses of religious worship. Their bill not to exempt anything above the value of $50,000 has come back with the unanimous report that it be referred to the next Legislature. This is an easy way of avoiding an acknowledgment of defeat and the report will be accepted, thus ending the matter for this year.

Leave to withdraw has been reported on the petition for a change in the law so that unvaccinated children may attend the public schools. Some people have a strong disgust at viccination and object extremely to having the operation performed on their children. They even cite cases of serious evils introduced into the system, as they say, by vaccination, but they have never been able to carry their point through the Legislature.

There has been put through its stages hastily the resolve by which the State is to receive its part of the direct tax which is to be refunded by Congress according to the recent act.

A new rule of the House requires all committee expenses for travel to be published and thus attention is called to the practice of charging to the State the cigars which are furnished. Very likely the practice is heavy with age, but it has never before been called to public attention. For the month ending March 31 the travelling expenses of the Committees on Drainage, Education, Harbors and Public Lands, Labor, Manufactures, Public Charitable Institutions, Prisons, Railroads and Roads and Bridges aggregated $1602. The Committees on Education and Public Charities rendered no bill for cigars, but the others did, as follows: Drainage, $14; Harbors and Public Lands, $8; Labor, $6.50; Manufactures, $29.55; Prisons, $25; Railroads, $10.50; Roads and Bridges, $14.50, total, $98.05. This is for one month's smoking.

But there is a more creditable side to the case. This new rule which compels the publication of expenses checks materially former junketing tendencies. It cuts off the people who used to go with committees upon invitation of members. The sisters and cousins and aunts who used to make up the parties, besides the batch of masculine friends, are excluded and the rule is enforced. There is no question that legislative morals have improved in recent years upon this point. The annual trip to the tunnel, which used to be demoralizing to the Legislature, is a thing of the past. Committees have been restricted in their freedom of travel. The Legislature is more critical and less disposed to grant favors. Though these cigar bills show the need of reform, and though some committee trips might better be omitted, yet the laxity of the "good old days" no longer exists.

Wednesday afternoon saw the introduction of several important bills into the House, whose disposal will awaken much public interest. One was that the Superior Court shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction of all trials for murder. This takes them away from the Supreme Court, where they have always been and where many people think they should remain on account of human life being involved. Another compels the publication of all political campaign expenses, above the amount of $20. This is the bill which was passed by the House of 1890 and was killed in the Senate. Another raises the age of compulsory school attendance from 14 to 15 years. Another appropriates $50,000 for the establishment of a State nautical school at Boston. It provides for an unpaid commission of three, with large powers, to set up and manage the school. Another aims to prevent the employment of Pinkerton detectives or similar bodies of private men in case of any public disturbance. It provides that all special police must take oath that they are citizens of the State. Another puts a tax of five per cent. on all property over $1000 which passes by will or inheritance, except in case of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, adopted child or its lineal descendent, wife or widow of a son, or husband's daughter. Last of all was a nine-hour labor law for county laborers, workmen and mechanics. RULE.

A Slight Fire.

An alarm from Box 75, just before midnight last Friday was for a slight fire in the partitions near the chimney, at the house corner of Sumner and Main streets, occupied by John M. Coffee. The steamer was promptly on the spot, and located at the hydrant on the corner, but its services were not needed, as the portable extinguisher came into play, and put out the fire without flooding the house with water. The loss will not exceed $25.

—Randolph is a no-license town this year. The vote Monday was 133 yes, 532 no. The Republican ticket was also successful.

Co-operative Bank.

A meeting of the directors of the cooperative bank was held at the banking rooms in Durgin & Merrill's block Thursday evening. The semi-annual statement was read by the secretary, R. D. Chase, and the financial condition of the bank was found to be very satisfactory and encouraging. After all expenses for the past six months were paid, an addition made to the guarantee fund, and the salary of the secretary and treasurer increased, a dividend of 6¼ per cent. on the shares was declared, which was very gratifying It was voted to issue a new series of shares at the next meeting the first Wednesday in May. This is surely one of the most profitable and safest institutions for small or monthly saving in our city, as the money is always loaned on real estate first mortgages. Five hundred shares will be offered at the next meeting at one dollar per share.

Pastor Transfered.

The transfer of Rev. H. Hanson, pastor of the St. Paul's Methodist church of this city, came as a surprise to him and his people, and both regret to part with the other. It is Rev. Mr. Hanson's good fortune, however, to be called to one of the leading churches in the conference, in New York city. He will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday, April 25, and will be succeeded by Rev. C. Paulson, who comes from Bridgeport, Connecticut.

The growth of the Swedish Methodist church in this city during the three years pastorate by Rev. Mr. Hanson has been remarkable. At first it was merely a class, while now there is a pretty edifice on the corner of Granite and Fort street. About $7,000 have been raised and expended by this church in the three years.

Mr. Hanson succeeds Rev. S. H. Olsen who comes to Norwood, Mass.

Minute Men of '61.

The annual reunion of "The Minute Men of '61," an association organized in 1889, will be held April 15, in Boston. Comrades will assemble at Faneuil hall at 12 o'clock, and march to the banquet hall. His Excellency Governor Russell, His Honor Mayor Matthews, Commander Smith of Massachusetts Department, G. A. R., together with other prominent officials and friends of the veterans of 1861, are expected to be present and address the convention. The ceremonies will be interspersed with war songs the old time bugle notes fife and drum corps, etc. Grand Army men and Sons of Veterans, not members, will be admitted to the galleries free

Col. Henry Walker, formerly of Quincy, is president, and Col. Abner B. Packard, of Quincy, of the Fourth Regiment, one of the vice Presidents. President Walker constitutes the invitation committee and is chairman of the executive committee, of which Capt. Edward A. Spear, of Quincy, is a member. Capt. Spear is also on the reception committee.

A Quincy company, the old Hancock Light Guards, which became Co. H., is certainly entitled to be known as "Minute Men." Its response was instantaneous at the first call of the government.

By vote of the Association the members ship fee and annual dues were placed at $1.00, which includes ticket to the Banquet and all association expenses.

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable Hood's kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for Sarsaparilla itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad no other Peculiar preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has To Itself developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1891.

For the Patriot.

An Easter Hymn.

BY J. G. B. H.

The Easter bells are ringing,
  The Resurrection chime;
Come Christian friends and worship,
  In this bright joyous time.

The Lord of grace and glory,
  Was crucified and slain;
But Death himself He conquered,
  And burst the captive's chain.

And thus the Life immortal,
  In His own Gospel brings,
His bride—the Church, with gladness,
  Her grateful praises sings.

Thus, spoke the Angel-watcher
  In robes of shining white,
He is not here, He's risen,
  To fill the world with light.

Then gather fragrant lilies,
  And roses rich and red,
To weave a crown of beauty,
  For that once wounded head.

We'll crowd around His altars,
  And pile the blossoms high,
And send our sweetest anthems,
  Loud sounding thro' the sky.

O! risen, dear Redeemer,
  Lead us—thy trusting band—
Through all life's sore temptations,
  By thy strong, tender hand.

REFRAIN.

Cleanse us O Lord Divine—
  With Thy continual pity—
And bring us crowned with songs,
  To the Celestial City.

Household Receipts.

CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE. Whites of seven eggs, two cups of sugar, two-thirds cup of butter, one cup of milk and three of flour, three teaspoonsful of baking powder. The chocolate part of the cake is made the same way, only use the yolks of the eggs with a cup of grated chocolate stirred into it. Bake in layers. Spread between them a custard made with two eggs, one pint of milk, one-half cup of sugar, one spoonful of flour or corn-starch; flavor with vanilla.

WHITE CAKE. One coffee cup of pulverized sugar, two coffee cups flour, one teacup of milk, one-half teacup of butter, whites of two eggs, two tablespoonsful of baking powder.

CREAMED CHICKEN. Prepare the chicken as for fricasseeing; lay the pieces in a dripping pan, season to taste and pour on half a teacupful sweet cream to each chicken. Place it in a moderate oven and bake. Baste occasionally in the latter part of the process. As the pieces brown, turn them. When done, have a few slices of buttered toast in the platter under the chicken. Thicken the gravy and pour it over all.

LEMON PIE. One cup of sugar, two tablespoons of butter, one large tablespoon flour the yolks of two eggs, two cups sweet milk, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, using only the yellow rind of lemon. When set remove from oven, cover with frosting made from the whites of two eggs, beaten until very stiff, three tablespoons sugar and one-half teaspoon lemon extract. Place in oven until delicately browned.

SWEET POTATO PIE. Boil potatoes till quite soft, peel and press through a sieve or colander. To one pint of potatoes add one pint of milk, three eggs well beaten and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar; flavor with ginger or lemon. This pie resembles the old-time pumpkin pie. It is baked with one crust only.

TO REMOVE OLD PAINT. Shake three pounds of quicklime in water, and add one pound of pearl-ash, making the whole into the consistence of paint. Lay this over the old work with a brush, at let it remain from twelve to fourteen hours, when the paint will be easily scraped off.

NANTASKET. The Rockland House will be run this year under the management of Mr. Elijah Stanton of Hotel Berkeley the Boston, and Hotel Nantasket and Rockland Cafe will be under the management of Mr. E. Sturgis, a brother of one of the former proprietors. Mr. Sturgis is now steward of the Boston Traders' Club.

☞The Woburn school committee propose to make a new departure this year in the high school graduation exercises. Instead of graduating essays and expensive rivalry in graduation dress, the graduates will be given all the time till the end of the school year for the completion of the course of study, and will then be given their certificate of graduation after addresses by speakers of prominence engaged for the exercises by the school committee.

☞There would be no objection to immigrants if they were all like one who landed in New York the other day with his family. He was a lusty Swiss with a lusty wife, thirteen lusty children, three lusty grandchildren and a wallet with $4,000 in it. He is the kind of man to take an abandoned New England farm, repopulate it with Swiss youngsterse, of which he has a plenty, and restock it with Swiss cattle.

In many offices a potato is used instead of a pen wiper. The juicy tuber holds the pen steady, removes at once all ink from the nib, and prevents or at least very greatly delays, the process of corrosion, and spares many a well loved old pen to a ripe old age.

Anecdotes.

Professor (a little distracted)—"I'm very glad to see you. How's your wife?"

"I regret it, professor, but I'm not married."

"Ah, yes; then, of course, your wife's still single."

Algernon (making a call)—"What are these noises I hear, Miss Maud?"

Miss Maud (whose mother is vindictively making a wholly unnecessary racket in washing the dishes)—"It's dear mamma. She dearly loves to sort over the bric-a-brac."

Mrs. Hayfork—"Anything for me?"

Rural postmaster—"I don't see nothin'."

Mrs. Hayfork—"I was expectin' a letter or postal from Aunt Sally Spriggs, tellin' what day she was comin'."

Rural postmaster (calling to his wife)—De ye see a postal from Mrs. Hayfork's Aunt Sally, tellin' what day she was coming?"

His wife—"Yes; she's coming Thursday."—Brooklyn Life.

Wife (to her husband, who is arranging his papers)—"What have you got here in this parcel?"

Husband—"They are the dear reminiscences of our wedding tour."

Wife—"Oh, you sweet creature! Pray what kind of reminiscences are they?"

Husband—"They are hotel bills!"

Mr. and Mrs. Dimmick.

The following extract is taken from a letter written by Mrs. Dimmick, who was so seriously injured in the great railroad accident last August, to a friend in this city. The letter is dated at Los Angeles, Cal., March 21st. It reads as follows:

How I wish you could see us as we are today, in our beloved home, not well by any means, but so much better than we were at Quincy that you would hardly know us.

Mr. Dimmick looks in the face almost as well as ever, but the head is not perfectly healed, and the ear still discharges—sometimes back of the ear and sometimes in front. Somewhere about the ear there has been ever since we came home, that little sac, no bigger than a pea, which persists in discharging, so he wears the cotton over it, and the oil silk cap, and the patch on his head, and over that the skull cap.

His hand looks better than we ever expected to see it,—it is getting to have quite a natural color, and he can move the fingers a little—a very little it is true—but it makes me hope that when they are no longer so very tender, as they are now, the joints can be worked, so that the hand may be a useful member in time. But the waiting is very tedious for him. He has not been off from the place since we came home, though he has several times walked about the grounds, and yesterday he took quite a long walk over some fresh ploughed ground which was so rough that I had to come back and leave him to go on by himself.

I did not write you as I promised to do, when I took my first step, because I really did not know when that was. It was so short and unlike a natural step that I did not think it worthy of mention, but I should like to have you see me walk now. I never use but one crutch, and I go all about the floor, where we live, without any. I limp badly, but that I don't mind, so long as there is a prospect of my being as good on my feet as ever. I walk over to our little church—about fifteen or twenty rods from the house—every Sunday morning.

The doctor told me the other day that not one in ten thousand would have gotten along so well as I have under similar circumstances. I wanted to tell him that not one in ten thousand sufferers in the world had so good doctors and care as we had.

Last evening I pulled more than eighty calla lilies, which were a little blighted, and left in the bed as many perfect ones. Helitrope, geraniums, and carnations are in full bloom, the orange trees are full of fruit and fragrant with blossoms.

The Famous Vulture.

The following record of Vulture 4, of Quincy, appeared in the Fireman's column of the Sunday Globe:

The once famous Vulture 4, of Quincy, was originally a Thayer, in 1844. In 1848 the engine was rebuilt by Howard & Davis, and in 1877 was again rebuilt by Hunneman. The engine was located at the "Point," and while under the captaincy of Hebert Federhen did efficient service. Its motto was, "Our aim the public good." The company had many home trials, and with a single exception was successful, and also held the championship of Quincy for many years by defeating the Tigers. It participated in but four events, and won a prize at each muster. Sept. 29, 1875, at Hingham it played 202 feet; in the following month at Brockton, won first prize on 202 feet, 9¼ inches. At Mystic Park, Aug. 22, 1878, with 36 competitors, the company won second prize on 162 feet, 6¼ inches. At Danvers, July 24, 1879, it won a silver trumpet by playing 207 feet, 3½ inches. In 1884 the company was disbanded and the engine sold to Chelsea, Vt.

Just in Time.

In the good old times, when it was the custom to proclaim the banns in public from the pulpit two Sundays before the marriage of a couple, there lived in western New York a youth named Isaiah Gage, who was about taking to himself a wife.

It was the custom in the particular church which Isaiah attended for the minister to read the banns with the other notices just before the sermon.

Isaiah was familiar, of course, with this custom, and on the morning when his own banns were to be read, timed his movements so as to come into church quietly just as the sermon was beginning.

The old minister was an eccentric, absent-minded man, and as he saw the young man come down the aisle he paused—he had just announced his text—and said: "Oh! seeing Isaiah Gage reminds me of his banns with Polly McCabe. I have the document here somewhere!"

And to the overwhelming embarrassment of the now prominent Isaiah the banns were read.

Isaiah said afterwards that it was done on purpose by the old doctor, but the minister solemnly declared that he had really forgotten the notice.—Youth's Companion.

Spring Medicine.

In the spring months the necessity of a good blood-purifying, strengthening medicine is felt by the large majority of people. During the winter various impurities accumulate in the blood, as a consequence of close confinement in poorly ventilated tenements, stores and workshops, or too high living. Therefore when the milder weather comes, the blood is unable to sustain the various organs of the body which need additional strength, and the consequence is "that tired feeling," billiousness, sick headache, possibly dyspepsia, or the appearance of some blood disorder. So popular has Hood's Sarsaparilla become at this season that it is now generally admitted to be the Standard Spring Medicine. It thoroughly purifies and vitalizes the blood, creates a good appetite, cures billiousness and headache, overcomes that tired feeling, gives healthy action to the kidneys and liver, and imparts to the whole body a feeling of health and strength. Try it this spring.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

☞France exported for Christmas and the New Year no less than $350,000 worth of bonbons, and $200,000 worth of bonbonnieres. During the past year $280,000 worth of fondants and cream chocolates were sent from Paris to the harems of Turkey and Egypt, and $500,000 worth of perfumery and face paints took the same road. No wonder that Turkish ladies have to paint when they ruin their complexions with such an abnormal amount of sweets. These fair creatures are at the present moment causing much disturbance in the dominions of both Sultan and Khedive, for not only do they persist in discarding their national costume for European dress, but they insist upon going to concerts, balls, receptions and to the theatre.

☞The latest estimate of the twelve largest cities in the world, in the order of their population, is as follows: London, Eng. (including suburbs), 5,100,613; Paris, 2,344,550; Osaka, Japan, 1,633,144; New York city, 1,513,501; Canton, China, 1,500,000; Aitchi, Japan, 1,390,702; Berlin, Prussia, 1,315,297; Tokio, Japan, 1,288,907; Vienna, Austria, 1,103,857; Chicago, 1,099,133; Philadelphia, 1,046,252; Sian, China, 1,000,000.

☞Eveline Neal, an English woman has been arrested at Paris for marriage frauds. She inveigled 43 men to marry her by advertising herself as a wealthy widow. Her last victim was a viscount, who almost ruined himself by gambling.

A man and woman, whose combined ages amounted to 140 years, were married at Springfield last week.

Temperance.

The Teachings of Science.

The heart by the same nervous impression is generally increased in the frequency of its beat, and possible for a very short time in its force, especially if the person is fatigued or depressed from any morbid influence; but when the alcohol reaches the heart through the blood and is thus applied to its substance, the force of that organ is diminished, as was shown from the experiments recorded in a previous article. This is the first, mild stage of alcoholic action upon a person in a state of comparative health, and all these effects soon pass away when so small a quantity is taken, leaving only a slight feeling of languor behind.

In the second stage, when more has been taken, or when that taken has had its more full effect, the alcohol having accumulated in the brain, the flush of the face may continue or become purplish, or in rarer cases it may fade; the temperature of the surface may continue or it may be less, but that of the internal parts of the body as a rule is diminished; there is now a degree of mental confusion, with less precision of muscular motion, though there may be increase of the flow of ideas and of words from weakening or partial paralysis of the regulating and restraining functions; and for the same reason there is a more ready excitement of the feelings of mirth or anger, of affection or hatred, and a more ready and unrestrained expression of such feelings. Indescreet confidence, silly sentiment, extravagance and boasting are apt to be indulged. There is now, in different degrees, the condition of "tipsiness." The man regards himself as stronger, wittier and wiser than he is. The cares and responsibilities of life rest less heavily upon him and in this condition he is less careful of proprieties and of obligations. With many the sensations are more agreeable and a sensuous hilarity is experienced. This release from care and these agreeable sensations have given rise to many an eulogy in song upon the "pleasures of the wine cup," and have inspired the worship of Bacchus. It is claimed that the feelings of friendship are more ardent when pledges are made in wine; but it should be remembered that other feelings are apt to be excited as those of love, as is attested by the quarrels in the cups; and in lower natures impurity and fights are, even in this degree of the alcoholic indulgence, apt to result. In these lower natures, recklessness and criminality in this state are common.

But if indulgence was never carried beyond this point, was only occasional, and was practiced only by men of well regulated minds and characters the immediate individual results would not be so disastrious, though often when the drinking is indulged in only to this extent the effects are markedly injurious upon the health of both the body and the mind; and consequently the short pleasure is followed by a much longer period of depression and gloom, and the sum of happiness is enevitably diminished rather than increased by even so judicious an indulgence.

The great objection, however, to such indulgence is that a taste is developed and a habit formed, which in so many instances carry the victim far beyond these limits, producing results which are to be described as we proceed—results not confined to the individual, but extending to his associates, to his family, to society and to his offspring, to after generations. If the pleasure of this moderate indulgence were much greater it could not compensate for the danger to the individual, and the injury of the example to others which such a drinking custom would inflict.

The New England Magazine for April contains several notable articles on subjects, which cannot but interest, not only New Englanders, but all Americans. Mr. James Shepard has an intelligent and comprehensive article entitled "The United States Patent System" and the fourth paper by Prof. J. F. Jameson, Ph. D. on "The History of Historical Writing in America" appears in this number. "A Fair Exchange," Dorothy Prescott's serial is continued and its interest increases every month.

BRINGING HER TO TIME. One little Indian boy who attends school at Indian Island, Old Town, Me., takes an intelligent interest in his lessons and does not simply learn them by rote. The teacher had been giving instructions in punctuation, and closed by saying emphatically: "Now, when you come to a period you must stop." A little black eyed girl then commenced to read, and went on in a reckless manner, regardless of the period in question, whereupon the fat bright little Indian boy poked her in the ribs and electrified the school by yelling lustily, "Whoa!" He grasped the situation.—Detroit Free Press.

☞The first coins struck by the United States Mint were some half-dimes, in 1792; the first dimes were struck in France from old silver family plate furnished by Washington, the coins being known as "Martha Washington Dismes," from the circumstance as noted, and in adaption of the Liberty head to that of Martha Washington.

Boston Amusements.

Boston Museum.

The greatest hit—and a laughing one too, made in many years, is found in "New Lamps for Old," produced the 30th ult. It is drawing crowded and most enthusiastic audiences, and could carry the 50th season triumphantly to its close. The Boston press are unanimous in pronouncing it clever, original, unique, amusing, hilarious and, what is rarest of all, for a piece of this character, intellectually bright. Notwithstanding this great success, there should be no delay in seeing "New Lamps for Old," as Mr. Field announces a new play by Sydney Grundy for this season.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Mr. William H. Crane, as Hon. Hannibal Rivers, "The Senator" is playing to full houses nightly at the Hollis. The play is truly American and its praise is repeated over and over again at each performance. "The Senator" will be with us but one week more and all should make it a point to see it before it is withdrawn. Julia Marlowe is announced for April 20.

Boston Theatre.

"A Midnight Bell," that good, old-fashioned play, will run but one week longer. The old red schoolhouse, the pretty teacher, Deacon Tidd, and many characters typical of New England life, have won the hearts of the people and attracts large audiences. Sunday evening, May 3, special trains will be run by the Old Colony to and from Quincy for a grand benefit concert to be given at the Boston theatre.

—The famous Snow-Alley case is again on trial; this time at Barnstable. Hon. E. C. Bumpus of this city appears for the plaintiff.

—Holbrook will try a superintendent of schools this year, having accepted Chap. 431 of the acts of 1888 on Monday. Five hundred dollars was appropriated.

The Old Stone Walls.

Who were they—the builders
Of the many gray old walls
That checker all New England o'er,
Where'er the vision falls?
They part the hills and valleys,
The meadows and the plains,
And journey with us as we go
Through woods and shady lanes.

Mile after mile of gray stone wall,
Left for our eyes today;
But the active busy builders,
We wonder who were they?
Moss grown, their work is left behind,—
'Twas neatly done and well;
But years ago the builders
Vanished from hill and dell.

Of hopes and fears that filled their minds,
As they worked day by day,
We in this age of rush and steam
Can little know or say.
They heard no steamer's whistle,
No railroad train rush by.
Instead, they peered among the trees,
For foes were lurking nigh.

Their guns were lying near them,
For wolf and wild-cat strayed
At large among the brake and fern
Within the forest shade.
The hands that worked and piled these stones,
For years have lain at rest,
As one by one they left their homes
To mingle with the blest.

Each mossy stone within these walls,
Laid up with skilful care,
A phonograph, where we may read
A thought of then and there.
No sacred creeds, no household loves,
These silent walls betray;
The mirthful song, the ribald jest,
With them have passed away.

They were our kind and kindred,
Who builded here their homes,
And labored hard to clear the land
Of forest trees and stones;
They were a rugged, hardy race,
And well they paved the way
For us to reap and garner in Abundant sheaves today.

Miscellany.

P. Q. R.

"P. Q. R., Miss Russell! I had never noticed your initials ran so."

"Yes. Wouldn't you think I might have them to myself? But I don't; there is another Priscilla Q. Russell in town. Our letters are continually mixed."

"Do you know her?"

"No," contemptuously. "She lives somewhere at the End."

"What a strange prejudice it is that you 'Old Towners' have against the poor dwellers in the other wards. Can you explain it?"

"I can do better than explain it. I can show you a letter I forgot to return to the postman."

As the girl rose to find the letter, it occurred to Clarke that reading thus unceremoniously a note intended for another was scarcely honorable. But in the same moment he reflected that it was hardly possible to say so to Miss Russell. He had, besides, but that moment, for the note was lying on the table, and the girl, taking it from its envelope, handed it to him open.

Somehow reluctantly the young fellow took it.

BINGHAM, April 12th.

DEAR PRIS—Will meet you Friday, at 7.45 P. M., at lamp-post top of Park street.
Yours, ROB.

"She lives at the 'End,'" said Miss Russell with scornful emphasis.

"It is probably some servant-girl."

"It may be. But it is hardly pleasant to have my letters mixed with that creature's."

And Miss Russell, with a shrug of her shoulder, tossed the note back on to the table.

Some ten days later, at a small private gathering, Clarke having just entered the room, his host, casting a comprehensive glance around, took him by the arm.

"I am going to introduce you to that pretty girl over there; the one in the white dress. Consider yourself fortunate, my boy. She is a rising belle. I give you the start. May you profit by it—Miss Russell, may I introduce my friend and college chum, Mr. Clarke? Mr. Clarke, Miss Russell."

And the dapper little Wendell moved lightly off, leaving his friend bowing to a slender girl, with soft brown hair, long-lashed gray eyes, and almost colorless face.

"An insipid novel reader," Clarke decided mentally; Harvard-post graduates being somewhat given to rash judgments. Aloud he said;

"From what Wendell tells me, Miss Russell, you have not been long in Bingham?"

"Three months. But I already begin to feel quite at home."

"Indeed? I have heard many say that Bingham is a hard place in which to get acquainted. You have evidently not found it so."

"No. But I am speaking not so much of acquaintances as of my own feelings. Do you think that it is going much into society that makes one feel at home in a place?"

The gray eyes were turned on Clarke with such a depth of inquiry that the young man suddenly recalled his rash judgment.

"Well—I don't know. That depends I suppose. What—may I ask? What has made you feel at home?"

The girl smiled reflectively.

"I can hardly say. Perhaps, as much as anything, my work with the boys."

"The boys?"

"Yes. Surely you know the Union for the working boy? I go there to help entertain them. At home we had something very similar. I think I missed it as much as anything when I first came to Bingham."

Here was a subject to enlist the attention of the divinity student. Clarke and his new acquaintance were soon absorbed in its discussion.

Miss Russell's heart was in her work; her face kindled as she spoke of her experiences. Some were very droll, and her eyelids drew together merrily as she told them; but there were also some piteous little tales, and in the telling of them, her gray eyes grew unaffectedly moist.

Clarke listened and looked.

"What a Madonna-like face!" he thought, forgetting entirely his first estimate.

"You must visit the association, Mr. Clarke. It is open every evening. I am there Thursday, and I will be glad to show you everything. I should be particularly glad to enlist you," she added with a low laugh and so dextrous an emphasis that Clarke was unable to place it.

"Thank you. I shall certainly go."

One rainy Thursday, almost a year later, as the rooms of the Union were being closed for the night, Clarke stood holding Miss Russell's umbrella while she drew on her gloves. Noting a monogram on the round top of the silver handle, he raised it to the light.

"R, for Russell," he said, trying to decipher it, and Q, for queer, and—"

"And a P for pert, Mr. Clarke. Come, my gloves are on, and if you mean to escort me home, you had better start. John is closing."

And Miss Russell, gathering up her skirts, started down the long stairs softly humming a song that the boys had been practicing. Fortunately she could not see the expression on Clark's face as he slowly followed, nor read in his chaotic thoughts.

"R. Q. P., P. Q. R. How strange! But she doesn't live at the 'End.'"

And Priscilla Russell, during the short walk, wondered what had happened to her usually talkative friend. She would have been decidly astonished to see the whirl of thought in poor Clarke's brain, and know his sense as of loss as he walked hurriedly back to his rooms, his hands in his pockets and his soft hat slouched over his face.

Once behind his locked door he sank gloomily into a chair. He was too much startled to think very clearly; only the letters P. Q. R. danced imp-like through his brain.

"That note," he growled, "that note!"

And the frown on his face grew if possibie, deeper.

"There must be three of them. Three Priscilla Q. Russells! What nonsense! It must be the same one. Pshaw! How can it be? A girl like that! Perhaps it was a brother. But she hasn't any. I asked her once."

So much distressed was Clarke by the idea that his friend might be the "Pris" of the unfortunate little note, that his last conscious thought that night, was a resolve to call the next day on the gray-eyed one and ask her if the note had been intended for her.

He called in fact, but found if was no such easy matter to ask a beautiful and exquisitely bred girl if she had ever met a man at 7.45 P. M. under a lamp post. Indeed, after the first few moments that passed awkwardly enough for him—he decided that he had been a fool the night before; and that the town was evidently full of Priscillas.

It was unfortunate that this explanation lost its plausibility on his return, while the note seemed photographed on his memory. Miss Russell must be "Pris."

The next Thursday evening Clarke did not appear to entertain the news and errand boys. Poor Priscilla assailed on all sides, thought she had never seen her proteges behave so badly. The air too had never seemed so fetid. Her head ached dully, and it was slowly and mechanically that after the boys had been dismissed, she helped put the rooms in order.

She started nervously on hearing Clarke's voice behind her.

"Let me assist you, Miss Russell. You have too many books there."

"Mr. Clark! You here!"

"Yes, and should have been before. My head ached so that I feared I could not stand the noise. But I grew better and here I am."

Inwardly he lashed himself for his deceit.

Priscilla looked at him pityingly. She passed the palm of her hand slowly over her forehead.

"I can sympathize with you; I too have a headache tonight."

Clarke's heart smote him. How could he have left her to do his share of the work.

"Really," he asked anxiously, "I fear I am to blame for it. You have had too much to do for one. I was selfish in not coming.

She shook her head gently, while her white lids dropped heavily under his troubled and remorseful glance.

"It was the air in here, I shall be all right by the time I reach home."

"May I help you to reach it?"

"Certainly."

But the girl chilled as she gave the permission. Of late, it had been a matter of course that he should walk home with her. And Clarke, on his way home was not proud of himself.

"I can't stand this," he muttered, "I must do something; this sort of thing can't last. Here I can't stay away from her three days, and yet whenever I do, I can think of nothing but that confounded note. Perhaps it was a cousin, though I never heard of any. Still it was a vulgar thing to do. What a fool I am! How do I know she did it? A girl like that doesn't do such things. But how did he dare suggest it? Oh, hang it all!"

And William Clarke passed a more uncomfortable night than he had yet known.

For the next few weeks, Priscilla was much puzzled by the young fellow's manner.

Several times she had caught him watching her with an almost bewildered air. She was perplexed and also troubled by the under-current of thought she felt in him.

They met one evening at the remarkable Bingham institution, known as the "Coffee Party," perhaps because as far back as man remembers, there has never been there a drop of coffee. As the two paused after the waltz, Clarke asked abruptly.

"Miss Russell, what would you think of a girl that would meet a man at 7.45 P. M., under a lamp-post?"

The girl looked quickly up at him, but with such genuine perplexity and amusement that the young man flushed for shame, and hastily excused himself.

Toward midnight, as he was moving with her in the slow crush back to the dressing-room, she said, suddenly:

"Oh, Mr. Clarke! My sister and her husband arrive from California tomorrow. They stay two week. I hope you will meet them. You will like them I know, and we should be glad to have you call."

"I thank you."

"My sister is delightful; I am almost silly in my admiration for her. But you may enjoy Rob more."

"Rob!"

The girl took the exclamation for a question.

"Yes; my brother-in-law. Rob and I are great friends. He is very jolly and pleasant and intellectual as well. I want you to meet him."

"I want to meet him," answered the poor fellow with deep emphasis.

A few days later Clark made the acquaintance of Miss Russell's brother and sister, and was much pleased with them, and called again the next evening. This time, however, he asked only for Miss Priscilla.

She came in, holding out her hand, smiling, a little astonished, but not ill-pleased, at this second call so near the previous one.

"Sit down. I am glad to see you."

"No; I have a confession to make. I prefer to do it standing."

Priscilla had ssated herself in a broad, low arm chair, her hands lying easily in her lap. A faint flush rose in her cheeks, but she gave no other sign.

Clarke had clasped his hands behind his back and was walking nervously up and down. After some moments of deliberation he plunged recklessly into his piteous little tale of doubt. He told as best he could the emotions and feelings of their acquaintance, and when he paused for lack of breath, Priscilla, who had sat very still, said slowly, and without looking up, while a tremor shook her soft contralto voice:

"If you had only told me, you might have been saved all that. The note, as you know now, was only from Rob, and it was mamma as well as myself he was to meet."

"But how could I ask such a thing?"

For a moment she did not speak. When she did it was still slowly, but with a repressed exultation in her tone.

"You are right; you could not ask it. And yet many a young fellow would have done it, and thought it a good joke."

He looked down into her upraised eyes. They were filled with tears; but they were not angry, they were wonderfully tender.

"Priscilla! Can you forgive me for such thought, such waverings? Can you love me after all?"

The smile that answered made him stagger for dizziness.

"Yes! And better for it all. You would not have been the man I love if your instincts had been less delicate, less refined."

And she put both her hands in his.—Yankee Blade.

She Brushed Them Off the Chair.

It is true that within past years the man who indulged frequently in clean collars and polished boots took upon himself, in certain circles, the awful responsibility of being regarded as a "dude." But a genuine representative of the game was at a Saturday matinee and he had just disposed of a pair of tan gloves on a vacant seat at his side when a pretty young woman sat deliberately upon the chair in question and struck up a sprightly conversation with her companion. The young man seemed to suffer keenly during the first act, and when the curtain fell a purpose seemed to be dimly seeking utterance from his lips. He rose, as though to leave the theatre, fumbled his hat and overcoat, flushed a deep dark, beautiful red and gazed at his pretty neighbor, who seemed to be distinctly annoyed by his attention.

Finally he had amassed sufficient courage to address her, and, with a look of almost human intelligence, asked:

"I—eh—beg youah pawdn—eh—but—yah—sitting—on me glawves, yah knaw!"

The young woman adjusted a silver lorgnette and eyed him frigidly.

"You are entirely mistaken, sir. I brushed them off on the floor when I sat down."

And the orchestra began to play an old Scotch air.

His Figures Lied.

"Say!" began a teamster, as he entered a grocery on Grand River avenue, "I want you to do a little figuring for me."

"Well?"

"I worked for a man five days at $2.75 per day. How much is that?"

"That's $13.75."

"Well, he paid me $9.25. How much was the balance?"

"Why, $4.50, of course."

"Sure about that?"

"Certainly. How else can you figure it?"

"I made it $7."

"Then you are 'way off. How did the other man make it?"

"Same as you, but"—

"But what?"

"Why, I called him a liar and a fraud and punched his head, and I have just paid a fine of $15 in the police court! Hang this new way of figuring, anyhow!"—Detroit Free Press.

All the Same.

"I have called in reply to your ad. of man wanted to dig a cellar by the day," he explained as he walked into a commission house on Woodbridge street the other day.

"But that wasn't my ad.," replied the man addressed.

"No?"

"I advertised for an energetic, go ahead man to take partnership in the business."

"Oh, that's it. Well sir, it's all the same to me, being I'm here, and I'll sit down while you make out the papers!"—Detroit Free Press.

Experientia Docet.

The Sunday school teacher had just read the story of the bringing to life of the son of the widow of Nain, and then began to ask questions to see if her scholars had understood what she had read.

"In the first place, let me see if any of you can tell me what a widow is."

There was a long silence. Finally a small boy spoke:—"I know, 'cos my mother's one. It's a lady what takes in washing."—Sun.

IT CERTAINLY WAS GREASE. Two young men, while walking beneath an elevated railway in a town which shall be nameless, were appalled to find themselves the recipients of a bucketful of oily liquid dropped from an engine above their heads.

"Bah!" said one of them, with an angry glance upward. "So this is free America!"

"You are wrong," said the other, ruefully wiping his coat; "it's Greece."—Harper's for January.

For the Patriot.

Another Trip.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON,—NO. 1.

Yours very cordial "Let us hear from you," is the incentive for this rambling sketch from my note book.

At seven o'clock on the evening of April 10, in an "elegant pullman buffet sleeping car," I found myself parting company with the "Hub" and the far from elegant New York and New England depot, going over "the fastest and most luxurious route" to Washington. This is indeed a favorite route for by it there is no vexatious delay in changing cars in New York, and crossing by ferry to Jersey City, but the change is made while you are asleep, by the transfer steamer Maryland, taking cars and all across the Harlem river.

It was 6.40 A. M., when the train arrived in Philadelphia, and forty minutes later when it left. During this brief interim I made my toilet preparatory to appearing on the platform,—of the depot. Arrived in Washington at 10.45, which gave me a little over an hour in which to get my dinner and get ready to take the train south, over the "Piedmont air line" for Lynchburg.

I had bought my ticket through from Boston to L., but when I undertook to pass the big fellow at the gate in the Baltimore and Potomac depot at Washington, I was told that it would be "necessary to secure another ticket at the ticket office" before I could "pass out at that gate." As the official weighed about one-eighth of a ton, and completely filled the space between the highly polished brass rails at the gate's entrance, I "stood not upon the order of my going" but at once sought an interview with the vender of tickets. That "interview" cost me three dollars, or just about a dollar a minute, for it was nearly three minutes long, but in return I got an extensive strip of pasteboard headed, "accommodations in pullman vestibuled car," "the Washington and South Western limited," etc.

This time with "grip," kodak and umbrella in one hand, and my two tickets in the other, I succeeded in satisfying the gate man that what Solomon had said about a certain individual "and his money" being "soon parted," was true, and he let me pass. The train was indeed "superb," being composed entirely of pullman cars.

With a whole section to myself, and in fact nearly the whole train,—for there were but few passengers,—there was some attendant bowing or courtesying to me almost during the entire afternoon. What with the conductor,—who by the way was a first-class guide book,—one white brakeman, a colored steward, the porters and a good looking porteress, with a lot of puckered up white lace tied about her head, I had no lack of attention.

Near one of the stations where we stopped, a base ball match was in progress. It was a colored club. I did hope the train would wait long enough for me to see the fellow at the bat make "first base," but it didn't. A wooden "stump" had taken the place of the right foot he had in some way lost; this "stump" being attached to the knee of the dismembered limb. In my excitement to see him run, I momentarily forgot the "slight additional fare" I had so lately parted company with, and really enjoyed the scene, but I was doomed to disappointment; I might as well have been "color-blind." If the sun had been out I should have taken a "snap shot," and photographed the truth of the picture.

Between the cloudy intervals I had occasion to use the camera several times. All at once, with scarcely a moment's warning we were in the midst of a heavy shower; it lasted not over five minutes and we were out into the sunlight again. Further up the mountains we met another, yes several tremendous showers, accompanied by thunder, lightning and hail.

Over the sides of the deep cuts through which we passed, the water poured like an avalanche, while the track was in many instances completely submerged, and the ditches turned into miniature rivers. Hail stones were as big as eggs and covered the ground inches deep, and yet while all this was taking place the sun was shining, and the "bow set in the clouds" formed a picture of marvelous beauty.

At 5.20 Saturday, the train with its retinue of anything but giltless attendants, drew up at the depot in Lynchburg and I took for the present, a last look at the "Regulars," "Diplomate" and "Chancelor," the three cars in which I had spent the afternoon, and I said to myself as I stepped into the Norwell-Arlington buss, "not so very dear after all, only a dollar a piece."

Trueworthy C. Horne.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3, 1891.

To the Publishers of the Patriot:

A few words of respect to the memory of the late Trueworthy C. Horne.

It was with deep regret that I read of the sad accident in the PATRIOT a few weeks ago, which occurred to Mr. Horne in Attleboro, and have been watching the paper ever since, fearing that it would prove fatal on account of his age, and just now I see the account of his death. It is therefore becoming at this time for one who was so well acquainted with him, to take this opportunity of expressing my feelings in a few words to those who are nearest to him, and I feel sure will be sanctioned by every man who had the pleasure of working under him, when he was foreman for the late Charles R. Mitchell, at South Quincy monumental works. He was always good and kind. I never heard him speak a cross or unpleasant word to any of his men, even when he had cause to do so. I am glad to say that I served my apprenticeship under his guidance. May his soul rest in peace.

"Not Well Posted."

To the Editors of the Patriot;

Your correspondent, in an article in last week's PATRIOT, under the above heading, seems to have an entirely wrong conception as to the meaning of a communication in a previous issue of that paper in regard to the distribution of flowers by one of our churches on Easter Sunday. It was not a matter of being well posted. The writer simply mentioned a case which came under his personal observation, and accordingly, under the circumstances, gave "honor to whom honor is due."

It is sometimes surprising and often times very amusing to see how hard it is for some people to hear others well spoken of. They can no more bear to hear other people praised, however deservedly, than can an already infuriated bull to have a red flag flaunted before him. But then, it is human nature, I suppose. God help such people! They are to be pitied.

OBSERVER.

Cloth of a Spiders' Web.

Perhaps the most novel idea in the textile line is that of an Englishman named Stilbers, who, it is said, has actually made a cloth of spiders' web which has been employed for purpose of surgery. A gentleman travelling through the country, who recently stopped in Washington, stated that this man Stilbers has gone quite extensively into this spider-web cloth making.

The spiders are obtained from tropical countries, mostly from Africa and South America, and are very large. A peculiar feature of the business is that the spiders spin the best web when they are intoxicated. To accomplish this, a liquid composed of chloroform ether and fusel oil is allowed slowly to evaporate in the room where the spiders are housed, and they are thus kept constantly in a mild state of intoxication. The temperature of the atmosphere is maintained at 60 degrees Fahrenheit. These little creatures, which are usually so heartily despised, are placed in octagonal cases, and are fed daily on smaller insects of various kinds. In one room there are some 5000 of these cases. The spiders lay their eggs, and about the latter spin cocoons. These cocoons are gathered and prepared for weaving by some such chemical and mechanical processes as are undergone by the cocoon of the silkworm. The process of the weaving itself is a closely guarded secret. Each cocoon is said to yield twenty-five to one-hundred yards of thread. The texture of the woven material resembles somewhat ordinary silk, and after it is bleached it becomes brilliant and smooth.—Washington Star.

An Interesting Opinion.

A lady—we shall not tell her name—had a most amusing experience with Benjamin P. Hutchinson the other day. This lady is deeply interested in charitable work, and ever and anon she lends herself to the disagreeable task of soliciting money contributions to such worthy causes as she may happen to have in hand. This is rather ungrateful employment, but this lady applies herself cheerfully to it, for she recognizes it as a part of her Christian duty. It befell that this worthy woman had occasion to approach Mr. Hutchinson the other afternoon, and she did so in the spirit of charming good nature, which is, perhaps, her most conspicuous characteristic.

Now Mr. Hutchinson is a wary bird, and seldom it is that he is caught in a corner by anybody. But this particular lady was so exceptionally bright and exuberant that the crafty millionaire gave up a crisp $20 bill almost before he was aware of it. And then, as we can easily suppose, he began to regret it. On her part the fair solicitor was considerably surprised; she had heard that he was a hard, unfeeling man, yet had not he responded promptly and generously to her appeal? She was so grateful that she insisted on shaking hands with the old man, and as she did so she remarked feelngly, "We do not always get our reward here, Mr. Hutchinson, but we should remember that the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

"Yes, I've often heerd tell," answered Mr. Hutchinson dryly, "but I'm more interested in findin' out the Lord's opinion of a cheerful beggar."—Chicago News.

Letters M on the Dollar.

There is a popular idea prevalent that the minute letter "M" to be seen at the base of liberty on the face of the present issue of silver dollars stands for "Mint," and is an evidence of the genuineness of the coin bearing it. This is a mistake, says the Philadelphia Record. The "M" stands for Morgan, George T. Morgan, who is the originator of the design. Upon the same side there is another "M," also the initial of the designer. This is to be found in the waving locks of the fair goddess and is so cleverly concealed in the lines of the design that it can only be seen after a long scrutiny. A prominent mint official, in speaking of this other initial, said that he had had it shown to him scores of times, but could never find it unassisted.

An Indian's Wit.

Stephen Badger, who was for many years a missionary among the Natick Indians, relates, in a letter rescued from oblivion and published, a story showing that even the stolid red man has in him a streak of humor.

He recounts that an Indian of Natick once bought some rum at a shop in Boston, and the next spring at the same shop found the price had doubled. The dealer explained that he had had to keep the flask over winter, and it was as expensive to keep as a horse. The Naticks were, unhappily, only too good judges of the strength of rum. "Hugh!" replied the Indian, "he no eat so much hay, but I believe he drink as much water."

Claimants for His Property.

A family Bible, which was buried under the head of Susanah Randall, of Easton, who died in 1866, has been dug up and removed, the town authorities granting a license. It was not seriously decayed. The family records in it established the right of Lewis Randall to the property of Isaac Phillips, who died in 1834, leaving a large fortune, most of which is still on deposit in the Manhattan bank, New York city. Phillips has no immediate family, and Randall and other relatives now lay claim to his property in the Manhattan bank, and in St. Stephens, Ala. The latter property is held by a man whose title to it is very imperfect, it is said.

Plain Spoken.

Ralph Waldo Emerson addressed, thirty years ago, a literary society, during commencement, at Middlebury, Vt., and when he ended the president called upon a clergyman to conclude the service with prayer. Then arose a Massachusetts minister, who stepped into the pulpit Mr. Emerson had just left and uttered a remarkable prayer, of which this was one sentence: "We beseech thee, O Lord, to deliver us from hearing any more such transcendental nonsense as we have just listened to from this sacred desk." After the benediction, Mr. Emerson asked his next neighbor the name of the officiating clergyman, and when falteringly answered, with gentle symplicity remarked, "He seemed a very conscientious, plain-spoken man," and went on his peaceful way.

There are 200 women preachers in the United States who have been ordained during the latter part of the present progressive century.

At Danbury, Conn., in 1880, 6,000,000 hats were made.

The Granite Fountain.

The fountain is growing into shape, and the fountain fund getting gradually larger. It is to make both assume completion simultaneously that a fine and lengthy programme by Miss Hardwick of Chestnut street has been arranged. A limited number of tickets obliges those who wish to go to secure them early, either of Mr. John O. Holden or of the committee. The admission price is fifty cents. A programme of a male quartette, a singer from the Church of the Advent choir, another—a tenor—from the Apollo Club, a lady soloist, Miss Gurney as reader and a little comedy will necessitate a prompt beginning.

These gatherings are valuable in a social way, as well as to enable the work for the fountain to go along. Friends are cordially invited to help make this as much of a success as Mrs. King's entertainment proved.

The committee on tickets for Monday evening are Mrs. King, Mrs. Sanborn, Mrs. Sproul, Mrs. Faxon and Mrs. Stetson.

At the society's meeting, Monday evening, Mrs. Babcock was chosen to confer with Mr. Aldrich in relation to Arbor day.

St. John's Ball.

St. John's C. L. and A. A. held its seventh annual entertainment and ball at the Coliseum Wednesday evening.

The invited guests were Hon. Henry O. Fairbanks, Mayor of Quincy; president of council, James Thompson; J. J. Byron, President of Division 5, A. O. H.; John Vogel, Chief Ranger of St. Francis court of Foresters; Thomas D. McGrath, president of St. Mary's C. T. A. society; John H. Dinegan, Chief Ranger of Quincy Court of Foresters; George Cahill, president of Irish National Land League; Rev. Frs. Frigulietti and Cuff; James Copeland, chief of Clan McGregor; Mr. C. E. Foster, Mr. J. W. McAnarney, Mr. R. F. Claflin, Dr. J. A. Gordon, Dr. J. M. Sheahan, Mr. Herbert M. Federhen, Representative, Josiah Quincy; Mr. James H. Slade; Commissioner of Public Works, W. Walter Ewell; Mr. James R. O'Riley, of Mattapan, and J. J. Cuniff, President of the Atlantic Young Men's Lyceum Representative James F. Burke, chief Engineer, Walter H. Ripley.

The entertainment was given by a minstrel company composed of some of Quincy's well known young men, and consisted of solos intermingled with the usual number of jokes by the end men. This closed with a laughable farce entitled "Wanted, a male Cook." The floor was then cleared for dancing which commenced at 11 o'clock, the grand march being led by Chief Marshal M. H. Garrity and Miss Garrity, Mayor Fairbanks and Miss Annie Cahill, Chief Ripley and Mrs. Ripley and a hundred or more gaily dressed ladies and gallant gentlemen.

The ball once in motion the festivities were not allowed to lag, and the only stop was at the end of the seventh number when Nash served one of his tempting spreads in the upper hall. This over dancing was resumed until a late hour.

The floor was in charge of M. H. Garrity assisted by P. W. Driscoll, George Cahill, Peter J. Cahill and an efficient corps of aids, while the reception committee consisted of M. H. Garrity, Andrew Keuin, John Lyons, James O'Donovan and George Cahill.

In Memoriam.

It was with feeling of sadness that we learned of the sudden death, from pneumonia, of Mr. Hiram W. Blanchard on Monday morning, for although he had reached the ripe age of eighty years, he apparently seemed to enjoy the best of health, being out in all kinds of weather. Often when it has stormed the hardest the past winter, Mr. Blanchard has dropped in to wait for a car or to bring an item for the PATRIOT. He was always a frequent and welcome visitor at this office, and his writings are familiar to all of our readers.

He was a native of Quincy, but has passed the last forty-three years of his life in Neponset. In early life he was a carpenter and builder, but of late years has interested himself in insurance, being agent for the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Dorchester Insurance Company of Neponset. At the second annual meeting of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, held April 7, 1852, Mr. Blanchard was elected a director and has been on the board ever since, attending punctually all meetings of the board and looking faithfully after the interests of the Company.

He was a pronounced abolitionist and was intimately associated, during the anti-slavery days, with Garrison, Phillips and others of that movement, and to the day of his death enjoyed writing and talking on the subject.

Mr. Blanchard was related to some of the oldest families in Quincy, and having a remarkably good memory was always ready with some interesting bit of history, and his reminiscences will be greatly missed from the columns of the PATRIOT and neighboring papers.

He leaves a widow and two sons, to whom we extend our deepest sympathy.

Fires.

The alarm from Box 46 at 2.55 o'clock last Saturday, was for a fire in the two story house on Copeland street, owned and occupied by Michael McGovern.

When discovered the fire had made good headway, and before it was extinguished the house was completely gutted and the furniture was badly damaged.

The loss on the building is estimated at $600, and on furniture and clothing, $200. The building was insured in the North America Fire Insurance Co., for $750.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have been rats and matches, and must have been burning some hours before it broke out as people passing through Copeland street at 10 o'clock noticed a strong smell of smoke but nothing was thought of it until Mr. McGovern was awakened to find his house all afire. The aged couple lost nearly all of their clothing.

The alarm at 1.16 Sunday afternoon from Box 34, corner of Union and Main streets, was for the burning of an outhouse at the residence of Mr. Nelson C. Hersey on Union street. Although it had made considerable headway, it was quickly extinguished by sill cock streams. The Steamer was on the spot in three minutes after the giving of the alarm. Remarkably quick time, although a gentleman was heard to remark that the Steamer was rather late.

Arbor Day Appointed

In accordance with chap. 32, resolves of 1886, the Governor has set apart Saturday, April 25, as Arbor day, "to be observed by the people of the Commonwealth in the planting of trees, shrubs and vines, in the promotion of forest growth and culture, in the adornment of public and private grounds places and ways, and in such other efforts as shall be in harmony with the general character of the day so established."

He however soon recovered, and not being much injured was sent back to Boston.

One of the prettiest dancing school exhibitions ever given in Quincy was that by the pupils of Mrs. Buffum, at Robertson hall, Wednesday evening. Long before 8 o'clock the hall was filled, and many had to stand, showing again the need of a larger hall in Quincy. The fancy dances were by the little people, and very cunning they were, too,—and how well they did! Each dance was in costume, and it seemed make groups of fairies. At the close of the exhibition, dancing was enjoyed by all until midnight. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening by Caterer Wales.

A very pretty coming out party was given at Robertson hall Monday evening by Mrs. James Edwards in honor of her son, Mr William Edwards, who has just attained his majority. Lambeth Choir.

A small audience greeted Lambeth's Scotch choir from Glasgow at the Coliseum Thursday evening. The choir is an excellent one, and is composed of eight voices, four male and four female. The programme as arranged included a score of numbers, which was extended in response to the demands of the audience, those present seeming never to tire of the singers and their songs.

The part songs, "Wae's Me for Prince Charlie," "Scots Wha' Hae," "Caller Herrin'," "Green Grow the Rashes," and "O, Hush Thee, My Babie," were particularly pleasing, and the arrangement of some of these melodies showed the excellent skill and taste of the conductor.

DECEASED. Mr. Royal W. Turner, one of Randolph's most respected citizens, died in Washington, D. C. on Thursday. Mr. Turner was a native of Randolph. He was one of the corporators of the Randolph Savings Bank and president of the Randolph National Bank. To him the town is indebted for the Turner Free Library, he being instrumental in carrying out the wishes of his father.

Mr. Turner has been a director of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company since 1852 and is the second director this company has lost by death within a week. It is quite singular that he and Mr. Blanchard were first elected at the same annual meeting and died within a few days of each other. The only director now living, who was elected at the same meeting, is ex-Councilman Thomas Curtis.

Personal.

The parishioners of the West Quincy Methodist church were much surprised, and grieved to hear that the recent conference had sent their pastor, Rev. W. F. Lawford to Newburyport. Mr, Lawford and his estimable wife have been very popular with the people of the church, who, while they feel sorry to loose them, are pleased to hear that they are to be pleasantly located, and feel sure that he will find many warm friends in this new home, to where they send him, with the wish that may enjoy all health and happiness in the future.

Death of Horace Johnson.

Mr. Horace Johnson a well known and highly respected citizen of West Quincy, died at his home Thursday, after a brief illness, aged 71 years.

Mr. Johnson was born in New Hampshire, and at the age of thirteen years he left home and went to learn the stone business and so rapidly did he acquire the business that he was made a foreman when but sixteen years of age. In 1842 he became foreman of the O. T. Rogers Granite Company, where he remained until 1849, when he went to California, where he remained some three years.

Returning home he again entered the granite business and became foreman of the Wigwam quarry at West Quincy. In 1867 he entered the employ of the Granite Railway as foreman, which position he held up to the time of his death, having been in all foreman for fifty-four years, and had the reputation of being one of the best workman in Quincy. He leaves a widow and two daughter.

The Atlantic Young Men's Lyceum Club give an entertainment and dance at Music hall Friday evening, April 25.

Frank Hatch has opened his house at Atlantic beach, and will be on deck to receive callers Wednesday afternoons.

Squantum Lodge, No. 4, Reliable Fellowship, is the name of a new order which promises to pay two dollars for one, that was instituted at Atlantic, last Saturday evening.

Stocker, the PATRIOT agent at Atlantic has put in a new soda fountain and this summer will serve ice cream soda to the young men and their best girls.

The Merry Mount Yacht Club have not announced their fixtures for the coming season as yet, but Commodore Lathrop says they will in a few days.

Edward Millett is endeavoring to learn the tonsorial business of McVey.

The barn on Billings street, recently occupied by Timberlake & Small, is being altered over into a carpenter shop for WhittierBros.

The need of a later train to Boston has been felt in Atlantic many times since the Public hall was opened, and Wednesday night was no exception. Many numbers in the minstrel show were cut short, so much so as to greatly mar their effect, and a perfect scramble followed to catch the 10.30 train into Boston. A train at eleven o'clock is much needed all along the line.

The item in the LEDGER last week stating that the Methodist could not worship in Atlantic in consequence of exhorbitant charges for a suitable place, might cast some reflections on the Atlantic Social club, were not the facts known. Application it seems was made to them, and a good room capable of seating one hundred was tendered for two dollars a Sunday; the same to be heated and kept in good order by the janitor. As this would hardly cover the running expenses the exhorbitant charge does not seem to appear.

The assemblies of the Social club that have been so very popular during the winter will close with a grand novelty party on the evening of Friday, May 1st, and a very jolly time is looked for.

Wollaston, Quincy, Dorchester and Boston were largely represented at the minstrel show, and it was an audience to be proud of.

John T. Pope, the real estate broker at 35 Congress street, Boston, has sold 10,587 feet of land on Appleton street, to a Mr. Stewart, of Boston, for five cents per foot cash.

Atlantic Minstrels.

The announcement that a number of the members of the Atlantic Social Club would blacken their faces and give a minstrel entertainment at Music hall, Wednesday evening, was enough to fill the hall with a large number of Atlantic's 400 who were well repaid, and the numerous jokes sprung by the end men, kept them in constant laughter throughout the evening.

The performance opened with an overture on the "bones and tambo" and the opening chorus "Hear Dem Bells," by the company.

Interlocutor, Mr. B. Frank Thomas in full evening dress; Daggett, Pratt, Curtin, Carver, Owen, Carey, Emerson, bones; C. Reed, Coe, Palmer, Tyler, Hall, Merrick, Read, tambo.

These wore striped flannel shirts with a large scarf tie and blackened faces with the exception of Mr. Emerson, who was in full dress. Mr. Reed in matter of costume was gotten up regardless, and was beyond description. Mr. H. H. Bemis, accompanist.

Following was the programme:

"Sadie Ray,"	W. H. Owen
"Norinne Maurine,"	George L. Pratt
"Fly, Little Children, Fly,"	H. W. Read
"Old Rustic Bridge,"	J. E. Curtin
"Down Deep within the Cellar,"	W. H. Palmer
"A Very Doleful Tale,"	Emerson
"Far from the Old Home,"	Carey
"My Dearest Heart,"	Daggett
"Zylophone Solo,"	Cater
Song, "Trusting,"—Atlantic Trio,	Owen, Daggett, Reed
"Economy, Women and War,"	Emerson
"Collection of Chestnuts,"	Jamaica Quartette
"Jig,"	J. E. Curtin
Cat Duett,—"Tom and Dolly,"	G. A. Daggett as Dolly C. W. Reed as Tom
"Ledger de Massachusetts,"	Emerson's own Creation

The several numbers were generally encored, to which the artists generally responded.

Number three, the solo by Mr. H. W. Read was so pleasing that he was presented with a cabbage. Number four, a solo by Mr. J. E. Curtin, called forth for him a bouquet and sunflower. In part two the jig by Mr. Curtin called forth tremendous applause, for although Mr. Curtin had not danced this jig for fifteen years he had not forgotten how to do it, and proved it to the audience.

At the close of the entertainment the members of the club were entertained with refreshments by Dr. W. G. Kendall.

One of the most interested, as well as interesting persons in the audience was Mr. Leopold Gerard, the Canadian guide, who accompanies Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Kendall on their annual hunting and fishing trip in the Maine and Canada woods. He had never before witnessed a minstrel show, and a study of the different expressions on his face was only second in interest to the performance on the stage, although the only criticism he could be induced to make was "just my luck not to have brought my gun."

Boom in Real Estate.

There is a perfect boom in real estate and thousands of rent payers in crowded Boston are seeking a home of their own in the suburbs.

If Quincy could secure her share of these house builders it would be the quickest way to solve the good street and sidewalk problem, as the increased revenue would pay the bills.

A report recently made to the assessors show that the firm of Sherman & Nickerson of Wollaston have, during their ten months of business existence, disposed of sixty-nine building lots. Their sales have been mainly north of Beale street, and the prices have varied from five to fifteen cents per foot, to parties intending to build in the immediate future. This is a remarkable showing for a firm who are in the real estate business merely for recreation.

Sherman & Nickerson have just published a map of Wollaston which has been mailed to every citizen in Ward Five. This map shows the location of the 100 lots they still have to offer. It is a valuable document for reference and will be treasured by all of the recipients.

Councilman Sherman and Mr. N. G. Nickerson of Wollaston, together with ex-Mayor Hart of Boston, B. F. Dyer of South Braintree, and the Hannah brothers under the firm name of Sherman, Hannah & Co., have recently put on the market 472 building lots in Revere. The opening sales took place on Fast day and their books show a record of seventy-four sales on that date.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, April 15, 1891.

The Finance Committee has reported unanimously against the bill from the Education Committee to reimburse cities and towns for a part of their expenses for free text-books.

Thursday afternoon the House had its first debate on the constitutional amendment to require the consent of a majority of voters for the division of a town. Debate was limited to half an hour and speeches to five minutes each and the amendment was admitted by 128 to 50.

One of the hardest contests of the session came to an end in the Senate Friday afternoon. The cities of Worcester, Northampton, Newton and Brockton are already anxious to change the grade crossing law so that it shall not be in the power of the directors of a railroad to refuse to make a change which is adjudged expedient. The railroads have fought like grim death for the provision and it was regarding this that Richard Olney, counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad, wrote to the Railroad Committee that the roads would not have consented to the passage of the grade crossing law last year unless it had been in it. On the question of changing the law the Senate voted as follows:

YEAS: Messrs. Brêed, Carpenter, Cooke, Eaton, Gilman, Howard, Kimball, McDonald, Pinkerton, Provin, Smith, Thayer, Towle—13.

NAYS: Messrs. Alden, Bennett, Bradley, Brickett, Coveney, Donovan, Drury, Fernald, Kemp, Low, Nutter, Raymond, Reade, Rotch, Simpkins, Southwick, Stopford, Wyer—18.

In the report of the Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture these interesting totals of crops are given:

	1885.	1890.
Corn,	$1,271,349	$1,307,330
Hay,	9,676,893	10,621,249
Potatoes,	1,904,225	1,997,800

The secretary makes out a very prosperous showing for the Board.

As the session of the Legislature nears its close—though the end may be six weeks or more off yet—the bills reported and the action taken become more important. Politics, too, comes to the front more than ever and parties are trying to make capital out of measures which seem to carry a popular vote with them. Besides this, there is a tendency to make party capital out of measures on which the parties are not naturally divided.

The Taxation Committee has reported a bill to punish persons who do not return correct lists of their personal property for taxation. Mr. Bennett of Everett is the only dissenter from the plan, which is to put on a double tax by way of doomage for not returning the full amount. The assessors are to make two columns of returns, one a duplicate of the other, and if they believe the returns are incomplete, they are to tax for the sum of the two columns. Provision is made for an abatement of the penalty, in case it can be shown that no fraud was intended. The farmers of the State are said to be in favor of the bill, as a relief for their heavily taxed real estate.

The Senate on Tuesday afternoon agreed to the amendment to require a majority for a quorum of each branch of the Legislature. Only three votes were cast against it. This completes its passage of the two branches this year and is the second year of its course. So all that remains now is for it to be adopted by the people. It is hardly conceivable that it can be rejected, for it is clearly imperative to prevent a possible double Legislature, against which we have had repeated warning and it also compels the attendance of a majority of members in each branch, to which the people are entitled from their representatives.

By the strong vote of 42 to 86 the House has refused to order to a third reading the bill to compel the registration of all who practice medicine. It was an attempt on one side to drive out quacks who are imposing upon the public and fleecing them out of large sums of money. On the other hand it was opposed as an interference with the right of the people to choose their own doctors.

A bill which has had a favorable vote in the House provides that in certain cases the polls at State and city elections may be opened at 6 o'clock in the morning. Its reason is that workmen may have an opportunity to vote before going to work at 7 o'clock.

The labor men made a determined effort for their bill to reduce the time of women and minors in factories to fifty-eight hours a week and they fully expected that it would pass the House, but the weighty remonstrances of the manufacturers, supplemented by hard work against the bill, led to its defeat by 72 to 87 on ordering it to a third reading. Wednesday afternoon a motion to reconsider was lost by 92 to 120. Now the labor men have been threatening that it shall be the political death of Mr. Wardwell of Haverhill, who was the chief speaker against the bill, and they also boast that it will be a burden to the Republican party; but Mr. Wardwell defies them.

The House has admitted a very strong bill to stop absolutely the business of bond investment companies.

A bill has been reported to prevent the erection of any building over 140 feet high, except elevators and refineries, steeples, cupolas and the like.

Gov. Russell's message on the sweating system has resulted in a bill to forbid the distribution of clothing from infectious tenement houses.

It is proposed to appropriate $75,000 for the representation of the State at the World's fair at Chicago. RULE.

The Minute Men of '61.

There was a grand reunion and campfire of the veterans of 1861, at Faneuil hall, Boston, Wednesday. Great pains had been taken by Col. Henry Walker, president of the association, and others to make it an enthusiastic gathering. The assembly met at Faneuil hall at 12 o'clock, where a line was formed which proceeded to the banquet hall, where bounteous tables were found waiting. After enjoying the good things that had been provided for the appetite, addresses were made by Hon. E. A. Morse and other distinguished gentlemen, interspersed with war songs, old time bugle notes, fife and drum corps, etc. There were present from Quincy Capt. E. A. Spear, Albert Keating, Wyman Nightingale and others who greatly enjoyed the festive occasion.

WINDOW SHADES

At best are not particularly ornamental, but rather a disfigurement to the well-furnished room. It has long been a study to remedy this and bring out a shade that would contribute to the room's furnishing, and still not be a conspicuous detail of the completed whole. We have this week opened three cases of

Damask Hollands,

One of the first shipments to this country of a new article, and a novelty in this line. The effect is similar to the self-colored wall hangings now so popular, a delicately outlined figure appearing on a ground of same color. A beautiful cream tint and a deeper buff are the only colors they are made in at present. We feel confident these goods will meet with popular favor, and invite house furnishers to an inspection.

Water Hearing.

Tuesday was a delightful day for a Spring outing, and fortunately it was the day set for the Committee on Water Supply of the Legislature to visit this city. The committee was constituted as follows: Senator Bradley of Essex as chairman, Senator Wyer of Middlesex, Senator Cooke of Worcester, Representative Johnson of Haverhill, House chairman; Representatives McFethries of Springfield, Finney of Plymouth, Howe of Gardner, Danforth of Lynnfield, Smith of Mansfield, Nutting of Northampton, and Burke of Quincy.

The members in charge of Messenger Pedrick arrived at 10.20 A. M. At City Hall the party was swelled to forty or more; among the number being His Honor, Mayor Fairbanks; President Thompson of the City Council, ex-President Federhen, Councilman Holden and Bass; Engineer Blake, employed by the city; Engineers Tidd and Taylor, in the interests of the Water Company; Dr. W. L. Faxon, Dr. J. A. Gordon and Supt. Hall, directors of the Water Company; Hon. J. F. Dwinnell, president of the Winchester Water Works and chairman of the Legislative Committee of 1890; ex-Governor Robinson and Hon. J. H. Goulding, counsel for the Water Company; W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., counsel for the city; ex-Councilman Shaw, Henry H. Faxon, representatives of the local and Boston press, and two representatives of the National Tube Works which furnished the Quincy pipes.

Eight Barouches

Were in waiting to convey the party, and in making up the number for each it seemed to be the idea to have all sides represented. There were also three or four private carriages. The procession attracted considerable attention in organizing and as it proceeded up Granite and Copeland streets to the West Quincy depot and thence up Willard street and the Purgatory road.

The first stop was made on the latter road, near the old Harmon place, where an important feeder of Water Company supply runs under the road. Here many imbibed of water, and it seemed quite satisfactory.

Before reaching this point the odor from piggeries was very noticeable, and these establishments next came in view. There was one on the left which plainly drained into the company's supply. Further along on the right was Fallon's piggery. The pigs were at liberty to roam over the hill and their rooting was very noticeable. One hog in particular showed great concern at seeing so many distinguished gentlemen.

Some ways further on the divide between the present supply and the proposed supply was reached. Here is an elevation of three feet above high water in the proposed supply, but it would be necessary to make a much deeper cut to convey water from a desirable level into the company's supply.

The next point of interest was the Blue Hill river, where it flows under the road between Five Corners and Great pond. It is at this point that Engineer Blake proposed to obtain a sufficient supply for

The Present Needs.

The flow of water at this point was quite large, and a large area above seemed saturated with water. As Engineer Blake stated, the exact location and shape of the filter gallery has not been determined, but, although the State Board of Health were not sure the supply would be sufficient, he was satisfied that there was an abundance of water, which investigation would prove. The water was tested and pronounced good. It had somewhat the taste of surface water, but Engineer Blake said this would not be the case in the supply, as the water would be taken low down.

This meadow is supplied from two or more sources, one the overflow of Great pond which is not very far away, but seemingly far enough so that it could not be said to obtain an underground supply. The Blue Hill river is the important feeder and it has a very large water shed.

Great pond in Braintree, where Randolph and Holbrook now obtain supplies, and where Braintree may if it chooses, was next visited. It is undoubtedly the supply which Quincy should have secured years ago, but now it must look elsewhere. This pond can be flooded only to a certain level which it usually maintains.

Further on the pumping station of Randolph and Holbrook was reached. There Mr. E. J. T. Dexter, a Quincy boy is engineer.

Continuing the journey, the Randolph turnpike was reached, and proceeding along the thoroughfare some important feeders of the proposed city supply were observed.

Engineer Blake impressed on the committee the fact that the filter gallery in the meadow was designed to supply the needs of the city for many years, but the scheme also provided for

A Future Supply.

The plans were to build a dam across the Blue Hill river just above the Taunton turnpike. The river is the dividing line between Quincy and Randolph. There was at this point a deep narrow ravine, affording an opportunity to construct a dam similar to the present one of the company supply. The area flowed would be from 360 to 400 acres, twice the size of Great pond. The dam would not be high enough to flow water back into Houghton's pond. The capacity of this made pond was estimated at from one and one-half to one and three-quarter billion gallons. The dam would be 161 feet above tide water.

The party then turned homeward, but on the way visited the reservoir and pumping station of the company. Approaching the reservoir from Five Corners, Braintree, via Willard street, or its continuance as it is known in Braintree, some damaging evidence was obtained against the company's supply. It was fully as bad as has been pictured Concerning Piggeries.

On the slope leading down into the reservoir were heaps of manure and in close proximity was a piggery where pigs were wallowing in a tributary of the supply. Then Town brook just before entering the reservoir flows through the barn-yard at Dr. Simonds' estate and under one of the outbuildings. No one seemed anxious to sample the water at this point, although they did at the reservoir.

It will not be disputed that the company's dam is thoroughly constructed. Little new was developed at the pumping station, except the statement that the company discontinued two years ago the use of the well in the meadow, and also cut off the brook connection. The only sources of supply now are the old well near the station and the reservoir before mentioned. The water from the reservoir is taken direct by the pumps.

A dinner at the Robertson House, one of Landlord Davis' best, concluded the day's outing, and at 4.48 the Legislative Committee left for Boston.

Wednesday's Hearing

An adjourned hearing on Wednesday. Engineer Blake was allowed to introduce a list of conflicting surplus, where one party had been allowed to cover that of another.

In answer to Asa P. French, Esq., Engineer Blake said the proposed filter gallery would not be within 900 feet of Great pond; nearly due north; no plan of filtration from the pond; was among possibilities not probabilities of water prelocating from the pond; would be very difficult for Holbrook and Randolph to determine where any of the supply came from pond. An increased number all of geries would not increase the percolation.

To Mr. Pattee, engineer Blake said Great pond was one of the great ponds of the commonwealth; one half would be sufficient for 35,000 people. According to an estimate, the population of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook would not amount to but 14,720 in 1920.

Mayor Fairbanks,

The next witness, reviewed the action of the town and city, and put in the reports which had been made on the question.

To Mr. Goulding he said the valuation of the city was $13,000,000, and the debt $191,000. The city had no sewerage but had adopted a plan.

Eugene N. Hultman, of Washington street, was the next witness. Had taken company water 4 years; at times was very poor; it smelled bad, fish being predominant; generally colored, winter as well as summer; it was too offensive to use last summer and he got drinking water elsewhere; bad for month or more; scum appeared on surface upon heating; necessary to use filter and turn several times a day, green slime would accumulate; general complaint among his neighbors.

To Mr. Goulding he said water had been pretty good since Jan. 1, but was now discolored; find deposits in filter now, but more particularly last summer; came to hearing of his own accord.

H. A. Keith, of Wollaston, testified to the color, smell and taste as being always bad and offensive; odor sometimes bad; thought tasted worse after a rain.

James Edwards, of School street, said he had the company water put in, but one taste was sufficient and he had not drank it since; used only for bathing and then only after heating.

To Mr. Goulding he said he believed city would furnish water 25 per cent. cheaper, and certainly purer; he had no antipathy against the company, some of the members being personal friends

Would Favor Buying

Present works, but did not consider the water worth anything.

Joseph L. Whiton, of Quincy, an ex-member of the Board of Health, testified to the color, taste and smell being very bad; he depended on a well; it was the same with his neighbors; couldn't use water sometime to wash clothes; had not investigated causes.

A. W. Sprague of Wollaston, corroborated preceding witnesses as to color, taste and smell; thought it was caused by decaying vegetables; couldn't drink water as it came from pipes; boiled all that he used; his was a new house and he had no well; had never made complaint to company.

Councilman Bass did not have supply at house; at factory the operatives objected to it; testified as member of Committee on Fire Department to unwillingness of company to extend mains, particularly in the thickly settled and growing section around Liberty street in Ward Three; city would have put in hydrants had extensions been made; company wanted ten per cent. guarantee of cost.

Councilman Rinn of Atlantic had heard considerable complaint against water, and for this reason had not put in supply; there were from 260 to 270 voters in the ward and he has secured the signatures of 93 since Friday, to a petition favoring independent supply; no one refused to sign.

Councilman Newcomb didn't like the water and did not use; neighbors who had supply came to his well; very decided opinion in Ward Two for new supply of better water; the Council committee having the matter in charge, had no animus against company; a thorough investigation was made; could get no satisfaction from company as to terms.

President Thompson

Of the Council had introduced water two years ago; it was very poor at seasons, when he depended on neighbor's wells; water colored pitchers; had taken sample from reservoir in February last by means of a jug thrown overboard by a clothes line; sample forwarded to Dr. Curstin of Medford, sealed; analyzed unfit for drinking purposes; he or the Council had no animus against company; sentiment was that city was entitled to better water; he was a thorough believer in the right of city to petition for charter; would be in case the water was not objectionable; believed should be public property; did not know how many mills there were on Blue Hill or Monatiquot river.

Ex-President Federhen of City Council didn't use company water in house because of color and smell; believed people desired something better.

Councilmen Warner had circulated a petition favoring new supply in Ward Three the past week; all eager to sign; no one refused; reviewed the matter of extended pipes to the Liberty street section which company refused to do.

Councilman Duffield of Quincy Neck, said the company had refused to extend main one-eighth of mile to the thickly settled section of Quincy Neck, although city offered bonus of $300, and would put in hydrant.

At one o'clock the committee adjourned the hearing until 5 P. M.

The Second Hearing

Began at 5 P. M. Asa P. French, Esq., counsel for Randolph and Holbrook, said those towns did not appear as remonstrants to petition, but to the scheme to take water from filter galleries so near Great pond; he wanted to be heard later.

Councilman Moxon of Atlantic, testified to the uniformly poor quality, at times exceedingly bad and obnoxious to taste and smell; he had been compelled to drive a well; the rates were excessive; knew instances where they were twice as high as Boston.

Councilman Roberts testified to the objectionable qualities.

Councilman Powers testified to bad smell, taste and looks; cited failure of the company to extend pipes to "the Rail" and elsewhere, and also to the poor hydrant pressure at times; people had given up idea of ever getting extensions as long as company controlled; company did not allow hydrants to be tested; knew of failures to extend mains when guaranteed percentage required.

Principal Assessor Pope knew his neighborhood to be dissatisfied with the present supply.

Councilman Jones didn't take water because he couldn't get it; all but two houses on his street agreed to take water and the city would have put in a hydrant, but still the company refused to extend.

A. W. Newcomb, of Quincy Neck, reviewed the correspondence between the town and the company regarding the extension of mains to Quincy Neck.

Lawyer Pattee then put in petitions signed by about 700, favoring new supply; he reserved privilege to put in table of water rates in comparison, and the petitions rested.

Lawyer Goulding opened for the remonstrance, and

Dr. John A. Gordon

Was the first witness. He proceeded without questioning to explain the situation. His early interest in the sanitary condition of the town, and the failure of the town to act favorably on articles relating to water supplies. The condition was deplorable, and in 1883 he associated himself with others and secured the Quincy Water Company charter. The company covered most of the town then with pipes. A contract was made with town which was to take so many hydrants at $35 each for ten years, and as many additional as it wished at the same price. Town had privilege to extend contract 25 years. Considered the pipes used the best for the purpose. Company put in best system recommended. The pipes used cost as much as cast iron pipes. The well first used furnished a pure and satisfactory supply, but it became necessary to increase the supply. An attempt was made to filter the water from the brook, but it was unsuccessful and abandoned. Then a well was constructed in meadow, but this did not prove satisfactory, and finally the reservoir was constructed about two years ago.

Primarily the Blue hill river and the Town river were considered, and the latter determined the most feasible supply, and adopted. The company were alive to ascertain the proper method of purifying the water and would then remedy it. The water supply had been a great benefit to town and city. It now has 1191 takers supplying a population of 8000 and also the school buildings. The streets and lawns could be watered. The health of the city was improved. He cited figures to prove that there were less deaths from typhoid fever in houses supplied with water.

After company obtained its charter members urged the town to buy before construction begun. Denied it was the purpose of the company to get into the field simply for speculative purposes. He admitted it is a fact that the water in the reservoir was not good when first flowed and was only used when absolutely necessary.

At this point the hearing adjourned to 10 A. M. Thursday.

Thursday's Hearing.

Promptly at the appointed hour the Committee resumed the hearing, and for half an hour Councilman Sherman was examined and cross examined. He believed the city should purchase the present works and opposed the petition for the new supply. The question with him was how would the new supply be supported. Certainly the company could afford to sell at as low rates as the city.

John C. Randall was the next witness. Thought water perfectly good from his own personal observation and of his doctor.

To Mr. Pattee he said he was a member of the same firm as Mr. Sherman and a brother-in-law of Dr. Faxon. His investigation of the source of the company supply had been very slight, only as he rode in the neighborhood. Had seen piggeries in neighborhood of supply. Never on Dr. Simond's grounds. Had heard unfavorable comments on the water, and knew neighbors who purchased spring water.

To Mr. Goulding he said he thought the movement had started in opposition to Dr. Faxon, who was a very active man and had made enemies in politics and elsewhere. Water was dirty but not unwholesome. Doubted if a two-thirds vote could be obtained for acceptance of proposed act.

To Mr. Pattee he said he heard the movement was to get leverage on the company. Persons friendly to the company had told him so, but he was unwilling to tell who they were. Had assisted Dr. Faxon, and held water stock as collateral.

Dr. J. A. Gordon was recalled. He presented a table which averaged analyses of water of various supplies, which he explained. The Quincy water was above the average in color, but this did not make it objectionable as to health. The total residue was about the average; this feature did not represent the absolute impurity. The loss on ignition was the most important column, and in this, Quincy compared very favorably. The free ammonia was of little importance, but Quincy stood low. Albuminoid was the actually injurious element and again Quincy compared very favorably. The excess of chlorine was due to the proximity to salt water. The company has in mind plans to free Quincy water from objectionable features. He denied that the company did not extend its mains. It had twenty-one and one-half miles at first, and in six years had increased to thirty-three and one-half miles.

To Mr. Pattee he said the water question had been before the town at four meetings previous to the granting of the charter to the company; twice when committees were appointed and twice when they reported. He was not able to give any of the original business of the corporation, and could not enlighten the committee on details of first expense. His chief interest was that of a sanatarian. In 1887 he held 97 shares which represented cash paid at par value. In 1888 his number of shares had increased to 144; the increase represented part cash. An annual meeting was held in 1890 and the return made Oct. 27. He then read the report of Engineer Blake made in 1883 just previous to putting in the works. Believed one of the sources then recommended was the one now proposed for city. He admitted that it was generally the case that there was less typhoid fever where there were water supplies. Had never recognized disagreeable smell of the water at his house, but had at others where little used.

To Engineer Blake the doctor said the table of analysis was made up from the report of the State Board of Health. It was not printed there as a table. The most harmful elements not shown by average. Mere chemical analysis don't always indicate the unhealthfulness. Dangerous elements might exist but not be visible.

John Quincy Adams

Was next called. He understood his name headed a petition favoring a new supply. If so, he desired it stricken off. He concurred with the opening remarks of ex-Gov. Robinson, that it was the height of impolicy for the Legislature to proceed with the hearing without the approval of the State Board of Health of the plan.

Charles F. Adams

The next called, also desired his name stricken from the petition signed two years ago. Did not sign as a club, but to bring about a settlement; to put the city in a more favorable condition to purchase. Thought company unreasonable. Favored purchase rather than allow the streets to be dug up again.

To Mr. Pattee's question if he was willing to have his name used as stated, he said it so appeared.

M. M. Tidd, a Civil Engineer,

Was next called. He had been interested in the construction of thirty-five water works. Had investigated scheme proposed by Engineer Blake. As a rule subteranean supplies should be avoided, as some were not successful. Better to get visible supply where possible. Regarded proposed supply by filter gallery treacherous and dangerous upon what investigation had been made. Should never think of using hydraulic pump in making such an investigation. If gallery had any worth at all, it must draw water from all directions, and would inevitably draw from Great pond. It would be difficult to tell to what extent. Regarding the proposed reservoir, it was one he had examined some years ago to increase the Great pond supply when necessary. Thought it would cost $800,000 to clear the reservoir of muck and trees and put it in proper condition. A flow of twenty-three feet at the dam would bring the water to a level of Houghton's pond. The indications were that the company would obtain a very clean supply from its reservoir. It was vegetable matter which caused the coloring. Weymouth water, which was higher colored, was considered very good water. The quality of the company's water was fully equal to the average. The taste will improve and in eight or ten years be as good as a natural pond. The dam and pumping station were well built and the machinery was very good.

The pipes used were very good; he had used them in two places in the West. Mr. McClellan was far from being itinerant; he was faithful, conscientious and his word as good as his bond. A cut of from four to seven feet for 2500 feet would bring the waters of the Monatiquot river into the Town river supply. There was a chance on the Town river to erect other storage basins.

To Lawyer French he said it depended entirely on the condition of the soil whether the proposed filter gallery would draw from Great pond. Would not be worth building if it did not. Water must flow from pond to maintain place of saturation. Thought Great pond would be sufficient for coming needs of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook, but must be made large enough to hold all the water which comes down the water shed. Great pond was shallow; only one point over ten feet. Had seen time when no water run out. Engineer Tidd was on the stand at one o'clock, when the committee adjourned until next Thursday at 10 A. M.

For the Patriot.

The Passion Play.

Will you kindly allow me a little space in which to call the attention of your readers to the paper which is to be given by Mrs. Clement Waters at the Unitarian church on Thursday next, April 23, at 11.30 A. M. The meeting is under the auspices of the Unitarian Woman's Alliance, but any one interested in the paper will be gladly welcomed.

The subject is the "Passion Play," which was given at Ober Ammergau, in the Tyrol last summer and has been given there every tenth year, for hundreds of years. This is a very curious survival of the middle ages to which modern art has contributed in recent times much of realism and magnificence. Having heard the paper read in Boston, I feel sure that not to hear it is to lose an opportunity of profit and pleasure. Mrs. Waters is a lady distinguished as a writer on art, she has traveled much, and has had exceptional opportunities of seeing and understanding the "Passion Play," she is also a very pleasant speaker in voice and manner. Some passages of her description of the play may fairly be called thrilling. For the credit of Quincy we hope that she may meet a good number of appreciative hearers on Thursday next.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

The Quincy Patriot.
SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1891.

Ripe Wheat.

We bent today o'er a coffined form,
And our tears fell softly down;
We looked our last on the quiet face,
With its look of peace, its patient grace,
And its hair like a silver crown.

We touched our own to the clay cold hands,
From life's long labor at rest;
And among the blossoms white and sweet,
We noted a bunch of golden wheat,
Clasped close in the silent hand.

The blossoms whispered of fadeless bloom;
Of a land where fall no tears;
The ripe wheat told of toil and care,
The patient waiting, the trusting prayer,
The garnered good of years.

We know not what work her hands had found,
What rugged places her feet;
What cross was hers, what blackness of night;
We saw but the peace, the blossoms white,
And the bunch of ripened wheat.

As each goes up from the fields of earth,
Bearing the treasures of life,
God looks for some gathering grain of good,
From the ripe harvest that shining stood,
But waited the shearer's knife.

Then labor well that in death you go,
Not only with blossoms sweet—
Not bent with doubt and burdened with fears,
And dead, dry husks of the wasted years—
But laden with golden wheat.

Household Receipts.

PUDDING SAUCE. Mix two tablespoonfuls of corn flour with a dessertspoonful of cold milk, and stir this into half a pint of boiling milk previously sweetened to taste, and stir it all over the fire till it thickens; then flavor to taste with either cinnamon, nutmeg, vanilla or a glass of wine.

EGG DRESSING FOR SALAD. Three eggs two tablespoonfuls of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of oil, melted butter, one table spoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of white pepper, one-half cupful cream, one-half cupful of vinegar. Cook all to scald, add the oil slowly afterward, and pour over any chopped salad.

LEMON PUDDING Pour a quart of boiling milk over 1 1-2 pints of bread crumbs. Put the mixture into a buttered pudding dish, stir in a teaspoonful of salt, cover closely with a plate and let it stand half an hour. At the end of that time, beat into it three eggs and a teaspoonful of lemon extract. Beat it until it is perfectly smooth and bake it in a hot oven about three quarters of an hour.

A tickling in the throat can be cured by placing a pinch of dry, pulverized borax on the tongue and allowing it to slowly dissolve.

The clear juice of a pineapple is now considered by eminent physicians to be the best remedy known for diphtheretic sore throat, and even for diphtheria.

CATHOLICISM IN NEW ENGLAND. The growth of the Roman Catholic church in New England has been very marked. While in 1789 there were probably not more than 100 Catholics in New England, no bishop and but one priest, today there are in the same New England one archbishop, six suffrage bishops, upwards of 950 priests and a Catholic population of more than a million and three-quarters. In Boston alone there are 36 churches and 125 priests, ministering to a population of over 200,000 souls, or nearly one-half the population of the city.

--Rochester may be a small town, but its finances are in good shape. It has no debt; taxes $10 per $1000, with only $479 of last year's taxes uncollected. No money was hired in anticipation of taxes, and there is $3,639.72 on hand in the treasury. Of the twenty deaths which occurred last year all but seven of the persons were over fifty years of age, and three were over ninety. There were twelve births and eight marriages. Eighty-six dogs were licensed.

Ventilation is a provision of nature too often abused. Every sleeping-room should have its windows open an hour every morning, and all the bed clothing laid open to the air, where, if possible, the sun can shine upon them.

Many good housekeepers who have preserved strawberries, cherries, plums or almost any preserves which have begun to ferment, but are not mouldy, add them to the mince meat before it is scalded, in proportion of a quart to the quantity given.

Do the best you can with your temperament, your gifts and your attainments; expend your energies in making brightness visible and old things usable; gild sacrifices with a courage that is contagious and abiding—this is good house-keeping in its highest and noblest sense.

Anecdotes.

"I'll make leg-o'-mutton sleeves to this gown," said the dressmaker to Mrs. Frakshus.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," replied Mrs. Frakshus. "I'd have you know I'm a vegetarian."

Mrs. Moore: "It really is a pity that the papers have to devote so much space to scandal."

Mr. Jason: "It is, indeed. By-the-way, did you see anything in the papers about Wickwire going off with a married woman?"

Mrs. Moore: "No, tell me about it, quick. Who was she?"

Mr. Jason: "His wife"

"Well my man," said a military doctor to a patient who had been on low diet for a long time, "how are you?"

"Much better, sir."

"Could you eat a small chicken to-day?"

"That I could sir."

"What would you like it stuffed with?"

"Please your honor," replied the hungry patient, "I would like it stuffed with another chicken."

"Sir," said the culprit, "I committed this theft under advise of my doctor."

"Wha? he hypnotized you?"

No, sir. But he told me to take something before I went to bed."

Mother-in-law: "You used to say you wished me to occupy the place of your own dear mother."

Son-in-law: "Of course I did. She is in heaven, you know."

Travers: "Phew! I've just had the most fearful row with my tailor."

Dashaway: "Seems to me you look very cheerful about it."

Travers: "I do. You see I still owe him the money."

Maude: "Did you ever try your hand at skating, Mr. Blinkers?"

Blinkers: "Yes—well—er—that is, my hand and several other parts."

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Admirers of Julia Marlowe, who were dissapointed earlier in the season, because on account of a severe illness she had to cancel her engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, will be pleased to hear that she has made arrangements to appear here next April 20, During the week she will present: "Romeo and Juliet" on Monday and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday matinee; "As You Like It," Wednesday evening; "Pygmalion and Galatea," Thursday evening; "Twelfth Night" Friday evening; "As You Like It," Saturday matinee and "Ingomar," Saturday evening.

Boston Theatre.

Commencing Monday April 20th, "The Soudan" will be received with the original cast. The play has been somewhat revised and imported to meet the demands of the popular taste, and is now more attractive than ever. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays as usual, and all the children should see it.

Boston Museum.

"New Lamps for Old" continues to be a great attraction at the Museum, and large audiences are the rule every evening, while the ladies flock to the matinees. "The Open Gate" is still the curtain raiser.

Tremont Theatre.

For six successive evenings and the Saturday matinee of the next week, April 20th, the eminent lecturer, whose fame and popularity are now national, Mr. John L. Stoddard, will deliver in the Tremont Theatre, the lecture which has been readily accorded the highest place among his many brilliant efforts—"The Passion Play of 1890." Mr. Stoddard gained entire familiarity with this subject by an extended sojourn among, and careful study of, the villages of Ober-Ammergau and was enabled to make many most interesting views of people, scenery and surroundings in addition to the deeply vivid pictures of the scenes in the play itself. Next to attendance at a performance of the "Passion Spiel" itself is attendance at Mr. Stoddard's depiction thereof. We come closer thus than any reading can give us, to the reverent atmosphere of the peasant actor and the peasant audience. All agree that this series of lectures in a theatre is novel as an offering; but believe that it will prove a week of combined instruction and pleasure to all participants.

A Useful Rhyme.

At Dover Dwells George Brown Esquire,
Good Charles French and David Fryar.

The reader will observe in the above little rhyme there are twelve words—to correspond with the twelve months of the year—now in order to find any day the month comes in on proceed as follows: What day does the first of June come in on? June is the sixth month, and you must say: At Dover dwells George Brown, Esquire, of course stopping at Esquire, the sixth word, as Esquire commences with an E—go to the alphabet and count from A to E, which is five numbers—then as Jan. 1, 1891, came in on Thursday (always count from Thursday), thus Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday—then as Monday is the fifth day from Thursday the month came in on that day. Take any month you choose, use the little rhyme and alphabet—be careful; count from the first day the year comes in on, and you can instantly tell the day any month comes in on for all time to come.—St. Louis Republic.

A Clergyman's Ring.

A lady of Walnut Street church has presented her pastor with a most remarkable ring. It is probably the only one of the kind in the world. It contains twelve precious stones, the same as were in the Aaronic high priest's breastplate, and arranged in the same order—sardius, emerald, ligure, beryl, topaz, sapphire, agate, onyx, carbuncle, diamond, amethyst and jasper. The effect is beautiful and brilliant, rather too fine for a Baptist preacher to wear. He will wear it sometimes, however, and his better half will wear it a great deal. The stones are specimens of the best of their kind respectively.—Louisville Western Recorder.

BELIEF IN A FUTURE STATE. It is curious and interesting to note that the British Columbian tribe of the Shanakons have a soul belief which is an almost exact counterpart of that cherished by the old Israelites. They believe that every being has its double or shadow, thin, pale figure, seldom or never seen by mortal eyes, which after death descends to an abode beneath the earth and there leads a sad and gloomy existence. The Israelites called this place Sheol; the Shanakons know it as "Eotea." —St. Louis Republic.

☞The cutlery exports from Sheffield, England, to the United States during the last quarter, were valued at £22,974. This shows a large decrease, as for the same period in 1890 the exports amounted to £50,000. This falling off in Sheffield's cutlery trade is attributed to the new American tariff, and has resulted in many cutlers being thrown out of work.

Temperance.

Furnished for Publication by W. C. T. U.

Teachings of Science.

(CONCLUDED.)

In the preceding chapter the milder acute or immediate stages of alcoholic action were briefly described. In these milder stages, amounting in the highest degree only to what is called "tipsiness," as well in the more pronouced stages of intoxication, the peculiar action of alcohol on the brain induces feelings of strength, of self-importance, and of well-being which are entirely deceptive. This is demonstrable with the muscular power. The tipsy man boasts of his strength and is ready to use it in contests, but he is more readily defeated than in his natural state; and in lifting at weights, where there are accurate tests, it is found that every degree of alcoholic action upon a healthy system diminishes muscular power. But the more advanced or third stage presents a more striking phenomena. In this stage the man is regarded as intoxicated or drunk. The face now may be purplish or palid, the temperature is reduced, the motions of the heart are usually diminished, often in frequency, but more constantly in force; vascular tension or the pressure of blood in the arteries is less; there is marked failure of muscular direction or control and of muscular power; the gait is unsteady, the tongue is thick, the lips and limbs are more or less paralysed, there is sometimes double vision; and now there is more marked obscurity and confusion of intellect and more change of mental feeling. There is generally either an increase of irritability of temper or a development of foolish sentimentality, with still greater recklessness of conduct, a loss of a sense of propriety and often a disregard of the rights of others; and now pugnacity, brutality, violence and criminality are apt to appear.

"E Pluribus Unum."

The national motto, "E Pluribus Unum," on different United States coins, was never authorized by law to be so placed; although the mint was established in 1792, the use of the motto on any of the gold, silver or copper coins was not authorized or directed by any of the provisions of the act establishing it. None of the coinssince 1837 bore the motto until the standard silver dollars were coined. It remained on the early gold and silver coins until 1834, when it was omitted from the gold coins; from the double eagle in 1866. In 1836 it was dropped from the twenty-five-cent piece, and the following year from all silver coins, the trade dollar only reviving its use. The motto was first used on a half penny or cent struck in New Jersey in 1786-7.

Always Thankful.

Mr. George Iles tells a story of the three graces that a Canadian parson pronounced at his table. Some one had given him a turkey with all the "fixings," and over the first dinner the grace began with the works, "Most bountiful Jehovah." The next day there was very little turkey left, and the parson said, "For what we are about to enjoy, we thank thee," etc. On the third day the turkey's remains looked like the keel and ribs of a ship just begun. Over that the parson said, Oh, Lord, we endeavor always to be grateful; Johnny, pass the potatoes."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Prevalent Type.

BY GEORGE CHINN.

His eyes all tearful fairly drip—
All parched and burning is his lip—
His tongue's as dry as any chip—
He aches in head and back and hip.
In pleasure cares he not to dip;
He sighs for no one's fellowship.
With quinine pills he doth equip
Himself, and anti-pyrine sip.
He vows that he is on a trip
Across the Styx—he fain would skip!
And e'en, at times, all seems to tip.
He feels like giving all the slip—
He would his dearest comrade whip—
And why? Because he has the Grip!

THE GAY PERSON.

Dench Leg John took care of the rooms occupied by a number of college boys. One evening when the old man came in the boys were talking about celebrated atheletes.

"No; tell us about him."

"One time dar wuz er man—wall, we'll say his name wuz Jim. He waz er good-size man an' wuz built ter stay, he wuz. He tuck it inter his head dat he could fling anybody in de whole 'munity, an' he done it. Big men come from all ober de country, but he flung 'em easy ernuff, an' nachully he commenced ter blebe dat nobuddy could put his back on de groun'. One day er mighty gay puson come erlong an' wanted ter rassle wid Jim.

"'W'y,' says Jim, soter laughing, 'you kaint do nuthin' wid me.'

"'I'll try you, anyhow.'

"'Very well, an' dat's all de good it will do you.'

"Da tuck holt an' Jim laid him on de groun' without no trouble er tall. De gay pusson went erway, but de next mawnin' dar he was ergin.

"'Whut you want now?' Jim axed.

"'Wants ter rassle wid you.'

"'Whut's de use'n rasslin'? You kain't fling me!'

"'But I kin try.'

"'Yas, an' you tried befo', but it didn't do you no good.'

"'I know dat, but I wants ter try erg'in.'

"'Wall,' says Jim, ''ez it ain't goin' ter do no harm I reckon I'll try you ernuder fall.'

"He tried him ernuder fall an' flung him 'about ez easy ez he did befo'. 'Now,' says Jim, 'I reckon you'll go on an neber bodder me no mo'?'

"Da gay pusson went erway, an' day wa'n't nuthin' seed o' him fur some time, but one day he come back an' 'lowed, he did dat he want ter rassle erg'in.

"Dar ain't no usen rasslin' wid you,' said Jim. 'You kain't fling me. Go off summers an' rassle wid er chile.'

"Den de gay pusson he say: 'It mought 'peer like rasslin' wid er chile, but you keep on errasslin' wid me an' I'll fling you atterwhile.'

"'Oh, dat won't do, weak pusson. You couldn't fling me in er hunnud years.'

"'Try me erg'in, jest fur fun,' de gay pusson begged.

"'Wall, jest fur fun, ter keep my han' in I will try you erg'in.'

"'He tried him ere'yin an' fling him wid out no trouble. De gay pusson went er way, 'peerin' like he war puffickly satisfied, an' de gre't rassler didn't speck eber ter see him erg'in, but one mawnin' er munt' later yere he wuz erg'in.

"'Fur grecious sake, what do you want?' Jim, he axed.

"'I want jest whut I allus wanted,' de gay pusson 'lowed. 'I wants ter rassle wid you.'

"'Go on, weak pusson, an' quit yo' foolishness. You kain't do nuthid' wid me.'

"'Wall, but you won't mind trying me jest fun, will you? Kain't do you no harm.'

"Now, lemme tell you,' says Jim, 'I has been foolin' wid you long ernuff, an' now ef you 'sist on me rasslin' wid you, I'll fling you an fling you hard; yere me?'

"'Oh, yas, I yere you.'

"'An' still you wants ter rassle?'

"'Dat's whut I does.'

"'All right' I'll gin you all you want.'

"Den he seized de gay pusson an' flung him kerwhop erg'in de groun' an' it 'peer like he dun bu'st him open, but de gay pusson he git up an' go on erway. 'Dar,' says Jim' 'I bet you neber bodder me no mo, I neber seed sich er 'bitious pussion. "'It wuz quite little while befo' de gay pusson come back, but one day yere he come. 'Whut on the yeth kin you want dis time?' de mighty rassler axed.

"'I wants ter rassle wid you, sah.'

"'Now, look yere, ef you doan' go 'way frum yere an' quit bodderin' me, I'm gwine to hurt you. I ain't got no time ter fool wid you. I rassles wid men.'

"'I'm a man,' say de gay pusson.

"'Now look yere, ef I grabs holt o' you erg'in you will wish I hadn't, fur I gwine hurt you bad.'

"'I wanter rassle,' says de gay pusson.

"Den Jim he grabbed him, an' bless yo' life da had quite a tussle 'fo' Jim got him down, but he flung him at las' an' flung him mons'us hard.

"'Now, I reckon he done got ernuff,' says Jim, an' I lay you don't want him roun' yere no mo' tryin' ter take my honors erway from me.'

"All de folks ergreed with him, but bless yo' life de ver' next mawnin' yere come de gay pusson.

"'What, ain't yer got ernuff?' says Jim.

"'No,' says de gay pusson.

"'Now, yere, ef you 'sist on me rasslin' wid you erg'in I'll fling yo' an' break yo' naik, sho!'

"'I wanter rassle,' says de gay pusson.

"Jim grabbed holt o' him an' da went at it. Dey rassled, an' sometimes it would 'peer like Jim had him, but de gay pusson allus flounced around somehow an' covered de vantage dat he had loss'. After a while when everybody thought dat Jim had him sho', de gay pusson gin er suddent flounce an' down went Jim kerwhop. De gay pusson hurried erway, an' de folks stood waitin' fur Jim ter git up, but he didn't. Da went ter him, and whut you tink da seed? Da seed blood runnin' outen his eyes, an' da seed his face swellin'. Da man wuz dun dead."

"But what was the name of the gay pusson?' one of the students asked.

"Chile, de name o' dat man wuz whiskey. You is all flingin' him monst'us easy now, but keep on rasslin' wid him an' he gwine grow stronger an' stronger, an' one deze days when somebody go ter help yer up da'll find dat de gay pusson has killed you."—Opie P Read, in Arkansaw Traveller.

For the Patriot.

A Foreign Letter.

DEAR EDITORS: I send you this letter which I have recently received from a lad who is travelling with his parents and sisters around the world. When I tell you that the writer is very young, only eleven years of age, I am sure you and your readers will agree with me that he has remarkable talent as a correspondent and gives clear and graphic descriptions of the interesting objects he has seen. H.

ROME, Italy, March 28, 1891.

MY DEAR FRIEND: After leaving Jerusalem we went to Jaffa, Beyroot, Smyrna, Ephesus, Constantinople, the Dardanelles, Athens, Naples, and Rome, where we are now. We left Patras, Greece, and entered Italy by Brindisi. We took rail to Naples over the Apennines. In Naples we visited a very interesting museum containing relics from Pompeii, Herculaneum, Gaeta, etc. Here are collections of statuary, bronzes, coins, mosaics, frescoes, paintings, etc., which are all ancient. In one room there are articles of food from Pompeii, such as olives, barley, loaves of bread, pieces of fish, all of which are in pans and other kitchen utensils, just as they were 1300 or 1400 years ago; also, pieces of brooms, articles of clothing, articles of the toilet, combs, locks, keys, etc. There are some pictures here by Raphael, Michael Angelo and Rembrandt. There is a mosiac in the museum with a million and a half stones in it.

We visited a handsome palace in which are some beautiful modern paintings. There is a special room in this palace made entirely of china ware. We also visited a monastary, now a museum, in which are the state barge and state coach of King Charles the Third. They are both carved and gilded. From the monastary we obtained a splendid view of Naples.

As to excursions, we visited Pompeii. I had no idea that it was so well preserved, and in my opinion I think it is the most wonderful thing in the world and I have been around the world. The streets are paved with lava and they looked like they were made recently. There are stepping stones in the streets reaching from one pavement to the other for the convenience of foot passengers in rainy weather. In Pompeii we saw the house of Cornelius Reefus, a rich man; the forum (market place), the theatre, the Temple of Jesus, the house of the Deer, the house of the Darwin Faun. The hot and cold baths look like they were made yesterday. In the bakery we saw the Grecian oven, where the bread, now in the museum, was found. There are some ivory tickets found in the theatre. We also saw a wine cellar.

We ascended Vesuvius. It will always remain in my mind, for I never had such an experience before. We rode five hours by carriage—half way up; the rest of the way we went by a very steep railway; after leaving this we walked to the cone. Every step we took we sank up to our knees in lava. It was hailing hard and the front of my coat was frozen as well as my hands. In some places we had to walk over beds of hot sulphur, which is very dangerous as it sometimes gives way beneath you. In about half an hour's walk in such difficulties we were seated alongside the crater in a terrible hail and wind storm, drenched to our skin. You could not see your hand before your face; every moment could be heard the lava falling like thunder. Here we sat a few minutes in suspense, huddled closely together, with a precipice on one side and the crater on the other. We were all afraid our end was at hand, but after a little sickness we were all right.

I received your welcome letter in Naples, as it was forwarded there from Rome. I would be happy to receive another letter from you. Please address me at Paris.

I will now say good by, and remain
Your affectionate young friend,
BRUCE McLEAN FALCONER.

Half a Million Immigrants.

According to Bradstreet's, during 1890 the total number of immigrants arriving in the United States from foreign countries was 491,026, a gain over the preceding year of 65,000, or fifteen per cent. The bulk of the increase was found in arrivals from central and southern Europe—Austria-Hungary, Poland, Italy—and, in fact, these three countries may be credited alone with supplying more than the entire increase noted, as their total gain over 1889 was 69,000, or 4,000 more than the total net gain. The arrivals of British immigrants showed a heavy falling off. German arrivals gained slightly, and Russian immigrants were also more numerous than in 1889. The total number of British immigrants was 120,567, a decrease from 1889 of twelve per cent. The statistics of arrivals at leading ports show that New York received 398,396, or nearly 81 per cent. of the total; Boston received 30,971, or 6.3 per cent.; Baltimore, 29,125, or six per cent. and Philadelphia, 23,434 or 4.7 per cent.

No More Silver Dollars.

It is announced that no more silver dollars are to be coined after July 1, next. There are more of them stored away in the treasury vaults now than can be gotten rid of in a lifetime. The silver which the government is compelled to purchase will be kept in bullion, and the senseless piling up of the metal in the government storehouses will go on indefinitely. The silver craze will come to an end ultimately; but the people will have the bills to pay so long as the patient lives.

For the Patriot.

Another Trip,—No. 2.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

Sunday in Lynchburg was a cloudless, summery day, hardly a trace of the rain of the day before being visible in the sharply inclined streets. The air was filled with the sound of church bells and the fragrance of blossoming trees.

Talk about "coming late to church," even the latest Wollastonians are always early in comparison with the upper crust Lynchburger. For half an hour after the time set for service there was a steady stream of worshippers pouring into the large edifice; hymns were sung, the scripture lesson read, prayer offered, and the contribution boxes passed just the same as if the house had been quiet and the people attentive hearers instead of fruitless listeners.

The only semblance of quietness before the sermon began was during the prayer, when every head was bowed; but that did not prevent many of the youthful ones from peeking—probably to see if every one else was in a proper attitude of devotion.

The pews and pulpit were supplied with spittoons, which were well patronized by minister and men. By the way, there were sold during the past six months from Bookers' warehouse over thirteen million pounds of tobacco. The church was carpeted, hence the spittoons—and then, they probably wanted to keep their sexton busy during the week.

Here the "color line" is strictly drawn. Not a colored person was to be seen in either of the two large churches I attended on Sunday; but it is not because there are not plenty of them in the place, but because they are not wanted; they are simply "niggers," and not fellow-citizens.

Rev. George Carter paused in his eloquent discourse on Sunday morning to quote from a familiar hymn these lines:

"If there's any mercy, Lord, send it down to me."

But happening to realize a possible difficulty, and by way of apology, said, as he paused before quoting: "I'm not sure but that it's a nigger hymn." I thought, after hearing his explanation, the prayer most appropriate.

Lynchburg is growing rapidly, having at the present time more than 26,000 inhabitants. The city is being encircled by an electric street railway; many buildings are being erected, and improvements are in order on every hand.

The ride west over the Norfolk & Western railroad is delightful; not so much on account of its immediate rugged scenery, but because of the magnificent views one gets of the distant valleys and mountains.

Bedford, like many of the towns in the South, has taken a new lease of life by laying out new streets, generously advertising, and selling numerous town lots.

Roanoke, at the junction of the Norfolk & Western and Shenandoah Valley roads, is only about eight years old, but has more than 20,000 inhabitants; its growth is marvellous.

Salem is three miles west of Roanoke, but prophets say that the two places will soon be one big city or two cities in one. Both are charmingly situated, being 1000 feet above sea level. Of all the places I have seen none impressed me more favoraby than these.

Radford, 300 miles from Norfolk and forty-four from Roanoke, is another aspirant for leadership in this race of new towns. Here we leave the main line for the New River branch.

The scenery changes,—rugged mountains, through which deep cuts and tunnels have been made, on one hand, and the river with its mountain wall back of it on the other. Log cabins are the rule and not the exception for houses. Once in a while a log church is seen; it possibly has two windows, blocks piled one on top of another for steps, plenty of mud between the logs and on the floor, and rough hewn logs on pegs for benches or "pews." There is no "sound of the church-going bell," no "call to prayer," no organ, no carpet or cushioned seats for the worshipers, no velvety chair for the preacher, but his sermon is usually powerful if not eloquent, and here no musical director finds fault if some female's voice breaks in singing and soars several octaves higher than the ordinary. Sociables and baked bean suppers are yet to be introduced. It is safe to say that the minister's salary is not large, and it costs but little to send the "missionary collections" to the heathen in foreign lands.

The schoolhouses are after the same pattern as the churches, and in order to keep up with the times some of the schools must have the "Quincy system." Possibly it may be an improvement over their present methods and adapted to this country.

"Graham! Graham!" shouted the brakeman, and I immediately left the train, for I did not expect to find anything here in mountains but corn bread and bacon.

Seal of the United States.

The present seal of the United States was made after the design of Mr. Dwight, formerly librarian of the State Department, and is the fourth of the series. It depicts the American eagle, holding in each claw a sheaf of thirteen arrows, and surmounted by a circular wreath enclosing thirteen stars, corresponding to the original States, and encircled by the motto "E Pluribus Unum." It is mounted upon a massive block, and is so admirably constructed mechanically that the slightest turn of the screw will develop all the pressure required.

The uses to which the great seal are put are various. It goes upon all commissions, pardons and other official documents issued by the President; but a law passed in 1789 says it shall not be affixed to any instrument except a commission "without the special warrant of the President therefor."

New Silver Coin.

The issue of standard silver dollars from the mints during the week ending April 4, was $318,235. The Director of the Mint has issued a circular to artists and others, prescribing conditions for the consideration of new designs for standard dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes. Designs must be presented in the form of models or medallions in plaster, from four to eight inches in diameter; a separate design to be submitted for the obverse and reverse of each denomination. An award of not over $500 will be made for each design accepted.

Barnum's will covered nearly one hundred pages of manuscript, and was very generous to relatives and public institutions.

Granite.

The following article on "Granite" we copy from the Monterey Cypress, and as it speaks of the work of two gentlemen who were former residents of this city we give it space in the PATRIOT knowing that it will be found interesting to many of our readers.

"The statue of Father Junipero Serra, being erected in this city for Mrs. Leland Stanford, is progressing as fast as the delicate work and care of such an undertaking will permit. The work is being done by Messrs. Bisson, Sr. and Jr., of San Jose, and, will, when completed, be a work well worthy of their pride. Some slight alterations have been deemed necessary in order to improve the strength and appearance of the statue, for instance; instead of both hands projecting out, a cross being held in one, the sculptor (Mr. Bisson, Jr.) has suplimented a bible held in one hand pressed closely to the heart, this feature strengthens that portion of the figure and will make breakage less possible. A great improvement too has been made on the head, the expression of the face being much improved. The whole figure is being made of Sierra Nevada granite, (a superior article) and in the hands of such skilled workmen as the Bissons, will give the old capital a monument to be proud of.

While in conversation with Mr. Bisson, Jr., a Cypress reporter was greatly interested in the granite industry of this country, the largest quarries in the United States being in Massachusetts. The following description of these quarries was presented by Mr. Bisson, Jr., to the reporter, at the request of the latter which we gladly publish:

"Almost the first thing one notices on entering the town of Quincy, Massachusetts, are the numerous derricks perched high on the hillsides, the long rows of sheds with piles of rough granite lying around them, monuments tastily arranged to catch the eye of the purchaser, and the ring of the stonecutters' hammers, all giving the general appearance of a place where the granite industry is a prominent feature.

"A trip to the quarries and sheds may prove beneficial as well as interesting to the visitor. And for the benefit of those who cannot go there and see for themselves I will try and explain how granite is quarried, cut, polished and made ready for the market. The first places to visit are the quarries, of which there are several kinds and grades. There are the sheet quarries where the granite lays in fine horizontal sheets, varying in thickness from six inches up to fifteen feet. Then there is what is called the up and down quarries where the granite lays in every conceivable shape, and what is remarkable about this is that these quarries, sometimes, are not a hundred yards apart. Then the color of the granite varies a great deal, you will see in one quarry that it is dark blue stone and another will be light.

The sheet quarries are a great deal the easiest to work because steam drilling machines can be used to such good advantage. When the quarry men commence to cut up a sheet of granite, the drilling machine cuts a channel through it, then the men drill a large hole ten or fifteen feet from the channel, load it with powder and blast it, which loosens immense blocks of granite, which are afterwards cut up to sizes required.

The waste pieces are given to the pavement makers of which there are hundreds.

When an order comes in for a building or monument, or in fact anything in the stone line, the sizes of the stone required are given to the quarry foreman, who, at once, commences to get the stone out. Some pieces he will find, which are just what he needs, others have to be split, which is done by drilling holes in a straight line and then inserting wedges and half rounds of steel and by driving the wedges gently at first, gradually increasing until the stone splits.

When the stone is ready to be hoisted, a powerful derrick is swung around and chains are lowered, and put around the stone and word given, and they are quickly out of the quarry and on the car on the way to the stone cutter.

All these quarries are open to the weather and the quarryman's life is a hard one. In the summer time the heat is intense, the bright stone acting as a reflector making it almost unbearable. In the winter it is bitter cold, some of the quarries being so deep that the sun does not strike the bottom at all.

Leaving the quarries we next go to the stone sheds. Here is where the stone comes when it leaves the quarry. Stones that are to be polished are just hammered where the polish is to be. Those that are not polished are finished and put outside, and when all the stones are done for a job they are tied together and boxed and shipped to their destination.

When a stone is ready for the polisher it is run in under a wheel composed of iron rings about an inch and a half wide and an inch apart. These rings are held together by a cross piece. The wheel runs on it flat. The spaces between the rings are to allow the material used to get under the wheel. When the polisher has leveled the stone to be polished, he puts a frame around it so his material will not run off.

The first thing he puts on is what is called chilled iron or small iron globules, resembling very fine shot.

After using this about an hour the stone has to be washed off, and then emery is put on. That is ground very fine and then the stone is ready for the final process.

It is washed off again and then a wooden wheel with a felt covering is put on and a prepared putty powder is sprinkled on the stone. The wheel is then run at a very high speed until the stone gets hot from friction and then it is polished, a polish that will last for ages.

When the stone leaves the polishing shop it goes direct to the carving shop, where a skilled workman ornaments it as he is directed.

Here in the carving shops we have an example of what patience and skill will do. Here are men employed on fine statuary working for months and months on one piece of work, where the least false stroke would mean great loss of money and also reputation. As a rule the men who do this work are steady, who take pride in their art.

Altogether the men representing the stone work of Quincy to the employers and employes are a repectable hard working people, and a credit to themselves and their business."

Health Hints.

Don't contradict your wife.

Don't tell a man he is a stranger to the truth because he happens to be smaller than yourself. Errors of this kind have been known to be disastrous.

Never go to bed with cold or damp feet. Leave your shoes beside the kitchen fire, where they will be handy to put on in the morning.

It is bad to lean your back against anything cold, particularly when it is icy pavement, upon which your vertebral arrangements has carromed with a jolt that shakes the buttons off your coat.

Always eat your breakfast before beginning a journey. If you haven't any breakfast don't journey.

After a violent exercise, like putting up the stove or nailing down carpets, never ride down town in an open carriage. It is better to walk. It is also cheaper.

When hoarse speak as little as possible. If you are not hoarse it won't do any harm to keep your mouth shut, too.

Don't light a fire with kerosene. Let the hired girl do it. She hasn't any wife and children. You have.

Don't roam about the house in your bare feet at the dead of night trying to pick up stray tacks. Men have been known to dislocate their jaw through this bad practice.

When you see a man put the lighted end of a cigar in his mouth, don't ask him if it is hot enough. Serious injury has often resulted from this habit.

Not a Pressing Creditor.

Dr. T. M. S. Kenney, tells this story of foreign mission collection experience:

"I was preaching," said he, "in a certain section of the country, and after the close of the service a dear good brother invited me home to dinner. If I had known what I afterward knew I think probably I should not have gone. I had talked for a collection for the purpose of missions, and as we were driving to the brother's home he said to me:

"Brother Kenney, did you notice that I did not give anything this morning?"

"'No,' said I, 'I never notice who give and who do not.'

"'Well, I didn't continued he; 'I couldn't afford it. I'm too much in debt, but when I get rid of these troublesome demands I'll give something to the work of the Lord?'

"'But,' said I again, 'don't you owe the Lord something?'

"'Well, I don't know; I suppose I do. I never thought of it before in that light.'

"'I'm glad you see it now in a different light,' I ventured to remark, encouragingly. The dear brother hastened to add, however:

"'The Lord don't crowd me as the others do.'"—Kansas City Journal.

Over 15,000 Manuscripts.

Mr. Bok, the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, recently gave some interesting figures relative to the manuscripts received by his magazine during 1890. Owing to its many departments and peculiar characthe, the Journal probably receives more manuscripts than any magazine published.

Mr. Bok says that he received at his office a total number of 15,205 manuscripts. Of these, 2,280 were poems; 1,746 stories and 11,179 miscellaneous articles. Of the poems, 66 were accepted; of the stories, only 21, and of the articles 410, of which latter, however, over 300 were solicited articles. Thus, it will be seen that of the entire 15,000 manuscripts only 497 were accepted; a trifle over three per cent. Deducting from this the 300 accepted articles written at the editor's solicitation, the net percentage of unsolicited manuscripts accepted is brought down to 187, or a little more than one per cent. Statistics such as these show how much utter trash is being written, and the number of persons writing who ought to be employing their time at something else and better.

A Rash Investment.

A boy seven or eight years old, whose parents live on third avenue, was beating a drum in the alley, when a neighbor appeared and asked:

"How much did your father pay for that drum, sonny?"

"Two shillings, sir."

"Will you take a dollar for it?"

"Yes, sir; ma said she hoped I'd sell it for ten cents."

The exchange was made and the drum put where it wouldn't do any more good, and the neighbor chuckled over his stratagem. However, when he got home at night there were four drums beating in front of his house, and the drummer boy was prompt to inform him:

"These are my cousins, and I took that dollar and bought four new drums. Do you want to give us $4.00 for them?"

The neighbor bowed to the inevitable and retired.—Detroit Free Press.

What He Meant.

This is going around town: A prominent traveling man went to a new city for him, and was struck by the airs the hotel clerk put on. He watched his manner towards several guests who preceded him, and after he had registered he turned to the clerk in an admiring sort of a way and said:

"Well, I'll swear, did any one ever tell you how much you were like Clay?"

The clerk straightened up, smiled and said:

"Oh, yes; you mean, of course, Henry Clay, the famous Kentucky statesman?"

"Oh, no, I don't," returned the traveler. "I mean just the plain, ordinary clay they make pottery of."—Clothier and Furnisher.

More Big Ocean Steamers.

The Cunard company have invited tenders for two powerful steamships, which will be built with a view to crossing the Atlantic in five days. They are to have a tonnage of 12,000 each, to be 600 feet long and 65 feet wide. They will probably each cost £400,000. The Inman company on their part, intend to build two ships equally as powerful, with similar intentions as regards speed. These boats will be built in America, with a view to secure the subsidy to be granted to American built mail steamers.

Water Hearing.

The Legislative Committee held two sessions Thursday, one from 10 A. M. to 12.45 P. M., and the other from 2 to 5 P. M., at which the testimony of the witnesses was concluded, and Friday the arguments were made by W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., for the city; Asa P. French, Esq., for Randolph and Holbrook; and ex-Governor Robinson, for the Quincy Water Company.

Engineer Tidd was the first witness Thursday, continuing his testimony of a week ago. Thought Great pond was no larger than Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook would require in the future. Knew that mill owners of Braintree had been awarded damages because water was diverted, some $50,000 to $60,000 he believed.

Lawyer Pattee asked him how large a pond or reservoir would be required for a population of 20,000. When told it depended on the watershed, he included that, but Engineer Tidd wouldn't give an offhand estimate.

Engineer Taylor.

Engineer Taylor of Worcester next took the stand. Was chief and consulting engineer at New Haven, and also consulting engineer of other towns. Had investigated both the Blue Hill and Town river watersheds, covering some three years. Had estimated that there was a watershed of about six square miles on the Blue Hill river which could be turned into the Town river by digging a trench about 2500 feet, the greatest depth of which would be about eight feet. Thought $1,250 would do the job. Thought Engineer Blake's scheme of filter galleries would yield a limited supply because of the quicksand formation. Did not think the experiments already made sufficient to warrant the construction; many wells would have to be driven in experimenting. The location for the proposed dam was a nice one and would make a large reservoir. It would require an immense amount to clear reservoir, some $700,000 to $800,000. Thought the above amount necessary to treat properly. Could, however, only judge comparatively. The company's plans included three more reservoirs on the Town river when necessary, one above and two below the present one. The Blue Hill watershed would also yield 5000 to 6000 gallons daily when required. Thought water of present supply would be very good in five or six years. Reservoir might have been cleared and improved. Believed there was no doubt but the Town river supply was ample. He constructed the dam and did as good work as he knew how, and was not limited as to cost. Had never used the kind of pipes used in Quincy, but could see no objection to it. Cast iron pipe was in no way perfect. The pumps were good, and also the station. Pipes at the present time ample.

To Lawyer French he said he thought Engineer Blake

Relied Some on Great Pond.

To Lawyer Pattee he said Braintree Great pond, with proper storage capacity, would supply 50,000 people. Did not know population of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook. If the matter of pipes for a water supply was left entirely to him, he would not put in the Quincy pipes, but cast iron. Quincy pipes not much used in East. Never heard of company's dam being condemned. In early stages of construction Engineer Jackson did make certain suggestions, which were adopted. Considered it feasible to use Blue Hill river water when needed. Was very good water. Certainly clearer than in company's reservoir. Reservoir water was at times highly colored. Did not think it strange that water takers could tell whether the company was drawing its supply from the well or reservoir. He would not condemn Engineer Blake's proposed filter gallery without further investigation. The company had cleared only a small area of its reservoir of stumps and soil, 3000 to 4000 yards. Blue Hill reservoir objectionable because of some shallow flowage. Would not condemn it as a basin. Not absolutely necessary to clear all the reservoir, more particularly the shallow part. In his $700,000 estimate had included all.

Hon. J. White Belcher, Hon. J. T. Stevens and Dr. Dearing were called by the attorney for Randolph, Holbrook and Braintree. All were water commissioners and each objected to any encroachment or interference with the waters of Great Pond.

Dr. W. L. Faxon.

treasurer of the company, said he had always been active in said company. Town made no objection to charter being granted to company. After Selectmen had been authorized to contract with company for hydrants, the corporators had offered to surrender its charter to the town without cost if it would take necessary action. It was never in the minds of the corporators to get possession of the field with the idea of swindling the town. Had asked for charter without clause providing that town may purchase. Committee was willing to report that town could not take for twenty years, but company refused to accept that. When reservoir was built but one bid had been received and that for $25,000 to clear it. Thought it inadvissable to spend so much. Explained the unfavorable analysis of Prof. Sharples in 1889 for the fact that the reservoir had but just been flowed. The amount of stock first issued was $25,000; this was increased to $75,000; then $125,000 and finally $250,000. Stock had been advertised for sale in Quincy PATRIOT in the first years of the company but not a single share was sold in Quincy. Regarding the Quincy Neck extension he said the contract with the city required that an efficient fire service must always be maintained, and thought it therefore not feasible to extend a four-inch main. The company desired to lay a ten-inch main in the Liberty street section, as it would eventually be extended to Milton.

Cross examined he said it was not necessary to lay main to Milton to supply Libery street. Did not recall just what the proposition was. Did not have the books with him and could not give detailed account of cost. Contractor McClellan was largely interested in putting in water-plants. Was not aware of this at start. He was also large owner of stock in companies. He subscribed for more than one-half of the Quincy stock; perhaps 700 or 800 shares out of 1250. Paid for them in cash at $100 per share. His contract for putting in the plant was $237,000. This included the first 22 miles of pipe, the pumping station, etc. He not taken by Messrs. J. A. Gordon, C. H. Porter and himself. The witness was questioned at length on how the stock had been increased, divided up, etc. The principal item in the debt was bonds to the amount of $250,000. He considered the franchise and right to use streets worth now $300,000. There was no wisdom in Quincy. Was asked if the company did not hold out as an inducement when it sold the bonds that the town would soon buy the works, and said brokers had so advertised. He was not instrumental in having order introduced in City Council to buy the works. Hoped it never would. Councilman Sherman was one of the hardest men the company had to fight. He was a pretty good fellow and told the truth when he had occasion to. The doctor said he was on fairly good terms with the people of his ward. If two-thirds of the voters had petitioned for a new supply, he thought it was because they had been misinformed. There seemed a desire to beat the company. Doctor considered himself more than a representative citizen. Thought he had worked himself up pretty well in Quincy. Believed the movement was to beat down the value of the company's works. Men were badgered to sign petition. Thought the intelligence was largely on the side of the Water Company.

Superintendent Hall

Had been superintendent since 1884. Present system 33½ miles; mains 4 to 20 inches in size; 101 hydrants owned by city; were two pumps with daily capacity of 2,000-000 gallons; four horizontal boilers. The original system was 22¼ miles; was extended 3½ miles in 1890, 2 in 1889 and between 1 and 2 in 1888. Regarding Neck extension, did not consider it feasible to extend the 4-inch main on South street, but that an 1800 feet main would have to to be laid, which was not practical. Company never claimed ten per cent. guarantee for extension; only about six per cent. Knew there had been considerable taste, color and odor in water of reservoir at times, because of its newness. Other supplies with new reservoirs had same trouble. Fire service was always efficient. If there was no pressure when alarm was given it would be impossible to create it inside of twenty minutes. Never refused permission to open hydrants, but always required notice that company might afterwards examine hydrant. There were suits pending against the piggeries; had secured temporary injunction against Mr. Fallon. Company will have to abate nuisance itself; State Board of Health could do little or nothing; company was pursuing all possible methods. There were four piggeries on the proposed supply.

Cross-examined, he located the piggeries. Believed there were some sixty odd miles of accepted streets in Quincy. Were also many private ones. Perhaps the company had twenty-five miles of pipes in accepted ways. Main pipe on Hancock street was twelve inches; all others in immediate Centre four and six. No legal steps had been taken against Dr. Simonds estate. Company had wanted $500 guarantee to extend main through Liberty street section, where the cost would be about $6,000.

Henry H. Faxon.

Was one of the largest water takers; some 24 or 25 places. Had five houses and thirteen tenants at Neck. Would very much like a water supply there, but it was so rocky he did not blame the company for refusing. All his tenants were clamoring for water.

At this point, 12.45, the hearing adjourned until 2 P. M., when Mr. Faxon resumed the stand.

It did not seem to him that the city was much interested in the movement as the City Solicitor was absent. Thought it would be suicidal to have two water supplies in city. He emphasized the fact that what would benefit the city in any particular would benefit him. Believed the act was to be used as lever on company. Some parties undoubtedly had grievances; there was disgruntlement and political intrigue. One or two in Council had stirred up this whole matter. If they were analyzed they would be found muddier than the water. Didn't own any stock in water company, and didn't want to. Thought there was a desire on the part of some to be water commissioners.

Cross-examined—was always opposed to city owning works from first to last. Hadn't drank a gallon of water in five years. Used appolinaris. When questioned about how politics entered he stated that members of Council had endeavored to get their water free because of their position.

James H. Slade, who gave his occupation as a blacksmith, said he had never been able to get water. Had opposed action of Council in petitioning. Believed the sentiment was against the company because of lack of information. Four or five persons had Manufactured the Sentiment.

Thought Engineer Blake had been employed more as counsel than as an expert. Many false statements had been made about their pipes, worthless works, high value, poor reservoir. Sentiment based on misrepresentation. Thought water exceedingly palatable; not disagreeable or highly colored.

Cross-examined—Was opposed to the company being granted the charter, and now favored purchase by city. Did not think the Council vote of 16 to 2 should have much weight. Ten members had inherited antagonism from previous Council. First Council had antagonized Mayor Porter. Thought some Councilmen would vote to extend mains everywhere, and this was why some favored city ownership.

Tilly Haynes testified to the high character and business reputation of the late W. C. McClellan, the contractor.

Timothy Reed thought water was in the main satisfactory. Was opposed to the present petition. Had opposed the town putting in the works originally. Thought company was entitled to good profit.

Ex-Mayor Porter was then called.—Had resigned as president and director of company upon election as Mayor, and afterwards sold stock. Reviewed the early action of town. Thought water very satisfactory; of better color than Weymouth or Hingham, and as good as Braintree. Excellent for domestic purposes. All water in eastern Massachusetts was discolored. Believed it was the intention to use the act as a club. The borrowing capacity of the city was being speedily exhausted, aside from water. Did not think the sentiment was in favor of new supply. Had been many misrepresentations. Water improving each year. Company never much of Financial Success.

Rev. H. E. Cotton, one of the first takers found water in the main very satisfactory. Knew it was discolored and had a smell at times. Didn't believe petition represented the city, and protested against granting. It would be unfair and dishonest. Would be willing to leave act to a two-thirds vote of people.

Peter W. French and an engineer of the National Tube Works, testified to the value of the Quincy pipes.

Remonstrants rested at 4.40 P. M.

William Henry Glenon wished to be heard and closed the hearing by explaining the fishy taste. He recommended artesian wells or condensers at Quincy Point.

Mayor Fairbanks was put on the stand Friday morning, and questioned for about twenty minutes. Personally he did not believe a two-thirds vote could be obtained either to build new water works or buy the present works. Believed the city would be unwilling to pay $300,000 for franchise. Works may have cost half a million to build, but had estimated that they could be duplicated for $300,000. Thought these facts had weight with people. Sentiment of city was in favor of owning water works. Was positive there was no politics in the movement. Had heard politics mentioned but once in City Council on any subject. No one had been paid to circulate petitions. Practically City Solicitor Hayes had declined to conduct because he did not think the city had time to prepare case. Thought best to make a more complete investigation. Mayor reiterated that he should not sanction any system until a thorough investigation had been made. Quincy wanted good water at as low cost as possible. Thought Engineer Blake a competent engineer. Had been employed on sewerage system. This closed the testimony.

Asa P. French made the closing argument for Randolph, Holbrook and Braintree, occupying but a few minutes.

The Public Drinking Fountain.

In a few weeks our citizens will have the pleasure of seeing this large and beautiful granite structure, set in its position at the junction of Hancock and Washington streets. One needs to see it in the rough, before the parts are united, to realize the size and strength of the structure. One of the big drinking basins is being cut,—it weighed 36,000 pounds and required eight horses to move it.

The circle around the fountain at the base including the paving will be sixty-nine feet.

Of the seven to eight thousand dollars required to erect this beautiful structure, all but $400 has been raised, unless the plumbing is very expensive.

The concert at Mr. Charles H. Hardwick's residence this week added $76.50 to the fund; the balance needed it is hoped will be raised before the fountain is completed.

Fountain Entertainment.

The beautiful residence of C. H. Hardwick on Chestnut street looked very brilliant from the exterior Monday evening, but much more so on the interior, where potted plants and brightly burning lights made the spacious hall and parlors look very beautiful to the 150 who had gathered to listen to an excellent and lengthy programme that had been arranged by Miss Hardwick in aid of the fountain fund.

Part one of the programme included piano solo by Miss Bailey, selections by the Arion quartette, composed of Messrs. Osborne, Jones, French and Isaac; vocal selections by Mr. Howard, of the Apollo club of Boston; recitations by Mrs. Gurney of Wollaston; solos by Miss Bailey of Boston, and Master Storer, of the church of the Advent choir.

The numbers were all very fine and were greatly enjoyed especially the solos by Master Storer, who is but fourteen years of age; he has a wonderful soprano voice, which at once captured his hearers.

Part two was a comedy entitled "A Happy Pair" which was given by Miss Edith Randall and Mr. Howard Wing, which took very nicely.

Mr. Emery has resided in Quincy for a number of years and was employed by Contractor Higgins, with whom he has worked for some months.

He leaves a widow and three children, two sons and a daughter.

The funeral was held from the Episcopal church at 2.30 o'clock, and was conducted by Rev. H. Evan Cotton. Clan McGregor, of which he was a member attended in a body.

Electric Freight Railway.

The Boston dailies report a hearing Monday at the State House before the Railroad Committee on the projected Quincy Electric Freight Railway Company, the parties named in the bill submitted being John Q. Adams, Henry L. Higginson, Charles H. Porter, William G. A. Pattee, Philip L. Saltonstall, Herbert M. Federhen, George E Armstrong and John R. Graham. The route as laid out was from tidewater at Quincy Point around the southern border of Quincy to the West Quincy station on the Granite Branch of the Old Colony, where it connects with the several quarries. The capital named in the bill is $300,000, which may be increased, and the company is authorized to issue mortgage bonds to the amount of $150,000. The road must be begun and completed within two years.

Mr. Pattee appeared for the petitioners, and Horace G. Allen and Charles F. Jenney for landowners who object to the taking of their property. President Choate of the Old Colony Railroad said his company had no objection to offer other than that there shall be no crossing of its tracks at grade. Mr. Pattee said that it was proposed to go under the main tracks of the Old Colony, and he thought the Granite branch could be crossed by an overhead bridge. Mr. Pattee said further that the petitioners would be willing to change the route if they could thereby accommodate the objecting land owners.

The hearing adjourned for one week with the understanding that the petitioners would then present a new route and a map of the same.

For the Patriot.

North Street Sidewalk.

The following petition was recently drawn up and circulated:

To the Common Council of the City of Quincy:

GENTLEMEN,—We the undersigned, taxpayers and residents in North street, Quincy Point, respectfully petition your Honorable body to provide us with a sidewalk, and that you will make an examination of the street at your earliest convenience, as it is sometimes in so bad a condition as to be almost impassable.

This petition was signed by forty-five residents on North street.

When it was about to be presented to the City Council some one remarked that it would be useless to offer it, as there were many other streets in need of improvement, and so the petition was not laid before the City Council as it should have been, and as the signers wished it to be.

It is important that the City Council should know the feelings and wishes of the people in North street.

Since the petition was thrown aside or destroyed, the sidewalk in front of a few houses at the northerly end of North street has been greatly improved by covering it with coal ashes taken from the Washington schoolhouse. Nothing however has been done towards making a sidewalk on that part of North street where it is most needed. Why cannot the improvement commenced be continued southward? Surely such a sidewalk could not be a very expensive one, and what street in all Quincy needs its more? The reasonableness of the petition of the forty-five signers may be seen by any one who will pass through the street.

ONE OF THE SIGNERS.

CITY COUNCIL.

But seventeen members responded to the roll call at the regular meeting of the City Council Monday evening. Two afterward presented themselves leaving the absentees President Thompson and Councilmen Bryant, Duffield and Hayward.

In the absence of the President the Council was called to order by the senior member, Councilman Newcomb, who was afterward unanimously elected President pro tem.

Three Travese Jurors.

Upon notice and motion three traverse jurors were drawn to attend the Superior Court May 5, viz: Josiah Randlett, Edward S. Jewell and James W. Pierce.

Wants to Tunnel Boston.

The Mayor forwarded a letter of H. C. Spaulding, with a request that he be given a hearing.

Councilman Gray said he had attended a meeting addressed by that man in Cambridge recently, and that it amounted to little.

Mayor Fairbanks said he forwarded the communication at the request of prominent citizens. The talk would be interesting and instructive, and would cost the city nothing.

Upon motion of Councilman Warner the Mayor was requested to extend the gentlemen an invitation.

$10,000 to Remodel.

A communication from Commissioner Ewell informed the Council that no bids had been received at his office for remodeling City Hall, but he had an estimate from a reliable source that the cost would be $10,000. Received and placed on file.

Street Sprinkling.

The Mayor forwarded a communication relative to street sprinkling, and desired that the Commissioner be authorized to sprinkle at his discretion, the expense to be charged to Miscellaneous Highway Account.

A motion to refer to the Committee on Streets was defeated, and it was laid upon the table until the next meeting.

Wollaston Objects.

A petition largely signed by Wollaston residents requested that no billiard or pool license be granted at Wollaston this year. Referred to Committee on License.

Quarry Street.

Councilman Fallon presented the petition of McDonnell & Sons and others that the westerly end of Quarry street be straightened. Referred to Committee on Streets with instructions to give public hearing.

Licenses.

An application of C. H. Abbott for a license as a common victualler was referred to the Committee on Licenses.

An application of Joseph T. French for a license to keep more than four horses, was referred to the same committee.

Fire Alarm.

The Committee on Fire Department reported an order granting a location of poles on Bates avenue, Liberty and Quincy streets to the Chief Engineer. Ordered to a second reading.

Cemetery Enlargement.

The Committee on Public Grounds reported in favor of enlarging the Mount Wollaston Cemetery as proposed, and offered an order authorizing the Mayor to make the purchase at an expense not to exceed $6000; the money to be borrowed on three notes. Ordered to second reading.

Favor Addition to John Hancock.

The Committee on Public Buildings recommended an addition of four rooms to the John Hancock schoolhouse, and reported an order appropriating $500 for plans.

Councilman Warner moved that the report be referred back to the committee with instructions to report in favor of a new building on the "New Plains."

Councilman Moxon argued that it was needless to make the reference if the committee were to be instructed. He said the School Committee was decidedly of the opinion that it would be best for many reasons to enlarge the John Hancock, and as they must approve the plans it would be wise to coincide.

Councilman Warner knew that the people of the Ward favored the new building. Did not deem it wise to make addition to old building. Understood the addition of four rooms would cost $15,000 to $17,000, which amount he believed would erect a new building of six or eight rooms. If the addition was made it would be but a very few years before a new building would have to be located where he now proposed, and he argued that it would be economy to do it now. The new district more than half filled the John Hancock now.

Chairman Claflin of the School Committee agreed with the last gentleman that a schoolhouse must soon be built on the New Plains, but he thought it economy to now enlarge the John Hancock. The committee was opposed to small buildings, arguing that in large ones the cost per capita was smaller and that the scholars could be better graded. Did not think it a long walk for children. Favored report.

Councilman Jones favored new building. Did not think the rapid growth on the New Plains had been fully considered.

Councilman Warner said he would guarantee to fill a new schoolhouse in a very short time. Councilman Pratt favored a new building of wood. The section was growing rapidly and he knew of enterprises soon to be established there.

Councilman Moxon argued that it would be from five to eight per cent. cheaper to enlarge. Was opposed to wooden buildings.

Councilman Fallon said a more unfit location could not have been secured than the John Hancock site, and believed the city had spent sufficient there. If the schoolhouse was enlarged it would be but a short time before the city would be asked to enlarge the lot.

Chairman Claflin spoke of the crowded condition of the school and hoped there would be no delays.

Councilman Jones favored recommitment and Councilman Moxon opposed.

Councilman Powers opposed centralization of schools, especially as the Council refused to transport children. Believed in equal rights, and for this reason favored school on New Plains. Enlarging the John Hancock would simply delay its erection. Moved to lay on the table that a public hearing might be given.

Councilman Little opposed a public hearing. The last gentleman had said the judgment of the School Committee was good relative to transportation and should stand by them now. Councilman Jones had then argued that it was beneficial for children to walk, but now thought differently.

Voted not to lay on table.

Voted not to recommit with instructions.

Voted not to recommit for further investigation.

Order passed to second reading to procure plans for enlargment.

Walker Street.

A public hearing was given the petitioners for the extension of Walker street to Newbury avenue. G. W. Hill, F. E. Badger, J. E. Drew, Seth Burrill, John Wakley and others spoke in favor of the petition, arguing that was a necessity, that the people to be benefitted had waited long and patiently, that the street would some day be put through, that it would be a benefit to the city as it would increase the value of the taxable property, that the city should apply the betterment act. One gentlemen testified to a count made one day and that 500 had gone through.

A Councilman asked if it was not advertised and that some had gone through just to be counted.

This question was evaded, but the Councilman said he was so informed.

Hall Place Extension.

But one gentleman appeared in favor of the Hall place extension.

Councilman Powers said the petitioners proposed to put the street in good repair and asked that the matter be recommitted to the Committee on Streets to wait developements. Voted.

State Aid.

The Committee on State Aid recommended that $4 be allowed Barbara Talbot and $8 allowed Thomas Munson as State Aid. Accepted.

Common Street.

The order appropriating $1200 for paved gutters and drains on Common street was under suspension of rules passed to be ordained.

Reardon Street.

The order appropriating $1175 for Reardon street was slightly amended and passed to be ordained.

Paved Gutters and Crossings.

The order of $3000 for paved gutters and crossings was amended as to payment, and passed to be ordained.

Hancock Street.

The Committee on Streets reported in favor of finishing Hancock street as recommended by the Commissioner of Public Works, with these exceptions, that the street be paved from sidewalk to sidewalk at a point commencing at the railroad bridge and ending at the Neponset bridge, and that the stone curbing be continued to the bridge, and that the vote to lay out 64 feet wide be revoked, and that the remainder be laid out 56 feet wide. An order for $10,750 was offered.

At the request of Councilman Jones, who had some doubt about the street railway part, the order was recommitted.

Grove Street.

The Committee on Streets opposed the extension of Grove street, but recommended $500 to put accepted part in repair, the money to be borrowed on one year loan.

Garfield Street.

The joint Committee on Streets and Sewers reported an order appropriating $2450 on one year loan for a drain and other improvements on Garfield street. Ordered to second reading.

Water Street.

The Committee on Streets reported in favor of widening Water street to 45 feet, and offered order of $100 for plans. Ordered to second reading.

Adjourned at 10.20.

Street Sprinkling.

The flying dust reminds us that it will soon be time to sprinkle Quincy streets, if they are to be watered this year. The Mayor requests that the Commissioner be authorized to sprinkle at his discretion and use such portion of the general highway appropriation for the purpose as he deems advisable.

It was well that the City Council took until the next meeting to consider this matter. The highway appropriation is some two to three thousand dollars smaller than last year. Commissioner Ewell informs us that he has found already that he must postpone many improvements that should really receive attention. It is probable therefore that the proposed action will not permit of very general sprinkling of the streets, and possible not any.

It is well therefore that the new law should be given careful consideration. City Clerk Spear informs us that the act read in the City Council Monday evening was not the final draft as passed. Below is the correct bill, and it opens up different methods of precedure:

[Chap. 179.]

AN ACT RELATING TO THE WATERING OF STREETS IN CITIES.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

SECTION 1. Any city, the population of which exceeds thirty thousand, as determined by the last preceding state or national census, may annually appropriate money to water all or any of the public streets within its limits, or it may determine that such streets shall be watered in whole or in part at the expense of the abutters thereon; and the method so determined upon shall apply throughout the city for that municipal year only.

SECT. 2. If a city shall determine that the streets within its limits, or certain streets or portions of streets therein, shall be watered in whole or in part at the expense of the abutters, the expense of such watering shall be assessed upon the estates abutting on such street or portion of such street in proportion to the number of linear feet of each estate upon such street or portion thereof so watered.

SECT. 3. The amount of such assessment upon each estate shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of section two, by the board of aldermen, board of public works, board of street commissioners, superintendent of streets, or other officer designated therefor by the city council of the city, and unless previously paid shall be certified by such board, superintendent or other officer, to the assessors or collector of taxes of the city who shall include the same in the next tax bill issued for an annual tax on such estate, and the same shall be a lien upon each such estate, and shall be considered as constituting a part of, and shall be levied, collected and paid, or abated, in the same manner as the city taxes on real estate.

SECT. 4. Any city, the population of which does not exceed thirty thousand, which shall adopt the provisions of this section in lieu of the provisions of the preceding sections, by vote of its city council may annually appropriate and expend money for watering its public streets, and may provide that the board of aldermen or any municipal board or committee charged with the expenditure of the appropriation may assess upon the estates abutting upon the streets so watered, the whole or a portion of the cost of such watering, and the amount of such assessments upon each estate unless previously paid shall be certified by such board or committee to the assessors or collector of taxes of the city, who shall include the same in the next tax bill issued for an annual tax on such estate; and the same shall be a lien upon such estate, and shall be considered as constituting a part of, and shall be levied, collected, and paid, or abated, in the same manner as the city taxes on real estate.

SECT. 5. Chapter three hundred and sixty-five of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety is hereby repealed.

SECT. 6. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved April 10, 1891.

OUR TWIN city, Woburn, is also after a sewerage bill this year, or rather the appointment of a sewerage commission which shall have full control of matters relating to sewerage. A bill has been reported which provides for the appointment by the Mayor and Aldermen of three commissioners, to hold office for one, two and three years respectively, and thereafter annually one person for three years. Their compensation is limited to $200 each per annum.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, April 22, 1891.

The annual contest over the bill for the relief of tour workers in paper mills occurred in the Senate Thursday afternoon and resulted in the defeat of the bill by a vote of 14 to 17.

Politics came to the front very sharply in the House over the bill to prevent political committees from paying poll taxes, except upon the written request of the voter whose tax is paid. The Democratic leaders, Quincy and McEttrick, said that it was a Republican trick to cut off Democratic votes, because the Democratic managers had to pay the taxes of their voters much more than the Republicans, while the Republicans replied that it was a bill for honest politics, so that the Democrats should not be voted in droves. As it was conceded that the poll tax amendment will be adopted, each side said the bill would have effect only this year, if passed. The House finally passed the bill with no opposition on the final stage.

Matters under the new anti-lobby law have reached the point where something must be done to secure the efficiency of the law and to save it from falling into contempt. At first it worked excellently. Those against whom it was aimed acknowledged the force of the sentiment against them by appearing infrequently at the State House, though they did not register when they came. Others registered, trying in good faith to conform to the law. As the session went on and those who showed themselves at the State House were not molested, they became bolder and latterly they have been as omnipresent as under the old regime. But this is not the worst of it. There is reason to suppose that they are retained on cases and refuse to register, either from their own choice or from the choice of their employers. More than that, if statements are to be trusted, they are so ready to bring the law into contempt that they work against a measure on which a registered lobbiest is engaged and who should be, if the law is of any account, in better standing at court than those who are not registered. The law is weak in not having some one to take the initiative against those who are presumably lobbying, though they are not registered. Men do not stay about the State House for months with no visible means of support for the mere sake of watching public business. Something should be done.

While the Legislature is grinding out laws in the venerable end of the State House, the new end is rising rapidly. At the north end of the extension, on Dome street, the walls are already as high as the tops of the houses and at the place where they come nearest to the present State House they are several feet above the level of the street. It is to be noticed as the walls rise that they do not stand square with anything. The line of the new is not in line with the old, nor yet is it in line with the street. The extension seems to have been set down carelessly on the lot and stands pretty thoroughly askew. No reason for this is evident on the face of the situation and it is certainly offensive to the eye. The new part is of white marble. The old part in front is of brick painted yellow. The two parts are totally out of harmony and the fineness of the new compared with the old leads to the inevitable suspicion that there is somewhere a plan for tearing down the old State House and reconstructing everything new from the foundations. Of course it rests with the Legislature, but it does not seem as if a business man would conduct his business in the way in which this is managed. The work is being pushed vigorously. Hosts of men are at their places on the walls and an enormous quantity of bricks is being used for the lower stories on the partitions and supports.

Speaker Barrett's ruling Tuesday against the Senate bill to repeal the public bar law was what was expected. For the first time in his career as Speaker, he was appealed from, but he was sustained by a vote of 115 to 59. With few exceptions the vote was on party lines, for a knot of Democrats did vote with the Republicans to sustain the ruling. But this does not end the fight of the liquor interest for the repeal of the public bar law and more will be heard from it this session.

Steps have been taken for submitting to the people at the November election the resolve to require a majority for a quorum of the Senate and House. As a large majority of each body for two years in succession has approved the change, it is likely the people will approve it also.

Both branches have adopted an order for the appointment of a joint special committee to sit during the recess and to investigate the present system of recording deeds and mortgages, and also the Tower's or Australian system of land registration about which Gov. Russell sent a special message to the Legislature.

Without a word of debate the House ordered to a third reading the bills to raise the school age from 14 to 15 years and to prohibit bond investment companies from doing business.

The scheme for a canal across Cape Cod has an extension of life, though it does not appear just what form it will take. The committee has reported an extension of four years to the old company, but under very heavy forfeits if the canal is not finished within that time. But a minority of four would not give the old company this favor. They have reported a bill for a new company to have the right to go on with the work. This will mean a hard fight in the Legislature, unless the signs fail.

A long debate in the House resulted in the defeat of the Senate bill to forbid farmers to snare partridges and sell them, even if taken on their own land. The farmers' boys occupied a prominent place in the debate and the farmers in the House led the attack upon the sportsmen.

In place of the bill to amend the law relating to the sale of impure milk, the Senate has substituted one to prohibit the sale of milk in unclean cans. It puts heavy pecuniary penalties and imprisonment upon those who sell or offer for sale milk in cans which are unfit to contain it "by reason of dirt, filth or foul odors." Take it all around, with the Legislature this year, the people are in a fair way to have pure milk.

Evening Drawing School.

The evening drawing school closed a most successful term at Hardwick's hall, last week. The scholars are divided into two branches, namely, mechanical and freehand drawing. One year's course is all that is provided in the mechanical class, but a two years' course is given in freehand.

When the school opened Nov. 4, 1890, there were a number of applicants for the mechanical course, but only sixty were accepted on account of room. This class begin with the elements in geometry and then in succession take up projection, sections, development of surfaces, intersections of solids, isometric drawing and projection of shadows. Here they branch off, the stone cutters finishing up with monumental work and the machinist in machine drawing.

Each of these scholars has completed eighteen sheets which are lettered, numbered and have the name of the scholar who did the work.

The best work in this department was executed by R. Duthie, A. T. Barstow and A. K. P. Shackley.

In the free-hand department there were thirty-four scholars, and the work is entirely from objects. The scholars began with simple models and were gradually given more difficult pieces of ornament and drapery.

The best work in the two years' course of this class were by T. E. Fredette, A. M. Deane and A. J. Poutas; and in the first year's course by R. Duthie.

The school in general has been a success, but some means should be devised to secure a better attendance. Those scholars who have attended have during school hours attended strictly to business and worked hard, and are, with one or two exceptions, stone cutters or machinists, and this work is invaluable to them.

The schoolroom is fitted with all the appliances necessary to conduct the school in a systematic manner. Electric lights, tables, paper, pencils, drawing tools and everything needed are furnished free, the scholars not even being obliged to furnish the sandpaper to sharpen their pencils, and as the teacher, W. R. England, who is a graduate of the Massachusetts Normal Art School, says, it is the best fitted school of the kind outside of Boston. The public exhibition of the work executed by the scholars during the last term will be announced later.

Funeral of Horace Johnson.

One of the largest funerals which has occurred in West Quincy for many years was that of Horace Johnson, late Superintendent of the Granite Railway Company, which was held from his late residence last Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

The floral designs consisted of a large pillow on which was the word husband; a mound with "Father at rest;" a wreath of ivy leaves from the grandchildren; a bunch of wheat from his sister, Mrs. Mary Ellis; and a large wreath from Granite Railway Company.

The funeral services were in charge of the Rev. W. F. Lawford, assisted by a quartette from Unitarian church, Quincy.

The funeral was in charge of Undertaker Hall, assisted by John D. Nutting. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends from Concord, N. H., Boston, Charlestown and Quincy; Mr. Henry E. Sheldon and Mr. J. Albert Simpson, agent and treasurer of G. R. Co., also Foreman Robertson, of East Milton, and Joseph Pierce, foreman of Granite Railway Co., at Concord, N. H.; also Mr. William Chesley, who has been associated with Mr. Johnson for the last twenty-seven years was among the number.

The remains was taken to the family lot at Hall Cemetery, followed by a large number of his former friends. Several hundred people waited at the cemetery to view the remains.

Anniversary Concert.

A very pretty anniversary concert was given Sunday evening by the Congregational Sunday School, to a large audience. Numerically this Sunday School is the largest Protestant one in the city, and is a great power for good. One year ago there were enrolled 375 members; today 415, divided as follows: primary school, 96; Bible class, 40; main school, 233; teachers and officers, 46. Four times during the year the attendance was over 300, and on Dec. 21st reached the maximum, 316. The smallest attendance was on a stormy Sunday in January, 73. The average attendance was 254½, against 233 the preceding year. The following have been present every Sunday for two years: Willie Ross and Eddie McBane; while the following three were not absent the past year: J. H. Christianson, Willie Patterson and Alice Dunn. Lillie Scammell who was on her eighth year of perfect attendance, broke the record because of an accident. Death entered the school but once during the year. Seven united with the church. The library has now 400 volumes.

Quincy Excels.

An enterprising merchant of Athol, Mass., Mr. S. E. Whittemore, recently had a bread contest, giving for a premium a barrel of Niagara flour to the best bread maker. The three judges were entire strangers to the competitors and the fifty-five entries were by numbers, representing the towns of Athol, Orange, Royalston Petersham. Number 282 won the prize and Mrs. Parke B. Swift of Athol, was awarded the barrel of flour.

Mrs. Swift will be remembered as Miss Belle French, daughter of Dr. Charles S. French of this city, and we are proud to claim her and know that she first learned to make bread in Quincy. Thus the fame of Quincy spreads throughout the land.

Basket Party.

The flower committee connected with the Congregational church held a basket party in the vestry of the church Thursday evening which was largely attended. Baskets were sold 25 cents each, the gentlemen being given the privilege of viewing the same and selecting that which happened to suit their fancy. The lady whose name was on the inside of the basket was then found and the two enjoyed the contents. Ice cream and cake was also for sale.

Sunday School Concert.

The school connected with the Universalist church gave a supper and entertainment at the church vestry on Wednesday evening, which was very much enjoyed. The bill of fare contained a list of many desirable dishes, but it required an old head to tell just what one wanted. It was a conundrum supper with the following

The entertainment commenced with a piano solo by Miss Miller, then a reading by Miss Lora Simmons; followed by the more amusing part of the programme,—the shadow pantomine Cinderilla,—which was very nicely performed by the following young artists:

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1891.

April.

They promised me a flower-bed
That should be truly mine,
Out in the garden by the wall
Beneath the ivy vine.

The boxwood bush would have to stay;
The daily rose bush too;
But for the rest they'd let me plant
Just as I choose to do.

Though not a daffodil was up
The garden smelled of spring,
And in the trees beyond the wall
I heard the blackbirds sing.

I worked there all the afternoon;
The sun shone warm and still;
I set it thick with flower seeds
And roots of daffodil.

And all the while I dug, I planned,
That, when my flowers grew,
I'd train them in a lovely bower,
And cut a window through.

The visitors who drove from town
Would come out there to see;
Perhaps I'd give them each a bunch,
And then how pleased they'd be!

I made my plans—and then for weeks
Forgot my roots and seeds,
So when I came that way again
They all were choked with weeds.

—K. Pyle, in April St. Nicholas.

Household Receipts.

COCOANUT COOKIES. One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, two eggs, two tablespoonsful milk, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, a little salt, one cup of either desiccated or grated cocoanut (if desiccated is used, use less sugar), enough flour to roll thin.

HASH ON BREAD. Toast squares of bread and wet in hot, salted water. Chop equal quantities of cold, fresh meat and potatoes, mix moistly with hash gravy and serve on the toast. Always serve on a well-heated platter.

JELLY ROLL. To one cup of powdered sugar and one cup of flour, add three well-beaten eggs. Stir well and add one teaspoonful cream of tarter and a half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in three teaspoonfuls of water. Bake in two pie pans. Spread as evenly as possible. As soon as done turn the cake bottom side up on a dry towel. Spread it evenly with jelly, roll up quickly and wrap closely in the towel.

FOAM PUDDING SAUCE. One-half cup of sugar, butter the size of a walnut, rubbed together with one tablespoonful of flour, turn on this a cup of boiling water, add the beaten yolks of two eggs while boiling, then the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth; flavor to taste. This is an excellent sauce for cottage pudding.

MILK SOUP. Take one quart of milk, add a pinch of salt; beat one egg well, stir in flour to thicken that has one-fourth teaspoonful of baking powder mixed through it. Mix the eggs and flour so it will form lumps; when the milk boils, stir them in and cook two or three minutes, and you will have a nice soup.

COFFEE CAKE. One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one cup of strong coffee, three eggs half cup of molasses, one cup of water, one cup each of raisins and currants, one teaspoon cloves, two teaspoons cinnamon, one of allspice, two teaspoons baking powder, and flour to make a stiff batter. Bake two hours.

☞ The Massachusetts Sabbath Association earnestly recommends to the pastors and good people of the State, as a Lord's Day, Sunday, May 3, 1891. The intention is, after sufficiently extensive correspondence to conclude upon and designate, an annual, national "Lord's Day's Sunday." We believe that great good will come from simultaneously devoting one day every year to the study of God's great institution of the Sabbath.

No Lack of Courtesy.

The Bridgewater Independent, which always serves up its criticisms with good sense, answers a correspondent who wondered why the paper omits the prefix of Mr., arguing that it shows a lack of courtesy.

Our position accords with the Independent's. We believe it is wholly superfluous in speaking of well known citizens to add the Mr. every time. Their names are given them for use; they are what the parties are known by and spoken of. We would not address everybody by their first name, but in a printed allusion to them we fail to see any lack of courtesy in using simply their name. The prefixes Miss and Mrs. are more necessary in distinguishing the other sex, but there are many cases, where it is clear who is meant, when it is equally proper to omit the title. The best papers are in favor of the omission, as a rule.—Attleboro Daily News.

There are 500 New England people in Riverside, Cal., and most of these are from Massachusetts. The Brockton colony is quite large and its members enjoy in a marked degree the esteem and favor of their fellow-citizens.

Anecdotes.

Contributor—"I have brought you a poem of four stanzas, sir."
Editor (examining it)—; "I count five."
Contributor (Mystified)—"Sir?"
Editor—"Yes; in addition to four, you see, I notice it stanz-a chance of going into the waste basket."

Old Salt—"Did you ever try hard-tack?"
Young Fresh—"Yes, I stepped on one last night that was pretty hard."

Jack—"I had a proposal last night from Ethel."
Harry—"This isn't leap year, man."
Jack—"I know it. She proposed that I shouldn't call on her any more."

Watts—"Now, if I understand correctly, the first principle of socialism is to divide with your brother man."
Potts—"Then you don't understand it correctly. The first principle of socialism is to make your brother divide with you."

New Servant—"There is one thing I don't like in this house."
Mrs. Gayboy—"What's that?"
Servant—"Your husband he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet."
Mrs. Gayboy—"You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it."

"Are Mr. and Mrs. Green at home?" was asked of a little girl who answered the bell.
"Yes."
"Are they engaged?"
The small girl looked horrified as she answered: "Why they are married."

For the Patriot.

New York Fashions.

WRAPS AND JACKETS.

The most successful spring wrap is the single, long cape attached to a pointed yoke. Many garments of this kind are of tan or gray cloth, but stylish ones are in black cloth with gilt embroidered yoke. The yoke, indeed, is the special vantage ground for a display of those passementeries or jewelled bands that are such a rage, but expensive wraps in mantilla shapes, show lengths of either extending downwards. Colored brocade is a favorite lining for gray or tan cloth. Most of the mantilla shapes, however, are in black cloth or Bengaline with adornment of jet, but some few are offset by gilt or jewelled bands. Young people have made a rush for jackets in which those of blue or black cloth bound with gilt and more or less richly trimmed with gilt in front, are chiefly in vogue. All are long, and the longest may be more properly classed as coats, where elegant examples are of black Bengaline corded with gilt and having gay brocaded vests.

MILLINERY.

Lightness is the leading characteristic in millinery. Plain straw is almost dead, and the changes are on fancy straws that in the finer varieties are almost like lace. Lace has never been so commonly worn, and hats or bonnets made entirely of it are being worn with woolen dresses on the street, a combination without precedent. Both hats and bonnets are set like plates on the top of the head, and the only difference between the two consists in the presence or absence of strings which are of narrow velvet or lace. Trimmings are placed in an aggressive way, rising high at the back and with or without an answering touch in front. Crownless toques are in keeping with the fancy for half transparent hats and the majority are made of small flowers, but stylish ones are made of jet in three rows, without being filled in and having an addition of flowers.

SHOES AND GLOVES.

The newest slipper is called the "Cleopatra" and shows a pointed tongue with small ribbon bow. Ties are still laced and boots may sometimes show lacings up the front, although the greater number have buttons at the side. But fashion tends towards low shoes with hosiery to match and uppers are buttoned over for the street. It may be added that in Lord & Taylor's shoe department, to which credit is due for information, the dressing which they have sold exclusively for years, is Button's Raven Gloss, since they have found it the only dressing which softens and preserves the leather. In view of the fashionableness of patent leather, the new dressing Revivium becomes of importance, since prepared especially for the purpose, it prevents cracking. Mousquetaire gloves lead and are sold chiefly in tan or gray, and the same shapes, and colors prevail in silk and taffeta for warm weather.

LUCY CARTER.

Country Roads.

There is not a rural town within boarding distance of a great city which could not at slight expense assure itself all the city boarders that it could accommodate by the simple process of systematically and intelligently improving and beautifying its roads. If it were to appoint a town committee with power to employ experts, or to obtain expert advice, and to carry out the suggestions thus obtained in road improvement, the mere public advertisement of that proceeding would attract boarders from all directions.

The expense would not be great. In nearly every case the gravel or cracked stone necessary for the construction of a serviceable, well-drained road can be obtained within moderate distance. There is, for example, in some parts of Orange County, in New York State, a kind of soft red sandstone to be found in great abundance, which crushes readily under the wheels and makes a hard, firm road-bed, which is never dusty and never muddy, which is yielding to the horses' feet and most agreeable to ride over. Ordinary gravel can be used with almost equally good results. The main thing is to secure something like scientific knowledge in the construction of the road and in the mixture of materials. The vicious idea that anybody can make a road by shoveling dirt into the middle of it from the gutter, or, what is the same thing in a wholesale form hauling it there by means of a "scraper," must be abandoned at the outset, and not only abandoned but prohibited. Until that is done, no reform will be possible.

Barnum's "Brick Man."

As an illustration of one of Barnum's ingenious methods of attracting attention to his museum may be mentioned the incident of the "brick man." One day a man applied for alms to Barnum, who was sitting in the ticket office. To the inquiry as to why he did not go to work, the mendicant replied that he would gladly do so at a dollar a day, if he could find employment. Barnum gave him twenty-five cents to get his breakfast, and told him to return and he would give him a dollar and a half a day and easy work. When the man returned, Barnum gave him five bricks, and told him to place one in front of the museum, another on the corner of Vesey street, a third at the corner of Fulton—on the St. Paul's church side—and the fourth on the east corner of Fulton. Returning then to the museum, he was to take up the first brick, and replace it with the fifth, and then continue his rounds, putting down one brick and taking up the other each time. He was enjoined to answer no questions, and to seem not to hear, and that at the end of each three-quarters of an hour he was to pass into the museum, look around at the curiosities for fifteen minutes, and then resume his rounds with the bricks. Barnum says that the man played his part to perfection, and his eccentric conduct caused a great crowd to gather about the museum. Many of these, of course, went into the museum to seek some explanation as to the purpose of the "brick man." This was kept up for several days, until the police requested his withdrawal, because such crowds lingered about the museum that traffic was interrupted.—Harper's Weekly.

Teachings of Science.

When not too advanced, this is the stage of brawls and fights, of shooting and stabbing in saloons and in the streets, of beating of wife and children at home, of profanity and obscenity everywhere, and of all the horrors so familiar to the frequenters at public places, the visitors at the homes of drunkards, and the readers of the daily papers. This stage may terminate in an unnatural sleep, with restless mutterings, semi-convulsions, or more quiet narcotism. In the fourth stage, or that of dead drunkenness, there is the full development of alcoholic narcotism. The anaesthetic phenomena, or those of insensibility, such as appear under the influence of chloroform or ether, are present. There are muscular palsies, irregular and stentorious breathing; feeble, often intermitting heart action, great fall of temperature, with utter insensibility and unconsciousness; and the next step is death. Death is more likely to occur when the same degree of narcotism is produced from alcohol than from chloroform or ether, because of its longer continuance. The alcohol necessary for these effects is larger in amount and slower in leaving the system than the chloroform or ether. The awakening from the obliviousness of the more advanced degrees of drunkenness, whatever may be the sensations and visions in falling into it is a painful reality. Confusion, depression, and distress; and, before the drunkenness becomes habitual, remorse and shame are keenly felt in all but the lowest natures. For hours, and often for days after, there is pain in the head, often sickness of the stomach, the tongue is coated, the hands tremble, there is frequently feverishness; and languor and inefficiency continue for a longer time. With some, in these fits intoxication, violent and repeated convulsions occur, and with some others there is active delirium—crazy drunkenness—but such cases are not common. It is a curious and most unfortunate fact, that however painful these results, however strong the motive and firm the resolve not to repeat the debauch, there is in many cases an imperative impulse to indulge again in the same manner, especially if any, even the least, intoxicant is taken; and in spite of a knowledge of the consequences and the remonstrances and persuasion of family and friends, the terrible practice becomes habitual. The strong resemblance between the narcotic of alcohol and that of chloroform or ether is apparent, but that of alcohol is much more likely to become habitual. The essential character of the condition is so similar that the same terms may be applied to each. If chloroform is a narcotic, so is alcohol; if one is a depressing, lethal agent, so is the other. If chloroform is a poison so is alcohol. The greatest difference in their immediate action is, that the chloroform is more speedy in its effects and sooner over; and its secondary consequences are less severe.

Tremont.

Sol Smith Russell, the accomplished comedian, comes to the Tremont theatre next Monday night, and will be seen in his exquisitely delicate, touching and yet most amusing character depiction of Noah Vale in "A Poor Relation." There is a true ring to his fun-making, as there is a sincerity in his pathos. It is a beautiful lesson in patient endurance, an example of what many may have suffered, but seldom so graciously, and no one can fail to be bettered by witnessing the performance of "A Poor Relation." It will be a thoroughly enjoyable week.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Seldom at this time of the year are the attractions at the theatres at their best but the Hollis proves a pleasing exception to the rule for tonight Miss Julia Marlowe, the best Shakespearian actress on the stage closes a most brilliant engagement, appearing this afternoon in "As you like it," and in the evening in "Ingomar." Following her comes Agnes Huntington in the opera comique "Paul Jones." The engagement we regret to say is for one week only and will be her last appearance here, prior to her departure for London.

Boston Museum.

And still "New Lamps for Old" loses none of its interest at the Museum for it is one of the most laughable of plays and at the same time it is refined and pleasing to all tastes. It is preceded each evening by "The Open Gate" which begins promptly at quarter of eight.

Boston Theatre.

Again "The Soudan" is with us in all its glory of realistic scenic pictures, noise and people. Hundreds are still flocking to see it and during its absence from the city, it seems to have lost none of its popularity. Sunday, May 3, the Old Colony is to run a special train from Brockton and way stations to accommodate those who wish to attend a grand concert to be given at the Boston Theatre that evening.

TO the Heirs-at-Law, Next-of-Kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of WILLIAM E. CROUCHER, late of Quincy, in said County, deceased,

Greeting:

Whereas, two certain instruments, purporting to be the last will and testament with one codicil thereto of said deceased, has been presented to said Court, for probate, by George W. Morton, of Quincy, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, and that he may be exempt from giving a surety or sureties on his bond, pursuant to said will and statute:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, on the second Wednesday of May next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this Citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the QUINCY PATRIOT, published at Quincy, the last publication to be two days, at least, before said Court.

Witness, GEORGE WHITE, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eighth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one. JONATHAN COBB, Register.

The Coming of May.

(THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL).

The still sweet air breathes in prophetic tone,
In whisperings low, and many a gentle moan.
Young grasses leap with quick and joyous spring,
And o'er the earth their freshest odors fling;
The low-bowed crocuses, with murmurs say
To one another, "There's a sweeter day."
The golden sunshine, with its gladdening rays,
Calls downs from mountains brooks with silver sprays.
The budding tree with joyous bird-song rings,
Like echoes from a thousand golden strings!
All nature smiles a welcome blythe and clear,
While May comes through the doorway of the year.

Miscellany.

DORA.

The night after his stepfather, Squire Halsted, whipped Harold Burr for a thing he had not done, Harold ran away. No one knew it but I, and I was nobody. But I thought as much of Harold as ever a human being could think of another. And I knew that he was wronged, and I felt that Mrs. Robling had done a dreadful thing when she took Squire Halsted for her second husband, and let him rule her, take possession of her money, and ill use her handsome boy.

I had had my share of it too, for while Mr. Robling lived, and while she was a widow I was like a daughter of the house. But no sooner had she come back from her honeymoon trip than all was altered. The squire looked at me coldly, and I heard him ask Mrs. Halsted who I was.

"Her mother died when she was born," Mrs. Halsted said, "and I took the baby to my own nursery, where Harold lay in the cradle."

"More fool you, my dear," said the squire.

"The father went away," said Mrs. Halsted, "and was lost at sea—so they said—and I kept the little girl."

"You must remember that she will need to earn her own bread," said the squire. "She is not a lady. Let the servants keep her in their part of the house and teach her her duties as waitress."

"Oh, Mr. Halsted!" cried the bride, "I cannot do that."

"My dear," said Mr. Halsted, "I am master here."

The poor lady was helpless. She had no longer any control of her own money. I was six years old, Harold the same age, and a terrible life we had had of it. I was very well used in the kitchen, but I felt cast down and degraded. I wore big crash aprons that covered me from head to foot, instead of my pretty muslin and silk dresses. I was delicate, and waiting is hard work when your wrists are slender.

Mrs. Halsted did all she could for me. I used to hear her pleading with the squire to let her send me to a boarding school to be a teacher, but he called her a "little goose," and she fancied him very wise.

But for Harold I should never have known anything, as after school he used to come to me and teach me what he had learned himself.

Cook would whisper:

"That's right, Master Harold. It's a good deed you are doing. God spare you. I was never taught to rade meself, on account of an evil minded stepfather iv me own that put me to sarvice before I could get schoolin', an' I know the loss."

And not a servant but would have waited in my place, for they said I was too small to carry dishes; but the cruel squire would have me come in to make sure that he was obeyed.

Mrs. Halstead really felt badly about it, I know. But two little girls came soon, and then a little boy, and soon she cared nothing for her own splendid boy, and why should she care for me?

But I am wandering away from the morning when Harold Robling, just eighteen that day, walked down the garden path in the gray morning light, and I with him, choking down my sobs. For now the one being I loved was going away from me, perhaps forever.

It was only 5 o'clock, and no one was up. The grass was wet with dew, and there were only a few pink streaks in the sky to tell that day was coming. We did not dare to speak until we got out of hearing of the house, but then I said:

"Oh, Harold, what will you do with no money and no friends—alone in the world?"

"Many a young fellow has done the same sort of thing," Harold said. "No man with his limbs and senses need to starve, and I mean to make my fortune. But I'd rather work in the trenches for my daily bread than to live in Squire Halstead's house, and with a mother he has bewitched into doing what he wishes, whatever it may be. It was a crime to make a servant of you, little sister. But remember, the moment I have power in my hands all that shall be altered. I will write to you, and you shall know just how I get on."

But now we had got to the wharf where he was to take a little market boat to New York, and I was obliged to leave him, for he did not want the squire to find out what he had done until he was fairly out of reach, and then he put his arm about my waist and kissed me.

"Goodby, little sister, he said, "goodby, Dora, my pet. Keep up a good heart and never forget to answer my letters." And he was off, and I went home weeping as though my heart would break.

There was a terrible time at the house when they found he was gone, and the squire swore he should never enter his doors again. But the squire's daughters who hated Harold as their father did, though he was their own mother's child, said they were glad he was gone. And only I remembered him, I think, very long. A weak woman was Mrs. Halsted, and her husband had got her under his power. The way he managed her has always made me think that there must be something in magnetism or hypnotism. She seemed to have lost her senses or to have grown mentally blind, and he led her where he would.

Just about this time I felt very ill, and when I grew better the squire knowing I was good at my needle, made a seamstress of me. I was ashamed to say why, but it is because I looked rather stylish and was called pretty, and so many questions were asked me by guests. As a seamstress I could stay in my upper room and work. I was so thankful for the change. Now I could read a little and be more to myself. I made the finery for the young ladies of the family and no one troubled me.

Once, indeed, a rich old gentleman, having somehow got my story from good old cook, sought me out and made me a proposition of marriage, saying it was a shame that such an elegant woman should live as I did. But I thanked him and declined his offer. I was not unhappy now, except that I pined for news of Harold, for in all these years no word had come from him—none of those letters he had promised.

I felt sure he was not dead, and it was very natural that he should forget to write; but my heart had no rest. He was twenty-six years old by this time, and in all that time much might have happened.

My pillow was often wet with tears from thoughts of him—fancies of what he had suffered, and longing to meet him, or only see him afar but once again.

At last news came. Mrs. Halstead came running into my room wild with joy.

"News of my boy!" she said, holding a letter toward me.

"I thought you had forgotten all about him, madam," I said.

I was sorry the next moment, for she burst into tears and faltered through her sobs:

"You don't know what it is to be the wife of a man who dominates your will! I never have forgotten or ceased to forget other things." Then she wiped her eyes and said: "But, as far as Harold goes it is all over. He has written to me. He is rich—really rich. He has made a fortune in California, and he is coming home to see me. He is in New York and will be here tomorrow. The squire is pleased; the girls are wild to see him; his little brother is delighted."

She ran out of the room again, looking young and happy, and I sat down to my machine, swallowing a great lump that was in my throat.

He had not written to me. Well, I was only a servant, and he was a rich man now. They were rejoicing in his coming for that reason—the squire and his children. He was a very different person from the poor Harold Robling who went away.

"I expect he will give us lots of presents," I heard one of the girls say. "An older brother who is rich is a great thing to have. We must pet him and make him good natured."

"Oh, yes," said the other. "When girls have as stingy a father as we have a generous elder brother is a godsend."

And I—oh! if he should return in rags, begging his bread I should have welcomed him. I cared for him, not for his money. And if he had returned poor it was I to whom he would have written, I knew well. But I tried to put the selfish thoughts away and rejoice for his sake that he had prospered, even if he had forgotten his little sister Dora.

The morrow came. As I sat at my machine I heard the sounds below that told he had arrived. I heard his mother cry out and the squire say heartily, "Welcome home, my boy!" and his sisters squeal and giggle after a way they had. Then the great drawing room doors were closed, shutting me out.

I, who loved him so dearly, went back to my room alone, uncared for, wretched! I felt as though my heart would break. I could no longer keep back my tears. Half an hour passed; then some one came to the door—a servant—who told me briefly that I was wanted in the parlor.

Trembling, quivering, feeling as I had never felt before, I obeyed the summons. I opened the drawing room door.

The squire stood before the fire, important as usual, one hand in the breast of his coat, the other waving towards me as he uttered these words:

"Dora, I have sent for you because Master Harold has returned, and wishes to meet a faithful servant of the family."

But before the words were out of his mouth, Harold, handsomer and larger, but the same for all that—the very Harold that I knew—rushed forward took both my hands and bent down and kissed me.

"I told you, sir," he said, "that I wanted to see Dora—the dearest being alive to me! Such words as you utter I cannot permit you to speak as though they were mine. You have never received any of my letters, Dora, but I have guessed why."

"I never have received a letter, Harold," I answered.

"So I thought," said he. "We will not ask who kept them from you. I have no wish to quarrel with any one; but you were my only friend years ago when I went out in the world homeless and penniless, and I have come now to ask you to share with me the home that I can now offer to you."

"Share your home, Harold?" cried the squire. "The girl is not your sister. It can't be done. It would be improper!"

"I am glad, sir, that the girl is not my sister," replied Harold. "for she is the girl I want for my wife; and here, before you all, I ask her for her heart and hand, and proud shall I be if she will give them to me."

I could not answer, but he saw all I felt in my face, and led me away with him.

There was no quarreling. People like the squire and his family never offend rich people, and I am the happiest woman living.—Fireside Companion.

Signs of Spring.

If you read these learned maxims and take note of each small thing you may come to be a prophet and foretell the gladsome spring. When trees begin to blossom and the violets to bloom; when the bullfrogs in the meadow warble boom-ah-boom-ah-boom; when ducks are flying northward and bright butterflies are out, and robins go housekeeping in the broken waterspout; when grasshoppers are hopping, and black bats come out at night and venture in your bedroom attracted by the light; when birds fly down the chimney, and hens walk in the door, and beetles hold conventions in the center of the floor; when the mud is o'er your shoe tops as you cross the new plowed land—you may count on it as certain that sweet spring is near at hand.—Harper's Young People.

Samuel Bradburn.

An incident in the course of one of Bradburn's journeys was discussed by an old minister, who had the best evidence of its authenticity,—evidence which was afterwards confirmed by Bradburn's nearest relative and biographer. The incident shows that his wit could be merciless when saucily provoked. He had come to the roadside inn to wait for the stage coach. While waiting another passenger arrived,—a young lord attended by his valet. The young gentleman was lively, but stammered slightly in conversation. On seeing Bradburn, whose personal appearance would attract attention, the gay young fellow, speaking aside to the landlady, said,—

"Y-o-you h-have a parson here."

"He's a Methodist preacher, my, lord," said she.

"Oh, then, I-I-'ll have a-a bit of fun with him." Approaching Bradburn, he said,—

"P-p-pray, sir, c-c-can you t-tell me how it was that B-a-Balaam's ass spoke?"

Bradburn, who knew that if you look full at a stammerer you increase his difficulty, replied,—

"What do you say, sir?"

"P-p-p-pray, sir, c-c-can you tell me h-h-how it was th-that Ba-Balaam's ass spoke?"

"What do you say, sir?" cried Bradburn, looking stearnly into his face and putting his hand to his ear.

"Pa-p-pa-pa," stuttered the fun maker, and stood with distorted face, unable to put his question.

His valet came to his rescue, and bowing to Bradburn, said—

"My lord wishes to know, sir, whether you can inform how it is that Balaam's ass spoke?"

"I don't know, sir," was the answer, unless it was that Balaam stammered so badly that he hired the ass to speak for him."

Doth master and man had found fun enough.

The Silent Club.

A queer club was once established in London, under the title of the Silent Club. The members were bound to express themselves at all club meetings, as far as possible, without words. The first rule of the club was:

"The members of this Academy shall think much, write little, and be as mute as they can."

On one occasion a new candidate applied for admission. But the members were limited and all vacancies filled. A meeting was called, the candidate was to be introduced, and the President was to announce his decision. When the gentleman entered, the members, who were all his friends, were as much disappointed as he that he was to be refused. As he approached the President rose, and silently handed him a cup of water, so full that a single drop would make it overflow.

The applicant perfectly understood what the President meant, but he was courageous and quick-witted. Without speaking, he took from his button-hole a single rose and laid it gently on top of the water. He laid it on so softly that not a drop was displaced, and handed it back to the President with a bow.

With one consent the members applauded. They resolved to put their rule aside, and to admit the man who showed them that he could ornament their society without hurting it.

Then the man thanked them in an equally curious way. When the register was handed him to be signed he wrote below his name the number of the club members—100. He added before it an 0, making it 0100. Underneath he wrote, "Their value will be the same."

The man was so modest that the President complimented him immediately by rubbing out the 0 and substituting the figure 1. This made the number 1100. Underneath he wrote, "Their value will be increased eleven times."

These ingenious people must have devoted a great deal of time and thought to avoid using their tongues.—Harper's Young People.

His Rock Bound Coast.

We are now right in the midst of the gold mines. Away up the sides of the mountains are winding roads leading up to the entrance of the great mines. Others are so inacessible that they can only be reached by the burro brigade. Whole strings of these patient little animals may be seen toiling up the mountain with sixteen foot fence boards trailing at their sides, six boards being a load for each burro. Many of the mines are so near that they can be reached on foot, while carriages are in waiting to carry persons to more distant ones.

Away up near the snow line is a tall shaft of pure white marble. It rises out of the top of a gigantic rock, and marks the last resting place of Clifford Griffin, an eccentric brother of the owner of the great 730 group of mines. He was a young man who came from the East for his health. He lived alone in a luxuriantly furnished cabin, the gift of his brother. In his wanderings on the mountain young Griffin used to rest upon this great rock and became so attached to it that he expressed a wish to be buried in its granite embrace should any mishap befall him. One beautiful morning they found him dead in his cabin. In accordance with his desire they chiseled his grave in this great rock, and laid him to rest on the spot he loved so well.—Cor. Omaha Bee.

A Good Religion.

People overanxious to prove certain doctrinal points of religion, sometimes forget the noble simplicity of the Lord's Prayer and the Sermon on the Mount.

A minister, who wished to ascertain to what sect, if any, a certain Frenchman belonged, said:—

"Monsieur, are you a religious man?"

"Oh—oui—certainly! religious man me—very mooch!"

"Will you kindly inform me with what denomination you class yourself?"

"Certainement—like as me fader."

"And what especial—er—persuasion of religious people did your father associate?"

"Wid de same like me grandfader."

"And what was the particular faith adopted by your venerated ancestors, and transmitted to you?"

The old man stopped a moment, and replied, "Oui, oui, it is de religion of my muddah, an' my fader, an' my grandmuddah an' my grandfader; it ees de religion dat say, 'Our Fader een Heaben,' an' 'God so luf the worl'" an' 'Blessed ar-re de pure in heart.' I don't know what kind religion you call dat—but it's de kind my muddah r-r-read een de Bible. Ah oui, certainment! Dat ees eet! eet ees de religion in de Bib'e!"

It Never Fails.

A drayman had backed up to a warehouse on Beekman street to deliver a heavy box, and the process of unloading halted eight or ten pedestrians. Pretty soon along came a rusty old man with a very large cane and a very stormbeaten plug hat.

"What! What! A balky horse, eh!" he chattered to himself as he took in the situation. No one answered him, and he asked of a bystander:

"Have the expedients been resorted to?"

"Dunno."

"Looks like an obstinate brute, but I have a remedy. Always works when other artifices have been tried in vain. I suppose there will be no objection to my trying it?"

"Dunno."

"Well, I'll take it upon myself to start this beast. You see how easily it is done."

He stepped to the horse's head, pulled his left ear down and blew in it with a great "whew-o-o-s-h!" The amazed horse gave his head a swing, and the crowd saw the rusty old man go head over heels into the gutter, while his hat flew one way and his cane the other.

"What in blazes are you up to, anyway!" shouted the drayman, as he let go of the box and ran to the horse to quiet him.

"Never fails—never knew it to fail in my life," replied the old man, as he scrambled up and grabbed for his hat.

Everybody began laughing, and as he rescued his cane from the wheels of a passing car the man with a remedy turned and explained:

"Left ear is the one. Always pull the left ear down and go 'w-o-o-s-h!" and you've got him. Morning, gentlemen—the left ear, remember."

Small Fortunes for Flowers.

The most expensive dinner decoration I ever had charge of was the occasion of a banquet given to General Cutting, at Delmonico's. The whole outlay for flowers alone was $3,000. But even this does not approach the lavish extravagance of the Roman Emperor Nero, who gave a feast where $100,000 was spent in roses alone.

For a dinner of twelve people it is an ordinary thing to spend from $50 to $500 upon flowers. For a banquet $1,000 to $3,000 is usually laid out. But these latter outlays are seldom made, because of the infrequency of large dinners. $150 is an expenditure of every-day occurrence. In the large cities like New York it is a common thing for wealthy people to spend from $100 to $500 a week in flowers, exclusively for home use. Where do they put all these flowers, you ask? You are wrong if you think there is a large quantity of flowers. Whenever I have been asked to decorate a house or furnish flowers for daily use I have selected quality rather than quantity.

Among wealthy people, the choices flowers for the dinner table are orchids. These flowers exhibit a remarkable variation; in fact, it is difficult in some species to find two flowers exactly alike in size and color. A boutonniere for the gentlemen should be made of a "Philanopsis," and about three "Catalyas," tied with a cluster of narrow ribbons to match, for the ladies. This is the most beautiful manner of table decorations, if well arranged and properly carried out. But it is also the most expensive.—C. F. Klunder, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Utilizing Old Umbrellas.

A very pretty piece of ornamental gardening, not too difficult for beginners, can be done with an old umbrella or parasol and some plants of cypress vine, maurandia, sweet pea, or anything that is not of too aspiring a nature. Such climbers as the morning-glory, canary-bird vine, and other twenty-footers, are better left for unsightly fences and buildings. Plants are better than seeds, because more certain, and they do not take so long to catch the knack of twining and spreading. Umbrella ribs are not decorative, and to see such an object standing there week after week, waiting for its clothes, does not give people a pleasant impression of a garden.

But first find your umbrella; and this may not be so easy, for "retired" umbrellas that are no longer fit for use are seldom seen. Some member of the family, however, may be able to produce one; and then it should be immediately stripped of the few tatters left to it. The next step is to paint the frame and handle brown, and when quite dry, plant the end of the handle firmly in the ground, with the frame fully opened. If the handle is rather short it will be an improvement to add a piece of wood to it.

It is now ready for the vines, which should have made some progress in growing; and when they once begin to do their best, the old umbrella frame makes such a lovely green bower studded with blossoms of red or purple or white—or all together if the vines are mixed—that every one exclaims over its beauty.

A parasol with the same treatment is equally pretty on a smaller scale, and it would be very ornamental in the centre of a round bed edged with bright-colored phlox or candy-tuft. With a long spouted watering pot the vines could have a daily drenching in warm weather, when the sun is not shining on them, from their roots to their highest green tips, and this would keep them fresh.—Harper's Young People.

Examine Your Lard Pails.

A well known Boston grocer called the attention of the New England Grocer a short time ago, to a matter that we have never before seen discused in print, in fact we never heard of such a thing. He sold his customer a pail of lard of a well known brand, and the customer, being of an inquisitive turn of mind, ascertained the pail had two bottoms, and the space between the bottoms was filled with sand. This grocer proposes to investigate further and see if it is only a chance occurrence or a common thing. If the latter, he proposes to call names, and we don't blame him. He estimates that by this arrangement the manufacturers could save two cents per pail, a little thing in itself, but amounting to a good deal in the aggregate of millions of pails packed. Grocers examine your lard pails and tell us what you find—one or two bottoms.—Exchange.

For the Patriot.

Another Trip,—No. 3.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

"Yes," said the conductor, in answer to my question, "Graham has the finest hotel in southwestern Virginia;" and as there was but one train per day each way through the valley, and the next up train did not leave until 9.30 the next morning, I took the 'bus for the hotel.

I had previously made arrangements with "Buck," a native West Virginian, to meet me at a small station on the road, back a few miles. He had travelled 110 miles to keep the engagement, about one-third of the distance being by stage over the roughest, muddiest road conceivable.

Two miles an hour is not very fast time to make, but that was about all the stage was able to accomplish, and it was within three minutes of train time when he arrived at the station. I was delighted to see him, for I had been told at Radford that it was a "mighty rough crowd I would find over in yon valley," and as I knew but one soul in the whole section, I was very glad to meet a friendly guide. Before this we had spent many days together in the mountains on horse or mule back, as the case might be, or bunking together in log cabins.

At 8.30 o'clock, April 14, we took the morning train for a small station something over fifty miles up the valley. At the hotel where we were to stay for several days we found a genial welcome and plenty of food. In fact, there will always be plenty to eat in this country as long as corn can be bought and hogs raised. The variation in this bill of fare consists in the last remains of some ancient "chicken," biscuit about half an inch in thickness, and coffee made from uncertainty itself, and badly burned at that.

The same afternoon of our arrival I sent "Buck" to pay a visit to "House and Barn Mountain Jim" Ball, called by this long name to distinguish him from "One-armed Jim." From a distance one imagines he sees on the summit of this mountain an immense house and barn not far apart; hence its name. Mr. B.'s log cabin residenee is nearly at the top of the mountain, and although the weather was mild, "Buck" said the climb it up thar was most severe.

Mr. B. is not college bred; in fact can neither read or write, but in that respect is as well off as many of his neighbors. In religion he is a Baptist, "hard-shell," "iron clad," "anti,"—the last appellation meaning that he is opposed to "foreign missions, and "Buck" said he didn't wonder at it. Although Mr. B. cannot read, when night comes he draws his chair close to the chimney corner and tipping back sings some familiar verses and reverently kneeling prays to the 'Father of Mercies' for His blessing upon friend and foe, and the house so plain, so unpretentious, is become the watch tower of the 'guardian angel,' and all is peace. Close by lives a Baptist preacher, a disciple of the same faith and a graduate of the same school of learning. Surely some men must be "called" to preach. While "Buck" was enjoying the homely comforts of the Ball mansion the writer with a guide whom every one knew as "Pat," constable, and, like Zaccheus of old, tax collector, had secured two of the best saddle horses to be found, "Bismark" and "Gold Dust," and after being photographed, started for a two days' trip in the direction of Kentucky. "Pat" was dressed in his regimentals, high top boots and all, and carried his well-filled saddle bags, as was his usual custom when touring. "Pat" said I looked like a "native," and I believed him, for with my boots covered with mud, leather leggins, and slouch hat upon my head, I might have been "a joy forever," but certainly I was not "a thing of beauty." For the time being I was to be an "engineer," taking "elevations" and making "observations," my Kodak being the instrument. During the ride many an elevation I took, and many an observation did the camera make.

Frankly, I acknowledge it hard for a New Englander to believe some of the stories I have heretofore been obliged to tell in relation to the life and manner of living of some—yes, many, very many of these people, but I made up my mind to never again suspicion my reputation for truth and veracity, and so took the Kodak along with we for proof positive. We mounted horses on one of the handsomest of handsome April days. "Bismark" and "Gold Dust" took a running walk up over the tunnel, then down the creek, over rough roads, fording streams, in the bed of the river; anywhere a wagon can run or a horse get a foothold, there is the highway. On we go, passing log houses, log barns, log churches, log schoolhouses and log stores; not close together, or delightfully situated but "planted" wherever a partially level spot of ground is found big enough to hold the structure.

The "rising" generation here is very numerous, but the house of one or two rooms is kitchen, dining-room, sitting-room, parlor and bed-room, and no matter what the sex or size of the family is, there is always room for one more if he happens along at nightfall and desires a night's lodging; it is genuine hospitality, not of a high order but freely bestowed. "Pat" and I had been jogging our horses along at quite a lively pace, without a thought of danger, when all at once he drew rein and stopping suddenly exclaimed: "See that "blind tiger?"

Before You Clean House.

Long before the calendar says it is time to begin house cleaning, says the Ladies' Home Journal, you should look over the magazines, papers, disabled furniture, discarded garments, and household ornaments which even twelve months accumulate so wonderfully. Be brave, and do not save an indiscriminate mass of articles against the possible needs of the seventh year of which we hear so much. Give away the best of the old garments and sell the remainder to the junk man. The magazines and papers which you do not intend to have bound or to utilize in your scrap-book, will be eagerly read in some hospital or other institution. Even the furniture and ornaments will greatly brighten the dreary surroundings of some poor family. Have the courage of your convictions in dealing with the contents of trunks and boxes. Dispense with non-essentials and systematize the remainder, and your reward will be a delightful sense of space and a feeling of almost physical relief.

If you advertise at all, do it well. People enjoy reading advertisements containing good business sense.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Foreman Welch on Trial.

The trial of Joseph F. Welch, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Mary E. Fenley in the Old Colony disaster at Quincy last August, and also with criminal negligence, has occupied the attention of the Superior Court at Dedham all the week. At the outset on Monday, James E. Cotter, the counsel for the defendant, moved to have the indictment dismissed, giving several reasons. These, Judge Bishop overruled.

Monday afternoon the jury visited the scene of the disaster and on Tuesday morning the testimony begun.

The witnesses for the government were: General Manager Kendrick, John W. Pierson, a civil engineer; Emory H. Bryant, roadmaster; Patrick Murphy and Patrick Sullivan, of the gang; Michael Hartney, who handled the jack; Conductor Thomas, Engineer Baker and Foreman Baker, of the construction train; Conductor Steadman and Engineer Babcock of the wrecked train; Edward G. Parker, a clerk of the Old Colony; Judge Edwards, one of the injured; Francis H. Spear, constable of Quincy; Joseph W. Stancombe, and Dr. J. H. Gilbert, medical examiner.

Wednesday afternoon the government completed its testimony, and the defence called George N. Bryant, foreman of floating gang; Frank B. Shea, one of the gang; George P. Morey, Horace C. Briggs and Arthur M. Cram, old acquaintances of Welch; Henry S. Kolseth, an electrical engineer; Lucian H. McIntyre, a railroad man; George M. Nichols, a foreman on New York and New England; Engineer Babcock; Joseph F. Welch, the defendant; Mrs. Welch and Emory H. Bryant.

The closing arguments were made Thursday afternoon. Friday morning Judge Bishop charged the jury and when the PATRIOT went to press Friday evening, they had not reported.

The case has been reported very fully in the DAILY LEDGER this week, no less than ten columns being devoted to it. The verdict will probably be reported in the Saturday issue.

Did It Ever Occur to You?

That Quincy can celebrate its centennial but once?

That none of us will be around when Quincy is 200 years old?

That next year is therefore the opportunity for a grand local celebration?

That Braintree's 250th anniversary last year was a grand affair?

That Quincy should not be out done?

That now is the time to be making preparations?

That it may be feasible to celebrate in some other month than February?

That the event might cover two or three days?

That the school children should take a prominent part?

That the suggestions of the persons to whom the PATRIOT has written will be awaited with interest?

That Gloucester will also celebrate next year?

That it is proposed to raise $10,000 for the purpose, one half by the city and the remainder by subscription?

That Gloucester will be 250 years old?

That it became a city in 1873?

That its population is now 21,262?

That there is a proposition to locate and provide permanent tablets to mark places of historical interest?

That these will prove souvenirs to preserve the memory of the occasion?

That the Quincy souvenir spoon will be in demand next year?

That there should be other souvenirs?

That the LEDGER may get out a souvenir edition?

That Feb. 24, 1892, will fall on Wednesday?

Smashed Up.

Early Tuesday morning could be seen piled up on the sidewalk on Hancock street nearly front of the PATRIOT office, a badly smashed wagon, which the contents showed to belong to a junk dealer. The shafts were broken and the wheels sprung, etc.

P. F. Bowman, of East Braintree, was the owner and driver of the turnout. He was on his way to Boston with a load of junk. When opposite the residence of Col. Packard an electric car came along in the opposite direction. His horse was frightened but the motorman, it is claimed, did not heed this, but rushed by. Mr. Bowman was overturned and more or less injured, complaining of pains in the back, one leg and arm. The horse which was considerably injured, cleared himself.

Mr. Bowman was making his last trip with junk, having sold his horse Monday. He estimated his loss at $100.

Considerable over 200 names have been handed in. It is hoped that this number may be increased to at least 300 before July 1, by which time a permanent organization will probably be effected.

Another Order in Quincy.

John Adams Commandery of "The Continental Alliance" was instituted at Robertson hall, Wednesday evening. These officers were elected and installed:

Commander,—Edward B. Souther.
Vice Commander,—M. T. Sullivan.
Auditor,—Horace F. Spear.
Banker,—Arthur P. Wenthworth.
Recorder,—James Milne.
Trustee,—A. Milne, A. T. Mitten and George W. Clapp.

The new order starts with forty-five members.

THE HOSPITAL Aid Association is in an unfortunate dilemma. It has been decided to hold the annual fete on the Seventeenth of June in Merry Mount Park, and now the ladies find that under the deed by which the land was given the city for a park no admission can be charged. Because of the large advance sale of tickets, this was perhaps the largest source of revenue, hence the dilemma. There should be some way to get around this, not that we advocate disregarding the deed, but by selling tickets to a tent exhibition, or entertainment, or dinner, or something else. Another proposition is to sell a souvenir. Perhaps however a free admission might not after all be disadvantageous. Everybody will go, and they will spend money freely. Such gatherings are few and popular, and the cause is a worthy one.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE. We would call attention to the large sale of personal property at Hancock Hall, in this city, on Friday next. It is a mortgagee's sale of valuable property, and offers rare chance for bargains. Only a few of the articles are mentioned but a full description will be given later by bills.

The news Wednesday that a water bill had been reported in the House, was a joyful surprise, as the petitioners had not dared to build their air castles very high. A favorable report they argue is seldom reversed by the main bodies and their courage is many degrees higher than at any time in the past. The bill is just what the city desired in every particular and shows the masterly hand of Representatives Quincy and Burke and Mr. Pattee, the counsel. It is a conditional bill and if approved by Gov. Russell must be submitted to the voters, who must within three years accept it by a two-thirds vote upon ballot. The text of the bill appears in another column.

A bronze plinth and bronze statue are to rest on the granite cap.

Another large and costly piece that is being cut here is a shaft thirty feet high and seven feet in diameter. This shaft is in ten pieces all of which are polished and is to go to Cleveland, Ohio, where it will be placed on top of the soldiers' memorial building which is being erected there. The shaft is a massive one, the diameter at the top being but six inches smaller than at the bottom.

A Good Impression.

The Rev. J. H. Humphrey has made a good impression at the M. E. church. The services at this church last Sunday, both morning and evening, were of an unusual character, in that the largest and most appreciative audiences were assembled that has been seen for several years. The morning sermon was taken from the 14th and 15th verses of the 5th chapter of 2d Corinthians—"The constraining power of Love." The attention of the large audience being held throughout the service.

At the evening service the topic was the "Perfect Man." The theme being selected from the 1st Psalm. The discourse was an extemporaneous one; (a style of preaching much appreciated by the congregation) and which added to the masterly analysis of the subject, made the service an interesting and highly instructive one.

A Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Shirley, of West Quincy, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their married life Tuesday, in a very enjoyable and social manner. About fifty of their friends and neighbors assembled to congratulate the happy couple. Mr. Robert Findley entertained the company with a felicitous speech interspersed with Scotch humor. A poem by Will Carleton entitled "The old Front Gate" was finely rendered by Miss Emma Fuller. Rev. J. H. Humphrey made remarks appropriate to the occasion and closed the more formal part of the programme by invoking the divine blessing on the family, including the aged parents of Mr. Shirley, a remarkably well-preserved couple for their years. A bountiful supper was served and the company dispersed, leaving behind them many kind wishes and also more substantial tokens of their regard, among which may be mentioned a fine silver butter-dish, presented by the fellow-workmen of Mr. Shirley.

It would seem that the representative who caused the water bill to be recommitted Thursday, who by the way was one of the dissenters, had very small ground for such action. Perhaps, however, he wants to get on the popular side, and when the bill is reintroduced he will be recorded in its favor. Whether or not the clause is incorporated in Section 1, the city will have the rights. The clause is superfluous, for the rights are given by the act, and should the city purchase the present works in addition it would also acquire the company rights. The action is only an indication that every possible stumbling block will be thrown in the path of the bill.

Music hall, was scarcely large enough to hold the crowd of people who wished to attend the second annual entertainment and ball of the Atlantic Young Men's Catholic Lyceum Club, last week Friday. The people began to arrive at 7 o'clock and an hour later when the curtain was rung up for the first act of the drama, "Nevada, or the Lost Mine," not a seat was left.

THE GENERAL feeling among the business firms of the Centre, so far as we can ascertain, is against any arbitrary assessment by the city for street sprinkling. They believe it should be done by the city, but not to the extent of borrowing money for the purpose. Rather than create a debt they believe the custom of past years should be continued; that is voluntary subscription. Mr. Tisdale is willing to do the work as in past years. He says there is very little money in it, the item of water alone costing $500 last year, but he has the carts and horses and if the people wish will continue.

Down with the Front Fences.

Now down with the front fences! Why? Let us see. When the Pilgrims put up the first humble dwellings in Plymouth they surrounded them with stockades twelve feet high, to keep out Indians, bears, wolves, etc. When there was no more danger from these, they came down to four feet, to keep out hogs and domestic cattle. Now when there is no longer any danger from these animals, why keep up this remnant of life among the savages? Then down with the front fences (and they are fast going) and let us look in where you are doing your best, according to your means, to keep a velvet lawn with flower beds, shrubs, trees, rockeries, and every beautiful thing you can desire.—Caleb Bates in Old Colony Memorial.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. [PUBLIC STATUTES.]

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

NORFOLK, ss. PROBATE COURT.

TO GEORGE W. MORTON,

of Quincy, in the County and Commonwealth aforesaid.

Trusting in your care and fidelity, I, George White, Esquire, Judge of the Probate Court, in and for said County of Norfolk, by virtue of the power and authority vested in me, do hereby ordain, constitute and appoint you to be Administrator of the estate of Lydia L. Averill, late of Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, deceased, intestate:

And you are ordered to make and return to said Probate Court, within three months after the date hereof, a true inventory of all the real and personal estate of said deceased, which, at the time of the making of such inventory, shall have come to your possession or knowledge.

To administer, according to law, all the personal estate of said deceased which may come to your possession, or that of any person for you, and also the proceeds of any of the real estate of said deceased that may be sold or mortgaged by you;

To render upon oath a true account of your administration at least once a year, until your trust is fulfilled, unless excused therefrom in any year by said Court, and also to render such account at such other times as said Court may order;

To pay to such persons as said Court may direct, any balance remaining in your hands upon the settlement of your accounts;

To deliver these letters of administration into said Court, in case ny will of said deceased is hereafter duly proved and allowed;

And also, within three months, to cause notice of your appointment to be posted in two or more public places in the city or town in which said deceased last dwelt, or cause the same to be published once a week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy PATRIOT, a newspaper published at Quincy, and within one year return your affidavit of having given such notice, with a copy thereof, to the Probate Office.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of said Court to be affixed, at Hyde Park, this twenty-second day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

GEORGE WHITE,
Judge of Probate Court.

Quincy Public Water Supply.

The petition of the Mayor of Quincy for authority to establish and maintain a public water supply, has secured a favorable report from the Legislative Committee. The bill is exactly what the city asked for, and was reported at the session of the House Wednesday afternoon, by Representative Burke of this city, who is a member of the committee.

There were four dissenters to the report, viz: Senator Wyer of Middlesex, Representatives Johnson of Haverhill, McFethries of Springfield, and Nutting of Northampton. The committee is composed of eleven members, and two out of three senators and five out of eight representatives favored the bill.

The important sections of the act are given in full below and the others in substance:

AN ACT TO AUTHORIZE THE CITY OF QUINCY TO INTRODUCE A PUBLIC WATER SUPPLY.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:—

SECTION 1. The city of Quincy, for the purpose of supplying the said city and the inhabitants thereof with pure water for the extinguishment of fires and for domestic and other purposes, either independently of the works of the Quincy Water Company or after the purchase of the franchise, corporate property, rights and privileges of said corporation, may take, hold and convey into and through said city, the waters of Blue Hill river and of the tributaries thereof, excepting Braintree Great pond and Houghton's pond in the town of Milton, at any point or points in said city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Milton, with any water rights connected therewith, and may also take and hold by purchase or otherwise any land, rights of way, easements and real estate necessary for laying, constructing and maintaining pipes, aqueducts, water courses, reservoirs, storage basins, dams, filter galleries, and such other works as may be deemed necessary for collecting, purifying, storing, retaining, discharging, conducting and distributing said waters.

SECT. 2. Said city shall, within sixty days after taking any lands, rights of way, water rights, water sources or easements aforesaid, otherwise than by purchase, for the purpose of this act, file and cause to be recorded in the registry of deeds for the county of Norfolk a description thereof, sufficiently accurate for identification, with a statement of the purpose for which the same was taken, which statement shall be signed by the Mayor.

SECT. 3. Said city, for the purpose aforesaid, may construct aqueducts and maintain the same; may construct and maintain dams, reservoirs, storage basins, filter galleries, and other proper works; may erect buildings and machinery; may make and establish such public fountains and hydrants as may from time to time be deemed proper, and may change or discontinue the same may regulate the use of water, and establish the rates to be paid therefor, and collect the same by process of law. Said city may also for the purposes aforesaid, carry any pipe, drain or aqueduct over or under any river, water course, street, railroad, public way, highway or other way, in such manner as not unnecessarily to obstruct the same, and may enter upon and dig up such road, street or way for the purpose of laying down, maintaining or repairing any pipe, drain or aqueduct, and may do any other thing necessary and proper in executing the purposes of this act.

SECT. 4. If said city enters upon and digs up for the purposes aforesaid or by reason of anything authorized by this act injures any road, street or way which is outside the limits of said city, it shall be subject to such reasonable regulations as may be prescribed by the selectmen of the town in which such road, street or way is located, and shall restore the same to as good order and condition as it was in when such digging commenced, or before such injury occurred; and shall forever maintain all railings which may be necessary on account of any alteration required to be made in the grade of any portion of any street by reason of anything done under the authority of this act; and the work shall be done and all repairs be made in such manner and with such care as not to render any road, street or way in which such pipes are laid, unsafe or unnecessarily inconvenient to the public travel thereon. Said city shall at all times indemnify and save harmless any such town which is liable to keep in repair any road, street or way aforesaid against all damages and costs which may be recovered against it, and shall reimburse to it all expense which it shall reasonably incur in the defense of suits or otherwise by reason of any defect or want of repair in such road, street or way, caused by the placing, maintenance, repairing or replacing of said pipes, or by reason of any injury to persons or property, caused by any defect or want of repair in any such pipes; provided, that said city has notice of any claim or suit for such damage or injury, and an opportunity to assume the defence thereof.

Sections 5 and 6 hold the city liable to pay all damages sustained by any persons or corporations, by the taking of or injury of any of their land, water, water rights, rights of way, easements or property, and provide how the same may be recovered.

SECT. 7. No application shall be made to the court for the assessment of damages for the taking of any water rights, or for any injury thereto, until the water is actually withdrawn or diverted by said city under the authority of this act.

Section 8 provides that the city may make a tender in settlement of claims for damages.

SECT. 9. For the purpose of defraying the cost of such property, land, easements, water and water rights as may be purchased, taken or held for the purpose aforesaid, and of constructing the works authorized by this act, and paying all expenses incident thereto, the city of Quincy shall have the authority to issue notes, scrip or bonds, to be denominated on the face thereof Quincy Public Water Supply Loan, to an amount not exceeding four hundred thousand dollars, bearing interest not exceeding five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, the principal to be payable at periods of not more than thirty years from the issuing of such notes, scrip or bonds respectively. Said city may sell the same, or any part thereof, from time to time, or pledge the same for money borrowed for the above purposes; but the same shall not be sold or pledged for less than the par value thereof. Said city shall pay the interest as it accrues on said loan, and shall establish a sinking fund and shall contribute thereto annually a sum sufficient with its accumulations to pay the principal of said loan at maturity; and said sinking fund shall remain sacred and inviolate and pledged to the payment of said principal and shall be used for no other purpose. The provisions of Sections ten and eleven of chapter twenty-nine of the Public Statutes shall so far as applicable, apply to said sinking fund.

SECT. 10. The said city of Quincy instead of establishing a sinking fund may, at the time of authorizing said loan, provide for the payment thereof in such annual proportionate payments as will extinguish the same within the time prescribed in this act; and when such vote has been passed by the city council, and approved by the mayor of said city, the amount required thereby shall without further vote be assessed by the assessors of said city in each year thereafter, until the debt incurred by said loan shall be extinguished, in the same manner as other taxes are assessed under the provisions of Section thirty-four of chapter eleven of the Public Statutes.

SECT. 11. A board consisting of three Commissioners, who shall be citizens of said city, shall be appointed by the Mayor, as soon as practicable after this act shall have been accepted by the citizens of said city as hereinafter provided; they shall hold their offices respectively until the expiration of one, two and three years from the first Monday of February next preceding their appointment, and until their respective successors have been appointed and qualified, unless they shall sooner resign or be removed for cause as hereinafter provided, and thereafter in January in each succeeding municipal year one person shall be so appointed a member of said Board, who shall hold office for three years from the first Monday of February next ensuing and until his successor has been appointed and qualified, unless his duties are sooner terminated as hereinafter provided. Appointments to fill vacancies which may occur by death, resignation or otherwise, shall be made without delay by the Mayor, and he may remove any Water Commissioner from office for the causes and in the manner provided in Section 27 of Chapter 347, of the acts of the year 1888. Said Commissioners shall have such office room and clerical assistance, and shall receive such compensation as the City Council from time to time may determine.

SECT. 12. The said Commissioners shall superintend and direct the construction and performance of all the works, matters and things mentioned in the preceding sections; they shall be subject to such ordinances, rules and regulations in the execution of such duties, as the City Council may from time to time ordain and establish, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act and the laws of this Commonwealth, provided however that whenever a system of water works under the provisions of this act shall be substantially completed and put in successful operation, said Commissioners, upon written request of the Mayor, shall transfer the same to the Commissioner of Public Works of said City, and thereupon the powers of said Board of Water Commissioners shall cease, and all of its powers shall be vested in and all of its duties imposed upon said Commissioner of Public Works. Said Water Commissioners shall make all contracts for the above purposes in the name and behalf of the city, but no contract shall be made by them which involves the expenditure of money not already appropriated for the purpose by the City Council of said Quincy. A majority of said Commissioners shall be a quorum for the exercise of the powers and the performance of the duties of the commission.

SECT. 13. The occupant of any tenement shall be liable for the payment of the rates for the use of the water in such tenement, and the owner thereof shall also be liable, and all sums due for the use of water under this act shall constitute a lien upon the real estate using or being supplied with water to be collected in the same manner as taxes upon real estate, or in an action of contract in the name of the city of Quincy.

SECT. 14. Whoever wantonly or maliciously diverts the water, or any part thereof, taken or held by said city pursuant to the provisions of this act, or corrupts the same, or renders it impure, or destroys or injures any dam, aqueduct, pipe, conduit, hydrant, machinery or other works or property held, owned or used by said city under the authority and for the purposes of this act, shall forfeit and pay to said city three times the amount of the damages assessed therefor, to be recovered in an action of tort; and on conviction of either of the wanton or malicious acts aforesaid may also be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year in the house of correction in said county of Norfolk.

SECT. 15. So much of Chapter three hundred and forty-seven of the acts of the year 1888 and acts in amendment thereof as is inconsistent with the provisions of this act is hereby repealed.

SECT. 16. This act shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the city of Quincy for its acceptance and shall be void unless such voters, voting in their respective wards or precincts, at a legal meeting called by order of the City Council in the same manner as meetings for municipal elections are called, shall within three years from the passage of this act determine by ballot by a two-thirds vote of those present and voting to accept the same.

SECT. 17. So much of this act as authorizes the submission of the question of its acceptance to the legal voters of said city shall take effect upon its passage, but it shall not take further effect unless and until accepted, as hereinbefore provided, by the qualified voters of said city, and the number of meetings called for the purpose of its acceptance shall not exceed three in any one year.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Johnson of Haverhill, House chairman of the Water Supply Committee, rose to a question of privilege and said that the Quincy water bill which had been reported to the House was not the bill which the committee had agreed to report. He moved to recommit so that the committee might correct the error. Messrs. Finney of Plymouth and Burke of Quincy, of the Water Supply Committee, hoped that the bill would not be recommitted, but that the committee would correct the error without recommittal. The Speaker said that if the bill given to the clerk was different from that agreed upon by the committee, then the bill must be made to conform to the committee's judgment, otherwise any amount of surreptitious change could be made in any bill. The recommittal was ordered.

Mr. Johnson said afterwards that in the bill which the committee agreed to there was no such expression as is in the section, "either independently of the works of the Quincy Water Company or after the purchase of the franchise, corporate property, rights and privileges of said corporation," and he did not know but other insertions had been made.

The representative of the PATRIOT saw Lawyer Pattee Friday. He admitted that two changes, which he considered immaterial, were made in the bill which the committee voted to report. They were at the request and suggestion of Representative Quincy. Mr. Pattee was rather opposed to the changes, but not considering them material, offered no strenuous objection.

It was left with Representative Burke to see the members of the Water Supply Committee, and get their assent, and he is thought to have submitted them to at least a majority. A representative of Mr. Quincy's experience ought to know what was right and wrong.

One of the changes is that mentioned by Mr. Johnson above. Another was an addition to Section 13, which provides that all sums due for the use of water under this act shall constitute a lien upon the real estate using or being supplied with water to be collected in the same manner as taxes upon real estate, or in an action of contract in the name of the city of Quincy.

Several members of the Legislature are reported to have been approached by members of the Water Company, and doubtless every inch of the ground will be fought.

District Court, Quincy.

James Sullivan, for being a tramp at Quincy, was given one year at State farm at Bridgewater.

Thomas Burns, of Quincy, drunk, $9.

Walter Butler and John Kelly, both of whom claimed Milford as their residence, were fined $8 and $7 respectively for drunks.

Patrick J. Whalan of Randolph, drunk, $10, committed.

James McSweeney of Braintree for allowing his hens to trespass on the garden of Joseph Dyer, $12.

What a blessing it is to have the streets sprinkled? Mr. Tisdale has secured pledges from abutters to make a start, and the cart was on Friday for the first time. The dust of late has been very disagreeable.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, April 29, 1891.

By vote of 115 to 67 and 9 pairs, not the necessary two-thirds, the house has defeated the constitutional amendment to prevent a minority of the people of a town from petitioning the legislature for a division of the town. It was very warmly debated, but it was pretty clearly established that the whole move was inspired by the Beverly fight and was an effort of the old town to prevent division.

Reference to the next legislature has been reported on the petition for a general road commissioner of the State, and that report has been accepted without any opposition. This was the matter in which the bicycle people wanted the farmers to take such a sefish interest, so their lands would increase in value, and their roads be vastly improved.

The liquor fight still goes on over the repeal of the public bar law. No decisive action has been reached, however, and points of order are of more potency than arguments on the merits of the case, if it has any.

Thursday afternoon the house voted for the bill to put $250 extra into the pocket of every member. No opportunity for debate was given, and only twenty men stood up to ask for a roll call, when 30 are necessary. Mr. Bill of Paxton, though out of order, protested that the bill was iniquitous and an unjust outrage on the taxpayers, but he had no effect.

Gov. Russell received on Friday from Assistant Comptroller J. R. Garrison of the United States, an official statement that the share of Massachusetts of the direct tax which has been returned is $700,894.14, charged to the state on the books of the United States is an item of $4,786.26 for amount overdrawn by the state. The balance due, or $696,107.88, will be sent immediately to the state by the United States treasurer.

Mr. Curtis, of Marlboro, who is opposed to the salary bill, brought up the matter Friday morning and had it assigned to the first place in the calender for Friday, May 1. A great deal of work had been done for the bill on its first stage, and members who were opposed to it were persuaded not to join in a call for the yeas and nays, so the members could be put on record.

It promises to be a very expensive job to destroy the gypsy moth. Warned in time last year, the State Board of Agriculture moved promptly and the Legislature, with equal promptness and with trust in the discretion of the State Board, voted the $25,000 that was asked for. Later in the spring of 1890 it was found that $25,000 would not be enough and $25,000 more was asked for and appropriated. That was spent and the public is familiar with the difficulties in the special gypsy moth commission, its abolition by the Governor and his appointment of Secretary Sessions and Messrs. Shaber and Appleton of the State Board of Agriculture to carry on the work temporarily. On Tuesday a special meeting of the Board was held and they appointed the same three members as the permanent commission to destroy the gypsy moth. At the same time they voted to ask for an additional appropriation, or $100,000 in all, for the extermination of the moth. "Great oaks from little acorns grow." If that progressive Frenchman, twenty years ago, had only kept his specimen confined, instead of permitting it to escape, all this expense to the State and loss to the farmers would have been saved. Even at $100,000 there is no guarantee that the end has been reached. Future years may see that sum multiplied.

On Tuesday the senate reached the house bill to define the public bar law, for which Senator Donovan of Suffolk moved a bill as a substitute to repeal that law and to make other changes in the same line. Senator Champlin of Suffolk raised several points of order against the substitute, and the whole matter was put over to Friday in order to give President Sprague an opportunity to prepare a ruling.

Popular attention must be attracted to the endowment assessment orders by the remarkable facts contained in the figures just sent in to the House by Insurance Commissioner Merrill. More than this, I am given information additional to that in the report. For the so-called short term orders it will now cost the members $93 for every $100 they receive, exclusive of the expense of running the business, and exclusive of all that they have already paid in. This means that every $100 will cost them a good deal more than that which they must pay in cash out of their own pockets. It is also likely that assessments will come so fast in the next six or eight weeks that some people will be compelled to drop out. It is believed at the insurance office that for the short term orders the grand collapse will come in from two to four months, while the equally complete ruin of the long term orders—which ex-Gov. Robinson is defending—is only a matter of time.

Wednesday afternoon the House reached its debate on the bill relating to the assessment endowment orders and it was remarkable for the attacks which were made on the system as an utter fraud in its very principles, morally and mathematically impossible of success, and for the fact that not a solitary member was found to raise his voice in defence of the system. Ex-Gov. Robinson was criticised for his action as counsel for the Iron Hall, by admitting which into the State all this flood of other endowment orders has been possible. The system was attacked as one which permitted "a lot of tramps and vagabonds, without principle or capital to form a corporation to bleed the people of Massachusetts." The Fraternal Aid Society of Waltham and Order of the Golden Grail were especially mentioned as in a shakey condition and the collapse of the entire system before long was predicted. The committees' bill was given a large majority, though it permits present companies to go on as long as they are able.

The Senate on Wednesday took up the Cape Cod canal scheme and debated it for most of the afternoon. Finally they voted 25 to 11 for the bill to take away the charter of the old company (or to fail to renew it) and to give it to Quincy A. Shaw and his associates.

Theodore E. Davis, a Washington claim agent has put in a claim for two per cent. of the $700,000 direct tax refund from the United States as his commission on it. Gov. Russell objects to the payment.

Thompson Island.

The boys at the farm school on Thompson's island off Squantum were treated to a pleasing entertainment on Arbor day. There was a mock trial by students of the Boston Law school, and some charming reading.

Largest selection Silverware and Clocks for Wedding presents. Williams, West Quincy.

Electric Freight Railway.

The petitioners for the electric freight railway for Quincy were given a hearing before the Legislative Committee on Railroads at the State House, Boston, Monday. The hearing was a very quiet one, the only objection being raised by John Q. A. Field.

W. G. A. Pattee presented the plan of the new survey which was substantially from wharf at Quincy Point, via Wharf street, Washington, South, to head of Bent's creek, following the line of this to New road, thence across private land to Independence avenue, crossing under the tracks of the Old Colony, near the Pumping station, to Brook road, there a branch goes through Liberty to Pleasant, across Jackson and Quincy streets, to Quarry, across Common and Rogers street, crossing the Old Colony by overhead bridge, thence via Willard street to West Quincy depot. The other line will run from Brook road across private land to Willard to West Quincy depot.

There was some talk as to the location of the track on Washington street, as to whether or not they could use the rails of the Q. & B. S. R., and if it would not be better than to have two lines of tracks on the street. The general impression of the committee and the petitioners was that it could be done and was practicable.

The hearing was about to adjourn when Mr. Field arose and said he had only heard of the hearing by hearsay and had come in and found that the proposed route cut his land. He however would not oppose it if proper safeguards were used. It is dangerous to drive on some of our streets today on account of the electric cars, and with the heavy T rail he thought it would be dangerous. He had never seen the bill and did not know anything about it, neither do the citizens of Quincy.

He did not think there was any need of the road. It was not expensive keeping the streets of Quincy in repair, it was the system used. They cut off a man's head every year and it takes six months to break the new man in. It was the narrow tires that cut up the roads. The hearing then closed.

I. O. O. F.

Never were the headquarters of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F., as crowded as on Monday evening. Fully 300 Odd Fellows and their lady friends fully tested the seating and standing capacity.

Past Grand Frank W. Folsom was master of ceremonies and briefly introduced District Deputy Grand Master Richardson of Neponset. Odd Fellowship is held dear to his heart, and his remarks were interesting on the early origin of the order, the trials of the little band of five who instituted the first lodge of the order at Baltimore, and of the great progress since made. The independent Order of Odd Fellows is now first and foremost among secret and fraternal orders, and accomplishes more good. It has been faithful to its trust—to visit the sick, bury the dead and educate the orphan. It not only mitigates human suffering, but elevates mankind.

A very pleasing programme of a musical and literary nature followed, by local and out of town talent.

Most of the artists were heartily encored. Prof. Clare improves on each presentation of "The Black Art," and his exhibition was marvellous. Messrs. Morgan and Trauschke, of Lawrence, who appeared in several instrumental duetts, left a good impression in Quincy; the ocarina duet in particular was quite amusing. The City Mandolin, Guitar and Banjo Club is composed of Messrs. Charles White, Virgil Fuller, Chester Ford and Charles H. Penniman, and their selections were excellent.

Miss Litchfield captivated the audience with her readings, and Miss Reed's selections provoked much merriment. Mr. Miller's solo was much appreciated, while the duet of Misses Souther and Kittredge received the heartiest encore of the evening. A fine violin solo by Miss Souther closed this part of the entertainment.

By this time all were prepared to take the final degree which was worked in the banquet hall.

The Clan McGregor Society.

The Clan McGregor Literary Society met in Doble's hall last Saturday, Mr. Grassick presiding.

An able essay on "Water" was given by Dr. McLennan. As this subject is agitating our local magnates, Dr. McLennan deprecates being in any way involved in the excitement, and thus we cannot give our readers the best essay of the season.

It was intimated by the president that Mr. William Norrie, the efficient secretary, is about to leave Quincy for Alleghany, Pa. On Saturday Mr. Norrie was elected honorary member of the society. He takes with him the best wishes of his brother members who will miss his active assistance.

THE ASSESSORS of the City of Quincy hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said city, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open EVERY FRIDAY IN MAY from 8 A. M. to 12 M., and EVERY DAY IN JUNE TO THE FIFTEENTH, inclusive, from 8 A. M., to 12 M., and all persons liable to be taxed in said city are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls [males twenty years old and upward] and schedules and estimates of the real and personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes. The attention of women who wish to be assessed for a Poll Tax is called to the laws of 1889, section 1, chapter 196, in regard to assessment of women. Blanks for the same may be obtained at the Assessors' office.

Copartnerships

Having a place of business in Quincy, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. A firm is not taxable for the business income of its members, but each resident partner is liable for his proportion thereof and should include the same in his individual return.

Ships and Vessels.

Copartnerships are liable to taxation for the interest in ships or vessels of partners who reside without the Commonwealth; but not for the interest therein of resident partners, who should include the same in their own return. Owners and agents of ships and vessels engaged in the FOREIGN CARRYING TRADE are referred to sections 8 and 9 of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes, for the form of return required to obtain exemption from taxation upon the valuation of such property. Returns for such ships and vessels must be made not later than June 1.

Mortgage Real Estate.

All persons having an interest in mortgaged real estate who desire that it shall be assessed in accordance with the provisions of section 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes, are hereby notified to "bring in to the Assessors a statement under oath," according to the requirements of chapter 175 of the acts of the year 1882. Persons who made returns of such interests for the assessment of that year, are notified that no part of such estates will be assessed to mortgagees unless the statements above referred to are brought in for the current year.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates or estates of persons deceased have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change, stating the name, residence and amount paid to the several parties interested in the estate who are inhabitants of the Commonwealth; and in default of such notice, will be held to the penalties provided by law.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations

Are notified that they are required by chapter 217 of the acts of the year 1882, "to bring in to the Assessors true lists of all real and personal estates held by them," "together with statements of the amounts of all receipts and expenditures during the year next preceding" the first day of May; and if such lists are not brought in, the Assessors must assess the real and personal estate so held in the tax of the current year.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the Assessors with such list, within the time above specified, will be doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, City Hall, on or before the FIFTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OF INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS.—(Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.) When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent."—(Public Statutes, chapter 11, section 73.)

SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1891.

A Song of Spring.

(THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL).

Blow, softly blow, sweet springtime wind,
O'er budding lanes and fields of green—
(I must get Mike to fix that blind;
The back door needs a new wire screen).

Brown robins flutter from the hedge
Where nests are hidden—(Gracious me,
The boys have notched this railing's edge
Until it's really ruined—See?)

Swift lights and shadows on the hill,
Bring back dear visions, dear, in vain—
(We can't put up lace curtains till
We paint these window-frames again!)

Oh, fairest dream! Oh, softest charm!
If I could seize it—(Yes, I hear!
Tell Kate to make the suds quite warm,
And I'll be down directly, dear).

Adieu to toil, to sordid cares—
(The junk man, is it? Very well,
Just ask him if he'll step up stairs
And see these stoves I have to sell!)

Household Receipts.

SPONGE LILIES. Sponge lilies are something new. A plain sponge cake drop is made, somewhat larger than the ordinary drop, and while warm it is folded together in the shap of a calla lily and fastened with a toothpick. When ready to serve these shells are filled with whipped cream and the pick removed.

BREAD OMELET. Line a buttered scallop-dish with thin slices of cold lamb or veal. Soak one cup of soft bread-crumbs in one cup of hot milk. Add one tablespoon of butter, one teaspoon of chopped parsley, and one teaspoon of fine chopped onion, a little salt and pepper and two eggs well beaten. Pour this over the meat and bake about fifteen minutes or until brown. Serve at once in the dish in which it is baked.

Long bags, the full length of dress or cloak, with hanging loops at top, save from creasing as well as from dust and moths.

When making white cakes, use one half teaspoon more of cream of tartar than soda, as this extra quantity of cream of tartar makes the egg whites stiffer.

For nausea, lay a little pounded ice on the back of the neck.

Cold water may be drank freely in all fevers, except when the fever is connected with lung troubles, as in such a case it might chill the patient.

Anecdotes.

Young Wife—"Oh, John, the rats have eaten all my angel cake!"

Husband—"What! all of it?"

Young Wife—"Every piece. I feel like crying."

Husband—"Oh, pshaw! Dont cry over a few rats!"

Visitor—"Does your daughter play, Mr. Phirkin?"

Father—"Certainly she does, Mr. Younghead."

Visitor—"I am glad of it, I adore music myself. A piece well executed fairly carries me away."

Father—"Jennie, give us a selection on the piano."

Auntie—"Katie, you must not cut out those dolls on Sunday. Remember the fourth commandment. God made this beautiful world in six days and rested on the seventh."

Katie (after a little reflection)—"Did He make everything in six days?"

"Yes, my dear; everything."

"Well, I reckon He did rest 'cause He didn't have anything else to do."

Jones—"That's all nonsense about eating meat being injurious to health. My ancestors for hundreds of years ate meat."

Vegetarian—"Yes, and where are they now? Dead, ain't they?"

High-toned mistress (to untidy servant)—"Mary, don't you think you'd better lave your face in a little water?"

Mary (horrified)—"Lave me face in a little water? Divil a bit, Ma'am. I'd be drownthed if I did."

"I understand, Pat. that you have a big family dependent upon you?"

"Yis, sor, tin childers, siven pigs and the old 'oman."

Mrs. O'Flaherty—"Your sister has another child."

Mr. O'Flaherty—"Is it a boy or a girl?"

"A girl."

"Huroo! I'm an aunt at last."

MAP OF MASSACHUSETTS. Russell's new map of Massachusetts just issued is a very nice thing. It accuretely represents the Old Commonwealth, showing every city, town, bay, harbor, railroad, etc., and is illustrated by a fine picture of the new State House extension. On heavy paper mounted and varnished, 75 cents; between pasteboard covers, 40 cents. B. B. Russell, publisher, 57 Cornhill, Boston.

PAPER BOATS IN THE NAVY. The Navy Department is about to begin the experimental use of paper boats, and for this purpose a paper whale boat gig has been purchased, and will be put aboard the next vessel fitted out at the New York Navy Yard. This boat effects a saving in weight of about 50 per cent. over the ordinary wooden boat of the same pattern, and it is claimed to be equal to the heavier wooden boat in every respect. The cost is about the same. "Some experiments have already been made which show that the boat can be submerged for an indefinite length of time without the material becoming water soaked or otherwise deteriorating."

☞ An exchange says: "A conductor on the Old Colony road was the other day offered a $100 bill in payment for a $1 ride by a Boston bound passenger, who probably thought he would escape paying his fare by the trick. The conductor politely informed his customer that he could not change the bill, but would make it right when the train reached Boston. A telegram from the conductor preceded the arrival of the train and when the flush passenger accompanied the conductor to the ticket office he found ninety-nine silver dollars awaiting him. He loaded the coin on his person with an ill grace and disappeared from view as quickly as possible."

☞ A messenger-boy poked his head inside the door and looked about the room with some uncertainty. "Come in, Johnny," said the smart young man sitting at the desk near the door. "Proprietor will be in some time next week. If you don't see what you want, ask for it." "I was trying to find a—a gentleman," said Johnny, looking about the room again and backing out, "but I guess I won't wait." —Chicago Tribune.

Boston Amusements.

Globe Theatre.

Francis Wilson is to play a return engagement at the Globe Theatre beginning Monday evening, May 4th. "The Merry Monarch" will be presented, and it is said this is to be a farewell for two years. Admirers of Francis Wilson and his merry company are early at the box office and tickets are in great demand. How Boston is to get along for two seasons without Francis Wilson is a mystery, but it is evident from the advance sale of tickets, that he will have a rousing farewell.

Boston Museum.

Once again that melodramic success "Hands Across the Sea" is to be revived at the Museum, beginning on Monday next, May 4th. Those who have never seen this play, should make it a point to attend next week.

Boston Theatre.

The revival of "The Soudan" is meeting with its former success, full houses being the rule. The play is one that seems to improve with age growing stronger and more interesting every performance. It is acknowledged as one of the best emotional dramas ever put upon the stage. Take the children.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Following "Paul Jones" at the Hollis comes the inimitable Irish comedians Barry and Fay. The engagement is for one week only and "McKenna's Flirtation" a lively comedy is announced as the attraction.

Tremont.

The eminent English actor, Mr. E. S. Willard, will begin a brief engagement at the Tremont Theatre, next week, May 4th. The managers take great pleasure in introducing Mr. Willard to the public, being confident that his rare good qualities and his impressive methods will be especially suited to Boston tastes.

He will be seen Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in his marvellous dual role in Joseph Hatton's new drama, "John Needham's Double," pronounced a superb piece of realistic acting. The latter half the week Mr. Willard will appear in his grand and affecting assumption in "The Middleman." For his second week the same strong play, "The Middleman," is underlined.

The Lovell Diamond Safety Bicycle.

This machine was placed on the market the first of last season. The manufacturers thinking that a Safety bicycle, first-class in every respect, made on the most improved lines and under the latest patents, at a reasonable price, would meet with the general approval and receive the support and encouragement of the riding public, and believing that such a machine could be made and sold for a moderate price, they having had fifteen years' experience in the manufacturing business, set themselves to work, and, as a result of their labor, submitted to the public their Lovell Diamond Safety at $85.00. The machine leaped at once into public favor; the success which it met with being even beyond their most sanguine expectations. The demand for the machine was so great that they were unable to supply even half of what was wanted.

This year, in addition to their regular Diamond Safety, they have placed on the market a ladies' Safety, with all the latest improvements, which sells at the popular price of $85.00. In the construction of their wheels only highest grade material is used.

The success of this bicycle last year has led the manufacturers to make additional improvements. The weight of this Safety cycle completed is forty-seven pounds. The manufacturers are the John P. Lovell Arms Company, 147 Washington street, Boston, Mass., and J. H. Jean of Quincy Point, is sole agent for Quincy.

☞ Enoch Robinson, of Raynham, worked on the first railroad ever built in America, the road from Quincy granite quarries to Neponset river, which was begun in 1826 and finished the next year. The stone were drawn on the road from the quarry by oxen. Mr. Robinson, at the time, was master workman for Lazell, Perkins, & Co., of Bridgewater, and forged the axles for the stone cars, which were bent in order to let the car bodies hang low so that the stone could be easily loaded. No locomotive was used, although George Stephenson had shown what could be done with one in England. A few years later Mr. Robinson built an overhead railroad in an iron shop at East Taunton for use in handling heavy articles.—Old Colony Memorial.

☞ Andrew Walker, of Kennebunk, now eighty-two years old, thinks he may be the last person living who has talked with a man who took an active part in the famous Boston tea pary of 1773. This man's name was Jonathan Mitchell, and at the time of the revolution he was employed on a vessel between Kennebunk and Boston, and happened to be in Boston on the evening of Dec. 16, 1773. The old man evidently was not an American patriot for he said: "It was too bad to see so much good tea thrown overboard, so I thought I would save a little. Taking a boat, I went to the side of one of the ships where men were throwing the tea into the water, and endeavored to put some in the boat; but the scoundrels saw me, and tried to drown me, and I was glad to get back to the coaster again alive. Mitchell died in 1841, aged ninety-five."—Lewiston, (Me). Journal.

It is a mistake to suppose the weather is colder the farther north one goes. The northern pole of greatest cold is only about 300 miles northeast of Yakutsk, Siberia, where the mean annual temperature is a little lower than in the highest latitudes reached by Nares and Greely, 1000 miles farther north.

Teachings of Science.

But in studying the effect of alcohol on the brain and nervous system we must go beyond the speedy action of a single or a few doses and consider the more important, because the more permanent effects of its continued use. These effects are varied by the quantity used, the length of time it is continued and by the temperament and power of endurance of the drinker. In its habitual use four stages of alcoholic change are recognized, corresponding in many respects with the four acute stages that have been described. There is a mild first stage where only small quantities are used, as where an occasional glass of light wine or beer is taken with the meals, and where such limits are not exceeded. In this the condition of the brain and nerves is but little changed from the physiological or natural state. There is a second stage where a change from the normal state is more perceptible—where the force and regularity of brain and nerve action is impaired, but not in an extreme degree; but where the tone of the intellectual and particularly of the moral character is lowered, but yet where the subject of it is not regarded as a drunkard.

There is a third stage where there is unquestionable intemperance or inebriety—where the subject is called a "hard drinker" or "drunkard," according to the degree of indulgence; and there is still a more advanced or fourth stage where the victim is a complete sot, given up to continued and extreme indulgence whenever the means are within his reach, where there is the greatest debasement, physical, mental, moral, where there is advanced alcoholism or alcoholic disease, where the wretched victim is tottering on the verge of destruction, unfit for any useful occupation or respectable association, a disgrace to himself and friends and a nuisance to all about him. These stages shade off into each other with no abrupt line of demarkation, but are different degrees of the one general process of abnormal change.

The first two milder stages will require more discussion, as respecting them there are the chief differences of opinion, but this discussion will not be entered upon until a fuller account has been given of the more advanced stages.

All are ready to admit the very great, the almost inexpressible evils to the brain and nerves of individuals, to the happiness of families, to the interests of communities and the country of the third and fourth stages of habitual alcoholic indulgence. The changes of the brain usually discoverable in its structure, but which more certainly exists in its functions, in its actions and tendencies, are most profound, and are all in the direction of physical, mental and moral degradation.

To be continued.

Boston Paralytic and Nervine Institute.

There is no more important a subject or one that should be more generally considered than diseases pertaining to the nervous system. Hundreds of men and women whose lives have been burdensome through long sufferings, are today in the full enjoyment of health, and live to add their testimony to the thorough efficiency of the treatment. The mode of treating diseases at this Institute is that of transferring medicinal properties into the nerve centres by electrical forces, as discovered by Dr. Rhodes in 1865, and in successful operation at this Institute up to the present time. This method of treatment is similar to that of Dr. Koch's for consumption, excepting that one is by hypodermic injection, while the other is by electrical forces. It is claimed that over ninety per cent. of all cases of paralysis, brain or nervous diseases are and can be cured at this Institute.

☞ In the Woman's Christian Temperance Union there are 200,000 members. In the King's Daughters there are 135,000. In the Woman's Relief Corps there are 100,000. In the "Eastern Star" there are 35,000 members. These constitute an army of nearly 500,000 women. Says the Woman's Journal; "They are all enlisted with a generous spirit for the public good. If they had votes, what a power they would be on the side of the best things in the government!"

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Poetry.

Judge Not in Haste.

Ne'er be hasty in your judgment,
Never foremost to extend
Evil mention of a neighbor,
Or of one you've called a friend.
Of two reasons for an action
Choose the better, not the worst;
Oft, with some, the meaner motive
Ever strikes the fancy first.
Then be gentle with misfortune;
Never foremost to extend
Evil mention of a neighbor,
Or of one you've called a friend.

Judge not with detracting spirit;
Speak not with disdainful tongue;
Nor with hard and hasty feeling
Do one human creature wrong.
Words there are that, sharp as winter,
Strip the little left to cheer;
Oh, be yours the kinder mission,
Prone to soothe, not cause a tear.
Then be gentle with misfortune,
Never foremost to extend
Evil mention of a neighbor,
Or of one you've called a friend.

Miscellany.

Carrying off the Prize.

"Nobody goes to church on Easter Sunday without an entirely new suit in the very latest fashion!" said Mrs. De Novelles.

"Certainly not!" said Alicia, her eldest daughter. "Mrs. Pelham has written to Paris for a new bonnet, to my certain knowledge."

"And of course," added Emily, the young scion of the house of De Novelles, "as you are spending the winter with us, Madeline, you will be expected not to disgrace us."

Madeline Moray looked from one to the other of the speakers with a troubled expression of countenance.

"But Aunt De Novelles," said she, "mamma writes me that our old Cousin Zephaniah and his wife have come from Maine, very poor, and that we must economize as much as possible in order to keep them off the town. They are very old, and they need a great many little luxuries, and—"

Mrs. De Novelle's face darkened visibly.

"Madeline," said she, "will you never forget that you belong to a farmer's family down east? Your Cousin Zephaniah are nothing to me. Of course, while you are my guest, I shall expect you to dress as becomes your station as my niece."

Madeline knitted her pretty brows in sore perplexity after Aunt De Novelles had rustled out, leaving a stronger odor of pachouli behind her. She had admired the devotion of her aunt and the girls in attending the church services so regularly during Lent; she, too, had sat in the dim, religious light of the perfumed church, trying to recall her wandering thoughts to the words which she uttered, and had come to the conclusion that she was not half so good as her Aunt, and Emily, and Alicia. And now, Aunt De Novelles felt no charity for poor old Cousin Zephaniah, and wanted her to spend all her little money for dress and fashion to make an outside show.

She had a fifty dollar bill yet left of the small store which they had scraped together at home when they sent her to spend a winter in Boston with Aunt De Novelles, and she took it from her purse and smoothed it out upon her desk. Fifty dollars! she had hoped to save it all for Cousin Zephaniah.

Her pretty shot silk, with the damasse front, was very fresh and pretty still—she had only worn it some half dozen time—and her neat little split straw hat would look very nice, if she bought new ribbon for it and rearranged the flowers. At least that was the mental conclusion at which she had arrived, when Mrs. De Novelles issued her commands, binding as an imperial ukase, that a new Easter suit was among the necessities.

Madeline knew very well that she was pretty. She never looked into the glass without perceiving the difference between her fresh, apple blossom of a face, and the enameled and rouged complexions of her city cousins. She knew that her long hair was like burnished coins of gold, her long lashed eyes like stars; and she would have liked a new Easter suit as well as any one—and the bonnets in Madame Printemp's window looked infinitely beautiful in her eyes, with their French roses and perfectly similated violets; but there was the old man and his enfeebled wife to remember—the ancient relics of a bygone generation who had outlived the sympathy of almost all the world.

"No," said Madeline to herself, "I must not spend this money, Easter suit or no Easter suit."

So she sat herself down in the rainy March afternoon to rip up the shot silk dress and alter it so that even Alicia and Emily should not know it for the same.

But with all her skill in amateur dressmaking the folds would not hang stylishly, the old creases would obtrude themselves on the eye, and the costume proclaimed in its every glisten and puff "Made over, made over, made over!"

Emily De Novelles shook her head.

"Madeline," said she, "it's of no use. You never can wear that dress. And your hat, too. A plain split straw, without so much as a French flower."

Madeline burst into tears.

"Very well, Emily," she said. "Then I will remain at home. You need not fear that I will disgrace the congregation of St. Etheldreada on Easter Sunday."

And this pledge evidently relieved the mind of Miss De Novelles.

"For," as she afterward told her sister Alicia, "these half civilized country girls are capable of anything.

And the two elegant sisters did not take the trouble, when Captain Brabazan dropped in to five o'clock tea, to send up word to Madeline that there was company in the parlor.

"I suppose she don't care to see me!" the captain thought, with a sinking heart, when at last he went away, after having lingered as long as politeness would admit.

"I suppose he never asked for me!" Madeline said to herself, as, from her window, she saw his retreating figure saunter slowly down the street. "Well, it matters less than ever now about the Easter suit. Nobody will know whether I have one or not."

But when Easter eve came, and Madeline was crying softly in her own room to think of the radiant spring sunset that was flooding all the world at home, the colored waiter came grinning up to the door.

"Please, Miss Maddy," he said, "hyars a basket o'laylocks. Real springy smellin', I do declare! Wid de Cappen's card—Cappen Brabazan, miss!"

Madeline uttered an exclamation of delight.

Oh, the lovely, purple things! Clusters of lilac fragrance! Delicious reminders of springtime at home. Oh, how kind it was of Captain Brabazan to remember that she was a country girl, exiled here among brick walls!

Madame Cressond's young women sat up till twelve o'clock that night to finish the three elegant costumes which Mrs. De Novelles and her daughters had ordered.

The three bonnets did not come home until Sunday morning.

But Madeline watched them sail forth to church, to the glitter of golden sunbeans and the clanging of melodious bells, like three fashion plates.

And then she put on her plain little "made over dress," and, taking a fresh cluster of lilacs from the vase of water, pinned it across the split straw hat.

"There!" she thought, as she tied the strings under her chin, "no Paris exotic ever looked half so sweet as that? And I am sure that heaven will incline its ear no less favorably to my prayers than if I went to St. Etheldreada's in Worth's newest design."

And she crept to the little church in the adjoining street, which had long gone out of fashion, and where the spectacled old clergyman practiced all the austerities of the early fathers, through dire necessity.

She sat there listening to the anthems and thinking of the dear ones at home, and wondering if Cousin Zephaniah and his poor old purblind wife would ever know that she (little Madeline Moray) had cast her mite to relieve their sore necessities, and recalling vaguely the poor widow whose offering had once been so precious in the Holiest of eyes. Hers was not much now, but she had also given it from a free and willing heart.

As she moved quietly and with reverent, downcast eyes out of the church, some one stepped to her side.

"You have dropped something, Miss Moray," said Captain Brabazan.

And he held up the cluster of lilacs, drooping now, and a little faded.

She put her hand up to her bonnet, with a scarlet blush.

"Your lilacs, Captain Brabazan!" she said.

His face brightened.

"I am proud that you deemed them worthy of wearing," said he. "Your cousin told me that you were such an anchorite that you did not care for flowers or books or society—that you were not even going to church on Easter day."

"I?" cried Madeline. "Oh, Captain Brabazan, I like all three? I cried over your flowers when they came last night. They seemed to me like dear friends from home. And I wore them in my bonnet because—because I could not afford artificial blossoms. There! now you know just how poor I am!"

And she laughed even while the roseate tinge suffused her cheek.

"I do not know whether you are poor or not," said he; "but I do know that I think you are the nearest to perfection of any girl whom I ever saw!"

"May I tell you all about it?" she asked hurridly; "for I do not want you to think me avaricious or semi-barbarian, as my cousins sometimes pronounce me. And then you shall tell me whether you think I am right or wrong."

They walked slowly home from church in the soft, bland sunlight of that Easter day, and when they reached the brown stone mansion on Silverstone street, Captain Brabazan went in and formally asked Mrs. De Novelles permission to address her niece with a view to marriage.

That was Madeline Moray's Easter gift. A man's true and loyal heart—that dawn of a great happiness over a life which up to this hour, had been chill and solitary.

There was no denying that Mrs. De Novelles was much disappointed. Emily and Alicia had been in society three seasons now without having received any eligible offer; and it did seem strange that this pale, quiet little girl from the backwoods, as Mrs. De Novelles contemptuously expressed it, should have carried off such a glittering prize as Captain Brabazan—for it never occurred to them that Madeline's sweet unselfishness and quiet self-denial could possibly have anything to do with the matter.

And as long as old Cousin Zephaniah and his wife lived, Captain Brabazan made them an annual allowance, which was ample for their simple wants.

Chinese Version of an Old Story.

A certain man was condemned to the thief's collar, whereupon some of his relatives seeing him, asked him how he had brought such a punishment upon himself. He replied:

"As I was going along the road I chanced to see on the ground a little bit of rope. Thinking it might perhaps prove useful, I picked it up and proceed on my way. Such is the origin of my present trouble."

"But," replied his relatives, "we cannot believe that the theft of a piece of rope would bring you to this misery."

Said the thief:

"It is true that there was something at the end of the rope."

They inquired what it was.

"Only," answered he, "two little draught oxen."—Siao Li Siao.

An Attractive Place.

These beautiful spring days one cannot pass an afternoon more pleasantly than by taking a trip to North Easton, and visit the extensive conservatories owned by Hon. F. L. Ames. In these green houses fifteen in number, is the finest collection of orchids in the world, so says the Whitman Times. The display includes nearly every species of orchid known. Mr. Ames has been years in making his collection. One species of the Hyeanum, has a rare green flower, and one might be a lifetime among flowers and never see its equal for delicate beauty and coloring. The conservatories, by the kindness of Mr. Ames, are always open to the public.

Foreign Letter.

We copy the following interesting letter written by a gentleman of Braintree about his travels in Europe, from the BRAINTREE OBSERVER.

TROMSO, NORWAY, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The Lofoden islands, which we passed before reaching Tromso, lie between 68 and 69 degrees of latitude, and form a chain of mountain peaks many of which rise abruptly from the sea, and are divided by narrow sounds through which the tide runs with considerable force. These mountains are for the most part covered with a kind of green moss, and some are nothing but barren rocks without the least sign of vegetation. About these islands there are numerous excellent fishing banks, which during the three fishing months are resorted to by more than 25,000 fishermen. Nearly 6000 fishing boats flock to the three principal fishing banks within a mile of the islands. The shoals of cod are so thick that hand line fishers with artificial minnow and sinker, hook them as fast as the lines are lowered. The annual catch is over 20 million about these islands. Some are caught in nets, some with baited hooks and some caught with hooks, without bait, by jerking the line and hooking the fish. On the whole coast of Norway, about 50 millions are taken annually. Many of the fish are carefully cleaned, and hung in pairs, tied by the tails upon long poles, in parallel lines to dry, and great quantities are sold fresh to smacksmen who salt them. The heads were formerly thrown away, but now they are dried, pulverized and converted into manure.

The winter fishing is done from the middle of January to the middle of April. Along these rugged mountainous coasts, wherever a bay or tiny fjord, cuts in, or a valley between the mountains gives opportunity there, one will find a cluster of fishermen's huts.

We have now reached Tromso, a town of about 6,000 inhabitants, situated in 69 deg. 38 min. latitude, upon an island of the same name. It is apparently a busy, thrifty town—and through enterprise and successful fisheries has risen to a very prominent position. Its exports are dried fish, herrings, train oil and furs. It has considerable trade not only with Germany, but with France and Russia. The French carry away cargoes of salted cod-roe, which is used as bait in the sardine fishery. The town is built mostly of wood, and stands upon a beautiful slope, near the summit of which there are a number of pretty villas, while beyond and around on every side, are mountains which are perpetually capped with snow. As we looked out of our cabin window we saw two open boats, one of which was laden with four or five horses, and some boys, it was being pulled across the sound by three men, pulling two oars each in the other boat. The horses were being sent across to accommodate passengers on steamer who intended to visit the Lapps. The Laplanders encampment is about four miles inland from Tromso, on the opposite shore across the sound, and when the steamers arrive with tourists, every preparation is made for reception of visitors.

We went ashore in row boats and some of the passengers walked, some went in carriages, others went horseback, through a valley between the mountains to the encampment. There we found a small colony of Lapps, consisting of five families, men, women and children, who occupy three miserable huts; they belong to Northern Sweden, but migrate to this coast for the summer months. Their huts are formed of stone, turf, etc., with a door upon the side and a hole at the top for the exit of smoke. The most interesting sight was the reindeer, which were gathered together in a large yard. There were more than a hundred huddled together driven in by the dogs from the mountains. These Lapps were a filthy, dirty set of people, who apparently never wash or change their garments. They were clothed for the most part with the skin of the reindeer, and wore shoes made of the same. All of them were eager to sell little articles made of reindeer horn, such as knives, spoons, etc., to get a little money. The Lapps, as a rule are short of stature, and not more than four to five feet high and the women are a trifle shorter; all are thin and spare in body, and wear no linen or stockings. Bow-legs are common among them. They are said to sleep all winter, and part of the summer in their daily dress. In winter they get into a skin with the hair inwards. Not only one entire family, but sometimes two or three families occupy one small hut—hence, there is no room for proper washing, and they are dirty with the smoke, soot, and filth of their surroundings. Their clothes are worn to rags, and infested with vermin, to which they are as indifferent as to dirt. The Lapps may be said to live upon the reindeer solely and almost entirely; their skins make clothes, the flesh and milk their food and drink. From their horns they make their spoons and other utensils, from the skin of the head, they make their shoes, from the sinews they make thread, and from the horns and hoofs, tools and glue. The reindeer is therefore to the Laplander invaluable, as the source of his wealth and his subsistence. The reindeer finds its own food and support, and the lazy Lapp, the child of nature, lives upon the reindeer.

In spite however of the Lapps' wretched huts, their primitive clothing, their dirty faces and filthy condition, their ignorance of art, science, or culture, they will rank above many races, in the treatment of women. They as a race, leave women to their household work and maternal duties; the men doing the heavy work, and women the lighter. The work of lassoing and driving the reindeer from the mountains to the camp is done by the men with the aid of dogs. And there is nothing which indicates the inferiority of women. When milk is wanted, the lasso is thrown from 30 to 50 feet, and shooting over the horns of many, it loops unerringly upon the horns of the deer which is wanted, then after a struggle between the two, the Lapp conquers, and when near, grasps the horns of the deer. The quantity of milk obtained is small, not much over a gill from each, and they are milked only twice a week. The deer attain their growth when from four to five years of age, and after that time their horns do not change much in size or form, and they seldom live to be over fourteen or sixteen years old.

Just before leaving the encampment, the deer were given their liberty and they scampered off into the mountains in a hurry, as though glad to get up the steep hillsides and far away.

We now returned to the steamer Capella. She was taking in coal preparatory to another start. Another large English steamer, the Chimborazo, which is on an excursion to the North Cape, has just arrived in por with about 100 passengers. There is also another steamer from Germany with a large party on board returning from the North Cape—now in port. Three steamers with their passengers in this small port at the same time, makes a lively time for these Norwegians. They crowd the wharves and keep the boatmen very busy, while the tradesmen rejoice in the opportunity to increase their sales and profits.

Although this town is situated at such a high degree of latitude, yet the winters are not very severe. Last winter they had but three feet of snow, and it was not at any time extremely cold. The sound which is here 500 feet wide, does not freeze over during the winter. One reason for this, is because the current is so strong through the sound; another, on account of the effect of the Gulf stream, which is said to sweep the entire coast of Norway. It is rather surprising to learn that there is no more trouble in winters with ice-bound harbors, when we know that upon the main land there are ice fields which cover an area of 500 square miles, and that in whatever direction one looks, mountains can be seen thousands of feet high, which are covered with perpetual snow.

SOMA.

Wanting and Getting.

It has been said that the reason so few people get what they want in this world is that they do not want it hard enough. There is profound truth at the bottom of this odd conceit. Earnest striving and perseverance are rare qualities. A little struggle, and then a falling off; a few faint efforts, and then despair—this is the usual story of attempts to "get anything," whether it be a physical, mental, or spiritual good. But to long for a thing so strongly that for the sake of its attainment one can conquer obstacles, live down opposition, ignore discouragement, and work persistently and through years of trial and obscurity toward the fulfilment of a hope—is not this the record of all grand achievements and the history of all purposeful lives?

Many more wishes might be realized if people were willing to pay this price for them. Anything worth having in this world is dear, including experience. Genius itself has been defined as only unlimited patience, or an endless capacity for hard work.

It was told of some celebrated general that he never knew when he was defeated. By-and-by he could not be defeated. A little of the same spirit infused into ordinary life work would make many a dream possible that now seems to the wistful dreamer as extravagant as the cloudiest castle in Spain.—Harper's Bazar.

The Tobacco Habit.

The following are the opinions of well-known, reliable men regarding the use of tobacco:

The lives of some, and health of many, have been destroyed by persisting in the use of tobacco. This poisonous narcotic, which, next to intoxicating liquors, is, in my opinion, more destructive to the health of the youth of our country than any other known agent.—President Nott of Union College.

I have settled myself thoroughly in the conclusion that no habit of the American people is so destructive to the physical vigor and moral character as the habit of using tobacco.—Dr. J. C. Jackson.

Tobacco is ruinous in our schools and colleges, dwarfing body and mind.—Dr. Willard Parker, New York.

I am firmly convinced that tobacco is doing more mischief to the physical condition of our people than anything else.—Dr. R. W. Pease, of Syracuse, New York.

Tobacco being a narcotic stimulant, it breaks down the nervous system.—Dr. Logee.

Tobacco has no redeeming property whatever, and at the present time is a main cause of ruining our young men and pauperizing our workingmen.—Dr. Higginbottom, England.

The ill effect of cigarette smoking is the production of insomnia, dyspepsia and facial neuralgia.—Dr. Hammond.

Dr. Louis A. Sagre pronounces the use of cigarettes to be a worse practice for boys than the pipe or cigars.

City vs. Country.

The Royal Baking Powder is advertised in all the country newspapers, while the Pears' Soap manufacturers patronize none of them. Royal Baking Powder is used practically by everybody, Pears' Soap by only a small portion of our people. The latter article is an expensive goods of its class and has little sale outside of towns and cities. The Royal Baking Powder Company give the credit of their success to advertising in the newspapers. Last year it is said the company cleared four hundred thousand dollars. Their trade was won and is largely held by advertising. Their medium is mainly the country newspapers.—Waynesburg (Pa.) Republican.

A Hobby.

There is a naturalist whose hobby consists in collecting the fine dust with which the wings of moths and butterflies are covered and forming them into artistic and picturesque designs. He mounts each single grain of dust separately, so as to make boquets of flowers and fern leaves, with butterflies hovering around. This he does in a space occupied by the eighth of an inch. In another design he has a vase of passion flowers made of upward of five hundred grains of dust; and again he has represented a pot of fuchsias, with butterflies and birds, in three-sixteenths of a square inch.—Illustrated American.

Did Not Approve.

A very good story, whether true or not, is told of a Vermont deacon, who was brought before a committee of his church for horse racing. "I don't approve of horse racing," said the good deacon, "but when another member of the church becomes so godless as to try to pass me on the road, I feel it my duty to prevent him, just to keep him from putting his trust in earthly things."

Did Not Brag.

An Englishman visiting Lake Tahoe asked a native if there was good fishing in the lake. "Oh, yes, stranger." "What kind of fish do you catch here?" "Oh, all kinds, stranger." "What did the largest fish you ever caught here weigh?" "Well, stranger, we don't take no weighing machines when we goes fishing; and I am an honest man and wouldn't like to say how much that last trout I caught would weigh. But I tell you, stranger, that when I pulled that fish out of the water the lake went down a foot."

For the Patriot.

Another Trip,—No. 4.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

Although this section of country has plenty of snakes, including the poisonous rattlesnake and still more dreaded copperhead, bears, and a species of panther; yet take them all together, they are far less destructive than this one thing I have named—the "blind tiger." It haunts the mountains, the highways, the rivers, the villages and the home; we met half a dozen of them in the course of a week's travel. I thought myself fortunate in securing a good photograph of one we found in the forest, near the roadside, and although it is exceedingly dangerous at times, we escaped unharmed. I should be very glad to personally describe it to any one, but it would take too much space in a newspaper article, so I forbear.

Soon we began to climb the mountains, which grew steeper, more difficult to ascend. We ride along ridges from which we can look down on either side hundreds of feet, while we can see with the naked eye the long range of the Cumberland mountains, more than seventy-five miles distant, and toward every other point of the compass we have an unobstructed view of from twenty to fifty miles. Down yonder is a valley—no, not a valley but a large hollow, or basin, surrounded by a circular wall of high hills. At the bottom of the basin stands an old log house, desolate in appearance, lonesome in the extreme; it is the abode of a large family. It is five miles to a wagon road, and a doctor's visit costs $10. One "native" told me that the "young women thar were onsteady minded and giddy," and were "too much given over to the things of this world." It couldn't have been things in the dry goods line that he referred to, for many of them dress like angels, but that is as far as the similarity goes.

I can think of but one kind of business that I should want to go into here, and that is the soap business. It would afford a market for the American hog, and the boarders wouldn't have to eat him in order to get rid of him; it would be a first class thing all around if there was any demand for the soap, but there isn't, and the diet for the next hundred years will be hog and hominy. About the only pleasure I can conceive of for some of these residents would be in going to their own or somebody's else funeral; it would relieve the monotony of the thing a good deal. You may ride many miles and you will never see a cemetery or burying ground of any size. Apparently every family has its own individual lot, for here and there, close by the house, you will see a little mound indicating some one's last resting place.

Down the Mountain.

"Yes," said Pat, "if we can get down the side of this mountain we can save at least a mile and a half in distance, for its only about a third of a mile across lots to the house where we are to take dinner. Shall we try it?" I could not help smiling inwardly at the suggestion, for I really did not know whether to get hold of the bridle and pull my horse down, or go aft and hang on to his tail to keep him from turning somersault; but the horse solved the problem by refusing to go unless I towed him. In going a quarter of a mile we descended nearly 1000 feet, and we didn't find much to be thankful for when we got to the bottom either; 'twas the same old story of corn bread and bacon, hot biscuit and the inevitable coffee. There was one variation, however, which came in the form of "mountain dew" and honey. Pat said it was delicious.

This "mountain dew" is made by an artificial process by "moonshiners" in the mountains, and when government revenue officers are supposed to be asleep a person called a "deer head" supplies the wants of the settlers at so much per quart. The honey is raised by the natives. I felt a good deal of sympathy for the old gentleman when we took dinner—he was over 80—where he told me that the day before one of his hives of bees had "obsconded." A buxom young damsel, and quite good looking who was swinging flax in front of a log house in the woods, kindly allowed me to take her photograph while she was at work.

We suffer from thirst, but ten cents buys an old tin dipper and Pat is happy. We have a long ride before us through mountain bridle paths, up ravines, where the sun peeps in, if at all, very cautiously; fording streams, skirting precipices, the very edge of which is under the stirrup in which the foot rests, and from which one instinctively leans lest his horse make a mis-step and he be thrown to the river, 200 feet below.

Ask a man how far it is to a certain place and he answers, two looks and a half," or "five ups, six downs and a right smart look," or "over yonder a right smart piece." If the traveller is not too particular he can get an unlimited amount of satisfaction out of these answers.

The shades of night were falling fast, when through the "Sourwood mountains" passed—two travellers, weary, worn and hungry. Thirty-three miles of horseback riding since morning, with the thermometer close up to ninety in the shade, is enough for one day. Down the lane, through a gate, and the tired horses halt in front of an old log house. "Can't give ye much 'comdations, but don't like to ruffuse yer; 'light, gentlemen, 'light," said the owner. We 'lighted.

What the Owl Does.

It is well known that owls hunt by night; but it may be less a matter of common knowledge that, like other birds of prey, they return by the mouth the hard, indigestible parts of the food in the form of elongated pellets. These are found in considerable quantities about the bird's haunts, and an examination of them reveals the fact that owls prey upon a number of predaceous creatures, the distruction of which is directly beneficial to man. The evidence gained in this way is infallible; and to show to what an extent owls assist in preserving the balance of nature, it may be mentioned that 700 pellets examined yielded the remains of 16 bats, 3 rats, 237 mice, 603 moles, 1590 shrews, 22 birds. These truly remarkable results were obtained from the common barn owl; and the remains of 22 birds were those 19 sparrows, 1 greenfinch and 2 swifts.—Once a Week.

Discouraged Him.

A Missouri man had his hair and whiskers cut the other day for the first time in thirty-five years. When he got home his dogs barked at him and his wife shut the door in his face. This discouraged him, and he has sworn to monkey no more with the dudish customs of modern civilization.

Robberies at Wollaston.

Burglars were about Tuesday night The places visited were the houses of Frank P. Waterhouse, on Lincoln avenue, and W. W. Rice on Highland avenue; entrance was made in both places by forcing the catches on the kitchen windows.

Nothing was taken at Rice's, but the parties ransacked the sideboard and bureau drawers, but finding no solid silverware they left.

At Waterhouse's they made quite a haul, the articles taken being: Half dozen plated dessert spoons marked M. W., a plated teaspoon marked Shrevesport, and the following solid silverware: Two jelly spoons; two berry spoons, one of which was gold lined; one cream ladle; one butter knife; one tablespoon; one pie knife and a sardine fork. They also took from the piazza a large heavy rug 4x8.

At Mr. Waterhouse residence a large vest was found which leads Deputy Langley to believe some other place was visited.

Mr. Waterhouse gave a party Tuesday evening, and a supper was served at midnight, so that it must have been between that time and morning when they entered, probably about 4 o'clock as his dog barked at that time, hearing which, Mr. Waterhouse got up but the burglars had flown.

The silverware stolen from the residence of Frank P. Waterhouse Tuesday night by burglars was found in a field near by, Wednesday afternoon by a daughter of Mayor Fairbanks who was picking wild flowers.

The vest found by Deputy Langley at the residence of Frank P. Waterhouse, Wednesday morning, proves to belong to Melville Manning on Prospect avenue, whose house it seems was also entered. His clothes were taken from one room to another and the vest and about a dollar in change carried off.

Wollaston was again the scene of burglaries Thursday night, the places entered being the hotel, C. H. Backus and Boynton & Russell's stores, and the Wollaston laundry.

Entrance to the hotel was made by smashing the screen of the pantry window, which being unlocked, easily afforded an entrance. Once inside they were baffled, as all the doors leading to the pantry were locked from the other side, and the parties satisfied themselves by throwing strawberries, bread, meat and canned goods out of the window to the ground. The time is fixed by Mr. Merrill as about 11 o'clock, for he says he heard the noise and got up when the parties left.

At the laundry entrance was had by opening a back window into the cellar where they forced a bolt on the door leading to the laundry room. Here they smashed the money draw but had their trouble for nothing as all it contained was a brass button. They however carried away two large bundles of laundry which came from one of the out-of-town agents and as near as can be ascertained was valued at about $35.

At the store of C. H. Backus, entrance was had through the front door which was found unlocked this morning, here about $10 in change and some cigars and candy were taken.

Mr. Backus says every night he puts some change in a bag which he puts away in a place known only to the clerks who open the store in the morning, and this bag was taken, and this fact, with the finding of the outer door unlocked, seems rather strange to him.

The next place entered was the store of Boynton & Russell, where they gained entrance by the back window. The only thing secured here was about $2 in change.

Officer Furnald has been engaged by the Wollaston parties to investigate the case.

Has $24,426 Loaned.

Faxon hall was crowded Wednesday evening, and the audience was not disappointed with the minstrel entertainment presented by Quincy young men under the auspices of the I. S. L. club. Mr. J. Harvey Page was interlocutor and the colored individuals numbered twelve others. Those not mentioned in part one of the programme below were Messrs. Archie McLeod and Eben Prescott. Mrs. W. Austin Winslow was the pianist. The end men caused considerable amusement, particularly Messrs. Goodridge and French on the interlocutor's right. Some very good jokes were sprung. Every number was encored and Mr. Mead received a double one.

Now that the warm weather is coming on, it would be a good idea for the Board of Health to look after the "dump" on South street, near Sumner street. For a long time this spot has been an eyesore to the residents of South street, and the sooner it is remedied the sooner perhaps an epidemic may be averted.

Monday evening some thirty of the young friends of Mr. Frank Stoddard surprised him at his home on Baxter street, the occasion being the anniversary of his twenty-first birthday. The evening was spent in games until about 11 o'clock when ice cream and cake were served, after which Miss Ella Veazie in behalf of the friends presented Mr. Stoddard with a very handsome watch chain. The friends left for home a little after midnight, wishing their host many happy returns of the day.

It is strange that so little interest is taken in the coming centennial of Quincy. Other cities or towns which we might mention would be up and stirring and enjoy a little of the event in anticipation. Only Thursday one of a quartette of young ladies, evidently strangers, passing through the Square, likened it to a deserted village. We need a little more life and enthusiasm, more celebrations and gala day, and more patriotism.

New Invention.

T. L. Williams has received his final papers from Washington in the stone cutter's eye glasses which he invented. In Mr. Williams invention, the magnifying glass of the spectacles is set in round frame over which sets a cap with an inexpensive glass, which can be removed instantly. The advantage of this over the ordinary stone cutter spectacle is this. In those now in use the magnifying glass is not protected, and after being used a few days it becomes scratched or nicked, and is useless and has to be replaced at quite an expense, but with the new invention the outer glass only, has to be removed.

A case has just come to light that some one in authority should look into. Last Sunday a four year old son of Michael McGrath on Hancock street, Wollaston, was allowed by his uncle to knowingly take a quantity of liquor. How much the child drank is not known, but it soon became unconscious, and although a physician was summoned it was not brought back to life until some time Monday. The child is now in a very critical condition. The reason the man gave for giving the child the liquor was that he liked the fun of seeing it drink.

The Cadets of Honor repeated their pleasing entertainment of two weeks ago at Memorial chapel, Atlantic, Tuesday evening. Part I of the programme was the same as then given, but Part II was changed. The singing was done by two trios, Miss Susie Hall, Miss Alice Coe and Miss Annie Hall, forming one, and Messrs. Hall, Owen, and Curtin, the other. These singers always receive a warm reception from Atlantic audiences; and this evening was no exception. The reading by Miss Geneva Locke was of a high order, without affectation or any tinge of the school of oratory style that so many affect. In this, her second appearance before an Atlantic audience, she sustained the good impression of the first. The decorations in the chapel were arranged by Mr. Nathaniel Churchill.

Miss Geneva Locke, of Canada, is the guest of Mrs. J. H. Yeoman, of Newbury avenue, Atlantic.

Many of the children at Atlantic are sick with the measles.

A petition is being circulated at Atlantic to have a bell placed in the tower of the engine house which will be connected with the fire alarm. As it is now people there never know when there is a fire unless some one telephones them.

If pleasant Sunday, Supt. Weeks says he will run an open car on the Neponset route.

The Public Fountain.

The sum of $80.50 was made for the fountain at Mr. Charles H. Hardwick's concert, and a further subscription has been received from Hon. William A. Hodges. Still there are about $400 more needed, and the treasurer feels a little delicacy about reminding those who have promised to give a small amount; therefore desires us to ask the gentlemen who are willing to give for their horses, or for themselves, to send immediately to the treasurer their gifts, as the fountain is nearly completed.

Social Club.

A circle of unusually brilliant social events in Atlantic was brought to a close last week by a novelty party by the Social Club at their cosy hall, where pretty girls, clever men and bright and catchy music made the hours entervening between 8 and 12 o'clock pass all too quickly.

The ladies looked bewitching in their dainty evening costumes, whose only jewels were their bright eyes, which made the lights burn pale. The gentlemen were for the most part in evening dress, the exceptions being Mr. Charles L. Coe, who looked unusually happy and cool in his suit of white flannel, and Messrs. Harry W. Reed and John Carver, who appeared for the evening's frolic in summer outing costumes.

The evening's pleasure began at 8.15 o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. John Carver led the grand march of some thirty couples, then came a waltz and the ball was in motion.

The order contained fourteen numbers, intermission being at number eight when ice cream and cake were served.

The committee in charge was W. G. Kendall, Charles L. Coe, and John Carver; and Bryant furnished the music.

New Schoolhouse.

That portion of Ward Three known as the "New Plains" which comprises fully one half of the territory of the ward, seems to be practically unanimous for a new school building in its midst, rather than enlarge the present John Hancock building. Their petition to the City Council was given in full in Thursday's LEDGER. There are said to be over 300 children south of the Old Colony Railroad and Water street; the heading read as follows:

To the Honorable Body, the City Council of Quincy:

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned, taxpayers and citizens of Ward Three, Quincy, endorse the action of Councilmen from said ward in opposing the addition to the John Hancock school, and petition your honorable body that if any money is to be appropriated that the same should be expended in building a new building on the Plains, between Liberty and Granite streets, South Quincy.

CITY COUNCIL.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening, the absentees being Councilmen Sherman and Wilde. There were several important reports, and a protracted discussion over school accommodations in Ward Three.

Guardianship.

The Mayor forwarded a notice from the Probate Court regarding the removal of the guardian of Thomas Lamb. To Committee on Poor.

Underground Transit.

The Mayor forwarded the reply of Mr. H. C. Spaulding to the invitation extended to address the City Council and citizens, on his plan for underground transit in Boston, suggesting Wednesday, May 6, as the date. The citizens are invited to be present on that date.

Collection of Taxes.

The Mayor forwarded a communication recommending an addition to the ordinance concerning taxes, to provide for the more prompt collection. Received and placed on file.

Councilman Hammond offered the desired amendment.

Monthly Statement.

The Treasurer and Auditor made their monthly statements for May 1, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Licenses.

Applications to keep more than four horses were received from G. F. Wilson & Co., John Hall and S. Penniman & Co.

From J. T. French for a carriage license.

From Charles Lorendo for common victualler's license.

All referred to Committee on Licenses.

Want New Schoolhouse.

Councilman Warner presented the petition of Angus McNeil and 100 others endorses the action of the Ward Three Councilmen in favor of a new school building on the "Plains" instead of enlarging the John Hancock. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

Hancock Street Culvert.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains recommended leave to withdraw on the petition for an enlargement of the Hancock street culvert, believing that it was an Old Colony culvert which caused the nuisance. Accepted.

Canal Street Culvert.

The same committee believed the Canal street culvert sufficiently large and recommended leave to withdraw, on the petition to enlarge. Accepted.

The Brooks.

The Committee on Sewers and Drains recommended that the appropriations for brooks, $800, be expended in removing obstructions; that the Mayor be requested to hold a conference with the Old Colony authorities relative to its culvert and obstructions; that an ordinance be framed for the protection of the water courses.

Councilman Newcomb, the chairman, said the committee favored spending all of the $800 on Town and Furnace brooks, which amount they knew was very small. The Old Colony obstruction should be removed, and an ordinance passed forbidding the dumping of rubbish, etc., in the brook.

Report and recommendations adopted.

Adams Street.

The Committee on Streets offered an order making a loan of $3,000 for rebuilding Adams street. To Committee on Finance.

Hancock Street.

The Committee on Streets offered an order for $10,700 to complete the rebuilding of Hancock street, the edgestone to be extended to the bridge. To Committee on Finance.

Washington Street.

The Committee on Streets offered an order for $10,000 for rebuilding Washington street; $6,000 to be spent in paving, 22 feet wide, beginning at the Quincy Point end, and the remaining $4,000 in resurfacing to Foster street. To Committee on Finance.

Truant Ordinance.

An ordinance relating to truants was offered and referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

Garfield Street.

The order authorizing a loan of $2450 for drain and regrading of Garfield street, was passed to be engrossed and referred to Committee on Finance.

Water Street.

The order calling for $100 for plans for Water street came up for engrossment.

Councilman Jones offered an amendment providing that the plan show both a street 45 and 40 feet wide.

Councilman Bryant raised a point of order that the order was not properly before the Council, having never been considered by the Committee on Streets in meeting assembled.

Chairman Jones said the action of the committee implied it, and Councilmen Powers and Warner upheld the chairman.

President Thompson ruled that the point was not well taken, and Councilman Bryant thereupon appealed.

After more or less discussion the chair was sustained.

The amendment was adopted and the order ordained under a suspension of the rules.

Grove Street.

The order appropriating $500 for Grove street was passed to be engrossed.

Schoolhouse Enlargement.

The order appropriating $500 for plans for the enlargement of the John Hancock schoolhouse came up for engrossment.

Councilman Warner moved to lay on the table, saying the Committee on Public Buildings was willing to further consider the matter, and the School Committee was not unanimous. The petition for a new schoolhouse should be considered.

Chairman Claflin did not think the School Committee wanted further time. It was only a delay to get a new building, which he claimed was not justifiable on any ground, either financially or good sense. The advantages were decidedly with a large building.

Councilman Moxon agreed with the chairman of the School Committee in favor of addition. A new eight-room building in brick, would cost $40,000 and the proposed enlargement $15,000. He admitted that a new schoolhouse must eventually be built, but argued that it would be economy to make the enlargement.

Councilman Pratt believed his constituents in Ward Three were all of one mind, in favor of a new building. He defined the limits of both the Adams and John Hancock districts, and said both were on the edge of the ward. Relief was wanted as much for one as the other. He spoke of the large number crossing the railroad track to go to the Adams and the danger The ward did not want an expensive building. He thought brick would be out of place, and cited six and seven room buildings which had been erected at Mattapan, Weymouth, and in our own city for about $15,000. The expenditure of $500 for plans would be foolish. To relieve the present pressure two good rooms could be made in the third story of the John Hancock.

Councilman Jones believed the petition presented this evening should be considered. It was a growing section. The primary children had to walk a long distance, some a mile. Favored laying order on the table.

Councilman Fallon opposed the enlargement of the John Hancock, believing the location a very undesirable one. He favored new building and moved to recommit order.

Councilman Warner hoped the order would lay on the table and remain there, as he wanted a new building or nothing.

Chairman Claflin spoke of the crowded condition of the John Hancock, saying the attic was unfit for a school room. The matter should not be delayed.

Councilman Jones did not think a new eight-room wooden building would cost much more than the addition of four of brick to the John Hancock.

Councilman Moxon said the John Hancock was one of the best ventilated and sunniest in the city and had a dry cellar.

Councilman Powers believed Ward Three was unanimous for the new building.

Councilman Bryant thought the Council should profit by the experience of the practical builder who was chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings.

Councilman Newcomb asked the chairman of the School Committee how long it would be in case the addition was made, before the new schoolhouse would be needed. He was answered three or four years, perhaps longer, whereupon he believed it would be a waste of money to make the enlargement. Favored further consideration. He for one did not want to do anything detrimental to the schools.

Voted to lay the order on the table.

Location of Poles.

The order granting the Chief Engineer a location of poles was passed to be engrossed.

Cemetery Enlargement.

The order authorizing a loan of $6,000 for the enlargement of the Mount Wollaston Cemetery was passed to be engrossed.

To Run Guy.

Councilman Jones offered an order giving Malnati Bros. permission to run wire guy across Liberty street. Ordered to second reading.

Adjourned at 10.05.

Fires.

An alarm at 3.50 Sunday afternoon called the fire department to the Durgin & Merrill brick block in the Square. Crowds of citizens gathered, as is sure to be the case when a 20 is pulled. Although no flames were visible at any time the crowd lingered around in the rain.

The fire was in a closet on the third floor which opens out of the Granite Manufacturers' room, and is also a passage way to an air space or low attic above, to which the flames communicated. It was a difficult fire to extinguish, but the firemen handled it well, and with a very little water, as a shut-off nozzle was used. The hand extinguishers came into play and did good service.

The actual loss by fire did not exceed $100. There was some damage by water to the walls and ceilings and to the furniture and stock of some of the occupants, notably D. Bamford the tailor, who occupies the room below. $200 to $300 will cover tho whole loss.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. There was very little rubbish in the closet, and not of a dangerous character. The theory of an electric wire causing it was advanced, but there appears to have been no wire in or near the closet, and further, the current was not on. Suspicion points to an incendiary origin, and any one could have obtained access as a door leading into the Granite Manufacturers room was unlocked.

The recall or "all out" signal was given at 4.50.

The block and stock of the various occupants is valued at upwards of $50,000 so it is very fortunate the flames were checked as they were.

Barn Fire.

Again at 7.25 the fireman were called to the Square by an alarm from Box 26, at which time the flames were making rapid headway in the hay shed and barn at the grain store of A. J. Richards & Sons. The fire department got down to work promptly, Hose 1 laying two lines from the Saville street hydrant and one from a hydrant on Hancock street, near the fountain. These were supplemented soon by a line run from the latter hydrant by Hose 4, one from a hydrant front of the Brackett estate run by Hose 2, and one from the Steamer which drafted from the reservoir. There was no lack of water or pressure and the fire was fairly drowned out.

It gave evidence at the start of becoming a conflagration, and the firemen were at a disadvantage owing to the dense smoke. The Old Colony freight house and also several freight cars on the siding were threatened, but the latter were moved to a safer spot, and the former saved by the department. An Old Colony engine summoned from Boston arrived quickly, but was not needed.

A. J. Richards had upwards of twenty tons of hay stored in the shed and barn, and although it was not destroyed is probably worthless because of the smoke and water. Their loss on stock is about $400; on buildings $800; fully insured.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but is thought to have been incendiary. It might however have been a spark from an engine or carelessness.

Smoke and Cinders.

Charles F. Tirrell pulled in both alarms on Sunday.

Chief Ripley missed the afternoon fire, being out of town.

D. Bamford has promptly ordered a new stock of goods and his business will proceed without interruption.

The Atlantic chemical took the place of the Quincy steamer during her absence in Weymouth.

The police were promptly on hand at both fires and rendered good service. The evening fire was roped off.

The women were interested in the block fire as several had dresses at Miss Garrity's.

Will all the boxes on Hancock street be rung in order? It begun at the head of the street, Box 35, and Boxes 23 and 26 come next. There are four or five more on the street.

It is seldom that six streams are used for a Quincy fire, and all on one building too.

Box 23 was pulled at 6.40 Wednesday evening. It did not strike right and the fire department did not respond. The "Relief" hose located at John Hall's stable run a line from a hydrant and easily extinguished the incipient blaze, which had started in an outbuilding in the rear of Tirrell & Sons carriage manufactory. It was in the midst of a group of buildings and the prompt discovery prevented a conflagration.

Look Out for Him.

A young man claiming to be an agent of Irwin's circus victimized a number of New Bedford business men last week. He called at a number of markets, groceries and grain stores and made contracts for supplying the circus. At each place he solicited an advertisement for the "official programme," and collected from $3 to $7 of the dealers. It turns out that the man has no connection with Irwin's circus. He is supposed to have secured about $100.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, May 6, 1891.

The Quincy water bill has been in the hands of the Committee on Water Supply ever since last week Thursday. They had a meeting this forenoon but were unable to come to any conclusion.

There was reported in the Senate Thursday a bill to incorporate George F. Hoar, Charles R. Codman, Leverett Saltonstall, N. S. Shober, E. S. Converse, and others well known, as a board of trustees of public reservations. They are to take and hold for the use of the public such beautiful and historic places as they see fit. They are to be unpaid and may take property in the State for that purpose to the value of $1,000,000, which is to be exempt from taxation, but it is not to be held so exempt for more than two years before it is open to the public.

Senator Coveney of Middlesex did what he could to substitute a bill to regulate commercial agencies in place of an adverse committee report, but he failed by a vote of 11 to 25. He wished to forbid them to act as collection agencies and to hold them responsible for damages they might inflict upon a man's business reputation.

By an exact party vote of 20 to 19 and President Sprague in the chair not recorded (and with no use of his going on record) the Senate has defeated the House bill to prevent political parties from paying poll taxes. The Democrats did not want it passed because they would lose more votes by it than the Republicans and the Republicans did want it passed for that very reason. So the House passed it and the Senate killed it.

The defeat of the salary bill was temporarily accomplished in the House on Friday. Debate was long and well sustained on both sides. So much attention had been called to the matter in the papers and so much had been said about the way in which the bill was ordered to a third reading while the House was in confusion, that there was no hope that it could be pushed through without debate. More than this, Mr. Bill of Paxton and his friends had secured enough members to stand up and demand a roll call and there was no dodging the vote. The speakers for the bill were Messrs. Mellen of Worcester, Tucker of New Bedford, Lomasney of Boston, Turner of Malden, Murray of Fitchburg, Mitchell of Boston and Rosnosky of Boston. Against the bill were Messrs. Bill of Paxton, Stevens of Boston, Howe of Cambridge, Parkhurst of Clinton, Wilson of Boston, Shaw of New Bedford, Charles of Boston. The roll call showed seventy-one members for the bill to 124 against it and five pairs. A member of the Committee on Public Service, which reported the bill, gives the illuminating information that not a member who spoke for the bill asked the committee to report it, but over fifty of those who voted against it were before the committee in its support. This being so the restraining effect of a roll call is apparent.

President Sprague on Friday overruled the point of order against the Donovan liquor bill and it was admitted without debate in place of the House bill to strengthen the public bar law. It repeals the public bar law and forbids the use of tables in rooms where liquor selling is the principal business.

The House has finally disposed of the foreign corporation bill, as far as it is concerned. It was sharply debated on Monday and both sides put forth their utmost strength. The great issue was whether such corporations should be compelled to file at the State House lists of their shareholders, with the amount of stock held by each in order that they could be open to the inspection of local assessors. Remonstrances against this feature of the bill had been sent to the House in great numbers and weight and it was evident that an enormous amount of capital was concerned. Finally the bill was rejected by a roll call, showing 78 yeas to 89 nays on passing the bill to be engrossed.

That settled the matter, but there were two distinct parts to the bill which never should have been yoked together. One was this matter of taxation, which had made all the trouble and caused the defeat of the bill. The other was the measure of Mr. Bennett of Everett to stop the operation in this State of the fraudulent corporations of Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey and West Virginia. So Mr. Bennett gave notice after the vote on Monday that he should move to reconsider on Tuesday. On Tuesday morning Speaker Barrett called Mr. Kimball of Fitchburg to the chair and took the floor in behalf of Mr. Bennett's proposition. He engineered the matter skilfully by drawing from Messrs. Lane of Springfield and Mellen of Worcester, who had been the champions of the taxation part of the bill, an admission that they were defeated and could do nothing more. So they agreed not to renew their fight if the reconsideration should prevail. This made it easy to reconsider. The vote was reconsidered; the bill was amended to meet the case of the fraudulent corporations and passed to be engrossed without further debate.

The House on Monday by 91 to 33, and refusing to have a roll call, reconsidered its rejection of the salary grab and put it on the table, under lead of Mr. Mellen of Worcester, where it could be taken up and rushed through in a twinkling whenever the opportunity might seem to be favorable.

The assessment endowment companies bill was on Monday postponed to Friday pending amendments by Mr. Lomasney of Boston to compel them to go out of the endowment and benefit business altogether and to put their funds into the hands of the State treasury for the benefit of the policy-holders.

The committee expenses for April were reported at $766, against over $1600 for March, and it is to be observed that the items for cigars were only $11.80, instead of about $100, as in March. Now the pertinent question is whether the cigars are covered up in the charge for hotel bills or not.

On the first stage of the bill to compel the publication of election expenses there was quite a debate in the House, but there was very little genuine opposition to the bill because each political party was afraid of the other and neither wanted the other to have the sole credit of supporting the bill. So all the amendments to increase the sums exempted from publication were voted down and a large vote was given for the bill.

The politics in the bill united both parties in its support, but on the bill to compel the distribution of sample ballots the politics led to its defeat. The Republicans feared it was a device to enable the Democrats to vote their ignorant voters and so the bill was voted down by 88 to 108. Boston's leading Republican politicians were for the bill, but they could not carry the House.

The gypsy moth commission asks for over $78,000 for its campaign to Feb. 1, 1892, and proposes a detailed plan of campaign with 200 men and 20 teams in the field in May and June.

Not a peep has been heard in the House in defence of the bond investment companies, and the bill absolutely shutting them up has gone through without opposition.

After a two days' debate the Senate voted Wednesday, 22 to 10, in favor of the bill to give cities and towns the right to make and sell gas and electric light. But the fight is not yet ended. RULE.

Prof. Wade Dead.

Mr. Lewis T. Wade, late instructor of music in the Quincy schools, died last week at Farmington, Me., of consumption. He leaves a widow and four children.

Mr. Wade came to Quincy in April, 1886, and remained here five years. Previous to his coming we had no special music study in the public schools, but he introduced and established a system with remarkable success which was due to the common sense system which he followed and today music is on as good a footing in Quincy as in any place in the country and the credit is due to him alone. He was not a well man and many would have given up, but he kept at his work with remarkable courage. Too much can not be said in his praise and the community of Quincy owe him a debt, as his work is not fully appreciated on the part of the public. He was the author of a course of study in music which he published and gave the name of "Quincy course of study for Schools."

School Committee Meeting.

The school committee held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening. All members were present with the exception of Mr. Corthell.

The business transacted was as follows:

It was determined to have no public graduation exercises of the grammar schools this year.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Claflin, Crane and Keith was appointed to further consider the matter of school accommodations of Ward Three.

The salaries of Mrs. Corliss and Miss Abbie M. Kelley of the Willard school, and Miss A. T. Kelley of the Coddington school, was increased from $450 to $500.

The meeting then adjourned to next Tuesday evening.

Amateur Gardening.

Bring out the rusty garden rake,
Hunt up the hoe and spade,
For spring is here, and it is time
To have the garden made.

Your wife will lean upon the fence
And watch you while you work,
She's always prompt to give advice,
She'll never let you shirk.

Don't waste your time in trying to tell
The bulbs from worthless weeds;
Dig them all up; that's easiest, and
You'll need the room for seeds.

Work hard, man, you won't break your back,
Though you may fear you may,
Don't stop to lean upon your spade,—
Think what your wife will say.

Then when you've got the garden dug,
The seeds all out of sight,
You'd better hire a gardner
To do it over right.

Household Receipts.

CORN CAKE. One pint each of flour, corn meal and buttermilk, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, one tablespoonful of lard and a pinch of salt; bake one hour.

BOSTON CRULLERS. Three eggs, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of milk, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, nutmeg, cinnamon, and lemon juice or extract to taste, and flour sufficient to stiffen; cut in strips and fry in lard.

BOILED CORN STARCH CUSTARD. Boil a pint of milk, mix a small dessert spoonful of corn starch with a little cold milk, only enough to make a smooth paste; stir the boiling milk into it, return to the saucepan and boil ten minutes. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a very little salt, then stir in a beaten egg. Do not let it boil after the egg is added but just below the boiling point which is sufficient to cook the egg.

BISCUIT CHEESE. Slice into very thin pieces, a quarter of a pound of fresh cheese. Let this stand on the stove for a very few minutes after adding butter about the size of half an egg, and a little pepper and salt. Then sprinkle cracker dust until the desired consistency is reached.

COOKIES. One cup of butter, one egg, one and one-half cups of sugar, one-half cups of sweet milk, one teaspoonful of soda and flour to roll.

PLAIN SPONGE CAKE. One cup of sugar, one cup of flour (a little more flour than sugar), two eggs, salt, one teaspoonful of extract of lemon, one teaspoonful of baking powder, five teaspoonfuls of hot water (not boiling). Add the hot water last, and bake half an hour.

How to Lay a Carpet.

Lay the linings on the floor, putting a small tack here and there to keep them in place. Put the carpet on the floor, unrolling it in the direction in which it is to be laid. Begin to tack it at the end of the room which is the most irregular. If there be a fire-place or bay-window in the room, fit the carpet around these places first. Use large tacks to hold the carpet temporarily in place: they can be withdrawn when the work is finished When the carpet is fitted to a place, use small tacks to keep it down. Tack one end of the carpet, stretching it well; then a side, then the other end, and finally the other side. Be careful to keep the lines straight and to have the carpet fit tightly; for if it be loose it will not only look badly, but will not wear well.—The Ladies' Home Journal.

The Tea Table Attractive.

No domestic sight is pleasanter in its way than a tea table on a cold winter night spread with a bright cloth and set out with dainty china and shining silver, and with all the cheer-inspiring appurtenances of the tea tray, with the plate of hot bread, the savory dish of hot meat and the little relishes that the house-keeper knows well how to supply.

And in summer its counterpart is seen in the table laid in the room brightened by the level sun's rays, where crisp salad, piles of white and brown bread, and a plate of rusk or tea biscuit, pitchers of milk, and a dish of berries with cream galore, revive the fainting appetites and spirits of those who have borne the heat and burden of the day.

MONEY IS TIGHT. Mrs. Hayseed (on her first visit to town)—"One would think that big store I was just in would do considerable business, but I suppose most of the crowd just looks around and goes out again. My! Wasn't there a commotion when I bought something and paid for it."

Hostess—"A commotion?"

Mrs. Hayseed—Mercy! yes. Jest es quick as that clerk girl got my money, she began yelling 'cash' like mad—and half a dozen little errand boys came rushin' up to see it."

Anecdotes.

Hobson,—How did you enjoy your summer trip, Bagley?

Bagley,—Had a delightful time. Gained one hundred and thirty pounds.

Hobson—One hundred and thirty pounds! I don't believe it.

Bagley,—Don't you? Well, here it comes down the street. Just wait a moment and I'll introduce you.—The Jury.

Johnny,—Papa, do the good die young?

Papa,—Yes, my son.

Johnny, (after a pause)—Well, accordin' to that, what a bad man poor old grandpa must be. He's so old.

"I love to sit before a blazing fire and watch the figures in the flame."

"Vhell," said Isaacs, "Dher bleasure ob dot dependts larchly on dher insuranze."—N. Y. Sun.

She,—"So you are engaged to one of the Musgrave twins? How can you distinguish one from the other?"

He,—"I don't try to."

Johnnie,—Mamma, is General Greely the clerk of the weather?

Mamma,—Oh, no, my child. He is the cashier. He gives us our change, don't you know.

"On what grounds did Henshaw get his pension! I never heard that he did any fighting during the war."

"He didn't, but he claims his sympathies were enlisted."

Mother,—Why did you tell that lie to the teacher?

Johnny,—To save somebody from punishment.

Mother,—I knew there must be some extenuating circumstances. Who was it you wished to save from punishment?

Johnny,—Myself.

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Commencing next Monday night "Old Jed Prouty" will be with us once more but for one week only. Richard Golden and Dora Wiley "the sweet singer of Maine" are still in the role and great favorites wherever they go. For the week commencing May 18th, the Austin Daley Company is announced to play their last engagement of the season here prior to their departure for their fifth visit to London.

Boston Theatre.

The long run of "The Soudan" is drawing to a close as a new play, "The Wolves of New York," is in course of preparation. If any of our readers have not seen this grand realistic play, they should not delay longer, for it is the most popular play presented in Boston this winter. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and performances every evening.

Boston Museum.

Once again "Hands Across the Sea" is the attraction at the Museum. This play is a popular one with all classes of people, and is, to full houses. The scenery is admirable, and the large Australian steamer is so natural that it seems to the looker on, a real ocean steamer, ploughing its way to Australia.

The Doing of Little Things.

As long as I live to speak or write to the daughters in our order, I shall emphasize the doing of little things. That alabaster box of ointment, the washing of the dear, tired feet, all the stories told by our King Himself in our New Testament must not be lost on us. Nothing is small if we could see aright. Oh, how the little omissions of what you might have done for your precious mother will come up before you, after your mother has gone from earth, and the hot tears will spring to your eyes, and you will think if not say, "Oh, if I had her back I would be more thoughtful." Ah, be thoughtful now! I said something like this once to some young people, and there was a lovely girl present wearing the cross who was deeply touched. On her return home, to her mother's great surprise, she threw her arms around her mother's neck exclaiming:

"Mrs. Bottome said we might not have our mothers long. Oh, mother don't die till I have been thoughtful."

The mother laughed and told her she thought she was likely to live some time. Not long after, as the mother unbuttoned her boots to put on her slippers, her daughter jumped up, exclaiming:

"Oh, mother, let me put on your slippers."

A year after that I met the mother of that girl in a railway train and she said to me:

"I thought my daughter was always lovely, but for the last year she has been perfect; her thoughtfulness of me is something wonderful." And then she added: "Go on teaching our daughters to be thoughtful of their mothers."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Bits of Forgotten History.

When coal was first used in England the prejudice against it was so strong that the House of Commons petitioned the king to prohibit the use of the "noxious" fuel. A royal proclamation having failed to abate the nuisance, a commission was issued to ascertain who burned coal within the city of London and its neighborhood, to punish them by force for the first offence, and by the demolition of their furnaces if they persisted in transgressing. A law was finally passed making it a capital offence to burn coal in the city, and only permitting it to be used by forges in the vicinity.

The first coins struck by the United States mint were some half dimes in 1792; the first dimes were struck in France from old silver family plate furnished by Washington, the coins being known as "Martha Washington dimes" from the circumstance as noted, and an adaptation of the liberty head to that of Martha Washington.

The waltz had its beginning in Germany and thence was taken to France, shortly after which it was introduced into England. Hungary was the birth-place of the galopade or galop, and from Portland came the stately polonaise or polacca and mazourka.

Boxing for Boys.

There is absolutely nothing in the way of recreation so beneficial in every respect to a boy as boxing. I am positive,—and I know whereof I write, for as boy and man I have tried them all, fencing, wrestling, rowing, swimming, riding,—that no one of them has the many advantages of boxing. As an all-round developer it is unequalled; not one of the boy's muscles remains inactive; back, stomach, legs, arms, all are called upon for vigorous service. But what I consider its best feature in its recommendation for boys is the very thorough drilling which the disposition of the boy must undergo. If a lad is quick to lose his temper, boxing will cure him; it will teach him that no one who lets his temper get the better of him will become an expert sparrer; it will speedily convince him of the absolute necessity of keeping cool and in entire possession of his wits in order to sustain his efforts and avoid defeat. The boxer who cannot control his temper is practically at the mercy of a cool, skilful opponent. One cannot spar successfully and become flustered. A boxer must ever be on the alert, his wits constantly alive, looking for an opportunity of assault; he must be able to act instantly and with cool deliberation, as distinguished from wild, undirected action. He need do no running to develop the muscles of his legs or his lungs; these are all continuously in action.—Harper's Young People.

PEACHES. Ex-President A. W. Holden of the Produce Exchange, Philadelphia, said recently that the crop will be immense, and Mr. Holden knows the Delaware and Maryland peach orchards like a book. He does not count up just how many baskets of the luscious and popular fruit will reach the world outside the great peach belt, but he thinks that the big peach record of 1875 will be beaten, and in that year nearly six million of baskets were marketed.

WHICH? A beautiful young lady and her once-beautiful mother were walking down the street together when they met two gentlemen whom the mother knew.

"How much your daughter resembles you," exclaimed one.

"How closely you resemble your daughter," exclaimed the other.

Now which of these two gentlemen do you think was invited home to tea?

Teachings of Science.

The structure of the brain is changed in various ways from its normal state. It is sometimes hardened from the increase of its connective tissue, and sometimes softened from a form of fatty change; and in both cases the proper brain cells—the seat of cerebral action, of physical and mental power are more or less diminished in number, altered in structure, and impaired in activity. The vessels are often found degenerated, and liable to great distention and rupture, constituting congestion and apoplexy. The membranes of the brain are often found inflamed and thickened, their transparency and pliability impaired—and in short the whole organ is degenerated, enfeebled and perverted. Under the immediate effect of liquor, the drunkard is regardless of his duties and obligations to himself, his family, and to society. He is inefficient, improvident, unthrifty, unreliable, often violent, dangerous and criminal. When deprived of his accustomed dram, he is morose, despondent, and often unendurably wretched, with a craving for the liquor, which in the perverted state of his brain is irresistable. His depression and dispair sometimes lead to suicide, preceded, it may be, by the murder of his family, with the motive of relieving himself and them from their living death. Mingled with this dispair, are often fits of fury which the drink excites; and his causeless and unreasoning vengeance may be inflicted indiscriminately on himself, his family, his friends, or strangers, as well as on imagined or real foes. In many cases nothing is too absurd or too depraved for him to do, and no suffering is too severe for him to endure.

To be continued.

In Memoriam.

St. Francis Court, No. 25, M. C. O. F., has adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, It has seemed wise to the Almighty Disposer of events to remove from our midst our late worthy and esteemed brother, Michael Dumphy, and

WHEREAS, The intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of this Court render it proper that we should place upon record our appreciation of his services as a forester and his merits as a man; therefore

RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission, we deplore the loss of Brother Dumphy with deep feeling of regret, softened only by the confident hope that his spirit is with those who, having fought the good fight here, are enjoying perfect happiness in a better world.

RESOLVED, That in the death of Michael Dumphy this Court loses a brother who was always active and zealous in his work as a forester; ever ready to succor the needy and distressed of the fraternity; prompt to advance the interests of the Order; devoted to its welfare and prosperity; one who was wise in council and fearless in action.

RESOLVED, That the Court tender to his afflicted family our sincere condolence and earnest sympathy in their affliction, at the loss of one who was a good citizen, a devoted forester and an upright man.

RESOLVED, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the Court and a copy transmitted to the family of the deceased.

NEW ENGLAND WHEATON SEMINARY CLUB. An extra meeting of the New England Wheaton Seminary Club will be held at the Thorndike, Boston, Saturday, May 9, 1891. Luncheon will be served at one o'clock, after which there will be a business session for the reading of the annual reports of Secretary and Treasurer, the election of officers, the consideration of some proposed alterations in the Constitution, the discussion of a suggested change in the day of meeting, and other important business. As there will be no literary exercises for the afternoon, it is hoped that there will be ample opportunity, after the business meeting, for the social hour, which members always find far too short at the regular meetings of the Club.

☞ Twenty-three thousand tons of coal a day was the average output of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company for last year. Where does this enormous amount go to? Genial Charley Agard, Superintendent of the Company's distributing station at New Bedford, says a large proportion of it is consumed in New England, where the fine quality of the Company's choice coals gives them an unequalled popularity. Among these is the celebrated free-burning Brookside Coal of Lykens Valley, the deepest red ash mined, well-known as unexcelled for use in open grate or cooking stoves. The product of the Reading mines includes every variety from the Brookside to the hardest white ash, and under the business-like management of the new administration (President A. A. McLeod, General Manager Chas. E. Henderson, assisted by the veteran General Coal Agent, Thomas M. Richards, who has spent about all his life with the Reading Co.,) the demand for these coals is rapidly and constantly increasing. Mr. Edward Sherwin, of Boston, has managed the Company's Eastern department for over eighteen years, and to his unremitting efforts the success of the New England business is largely due. po

Sanitary Qualities of Onions.

Botanically the onion belongs to the lily family. The odor of the vegetable, which is what makes it so unpleasant, is due to a volatile oil, which is the same as that in garlic, though in the onion it is milder and naturally does not last so long. There are, besides, easy ways of removing at once all unpleasantness from the breath. A little parsley or a few grains of coffee, or even a swallow or two of milk, if taken after eating, proves an effective remedy. Boiled onions are the least objectionable in regard to odor, and are as easily digested as any. The oil in the onion passes off in the water in which the vegetables are boiled, and if the kettle be kept closely covered and the water changed after they have boiled five minutes, and then again ten minutes later, there will be no odor through the house, and the onions will be white instead of gray, as they so often are. Besides being rich in flesh-forming elements, raw onions are especially good in breaking up a heavy cold, they are also stimulating to fatigued persons and are otherwise beneficial.—Scientific American.

Poetry.

A Song of May.

Merry, rollicking, frolicking May
Into the woods came skipping one day;
She teased the brook till he laughed outright,
And gurgled and scolded with all his might;
She chirped to the birds and made them sing
A chorus of welcome to Lady Spring;
And the bees and the butterflies she set
To waking the flowers that were sleeping yet.
She shook the trees till the buds looked out
To see what the trouble was all about;
And nothing in nature escaped that day
The touch of the life giving, bright young
May.

DECKER'S REWARD.

The days are shortening," sighed Friend Decker, as he folded up his spectacles and replaced them in their tin case, "or else my sight isn't what it used to be. Welladay, one can't expect to be young always. Is it thee, Leah? I did not look for thee so soon."

Leah Decker came into the room like a breezy young whirlwind. She had none of the repose of manner at present so much in vogue. Born and bred a Quakeress, there was nothing of the Quakeress about her except her quaint Scripture name.

"Yes, it's me!" said Leah shortly.

"Did thee go to Friend Anastasia?" gently inquired the old man, readjusting the big pine logs so that they should burn brighter for Leah's benefit.

"Oh, yes, I went there."

"I hope she is better of her rheumatism."

"Yes; she is better. But—but she will not buy the apples, father. Mean, stingy old thing!" cried Leah wrathfully, flinging her coal scuttle bonnet on the table. "She says she can buy all she wants at fifty cents a barrel of old Jacob Joyce; so she can, perhaps, wretched, knurly, worm knots, not fit for pigs! Ours are apples! She says thee asks an exorbitant price."

Friend Decker slowly shook his head.

"Friend Anastasia is under a misapprehension," said he. "Eighty cents a barrel is what they are paying at the cider mill. Only one does not like to see such beautiful, rare colored fruit ground into baleful spirits to set men's brains on fire."

"Much she would stop to think of that," said Leah, still ruffled.

"I am sorry," said Friend Decker mildly. "I need the money much, and I think she would have been better satisfied with my apples than with Friend Jacob Joyce's."

"And after all that," flashed out Leah, the spirit of indignation rife within her, "she had the impudence to ask me for a jar of plum sauce I made. She says Friend Mary told her how nice it was and"—

"And," quietly interposed her father, "thee said, I hope, that thee would be glad to oblige her."

"No, I didn't," bluntly answered Leah. "I said that I gathered the wild plums myself in the Crook road, and cooked them after Aunt Mahala's recipe, and that there were four jars, and I wanted to keep them for thee, especially since thy health was so poor and thy appetite so variable."

"I am sorry, dear," said Friend Decker. "Friend Anastasia is very old, and old people are apt to be fanciful about trifles. Moreover, she's our kinswoman, a degree or two removed, perhaps, but"—

"Then why don't she do something for us," flashed out Leah, "besides giving us good advice and tormenting us with her fault finding. I didn't mean to mention it, father, but she told me out and out that she had adopted Moses Sawyer, and that she meant to make him her heir."

"Well, daughter, why should she not?" composedly questioned the old man.

"Because he is no relation to her at all," cried Leah, "and the property all came from our great-grandfather Lennox, thee knows."

"Thee attaches too much importance to mere dress, Leah," said Friend Decker. "Thee must study the text of the lillies of the field in the Bible. 'We shall all be provided for if only we can have patience to wait.'"

Leah bit her full, red under lip as she glanced around the sparsely furnished room, and noticed her father's drooping figure and rapidly whitening head, but she made no reply as she took up the coarse pile of vests on which she had been working button holes for a neighboring clothing contractor.

"Father's a saint," thought she, "but I am not, and I am afraid I never shall be. I should like to cut off Anastasia Akerly's ears. If every one had their rights, half of that big Lennox farm would be ours. She gained possession of it by the merest legal quibble, and if father was like any one else he would have gone to law about it long ago and got back his own. And now to see it deliberately willed to some one else!"

And Leah's needle flew vindictively in and out of the cloth like a miniature javelin piercing the heart of an unseen enemy.

But the next morning when Lean had gone to carry her bundle of vests home and got another batch of work Friend Decker put on his hat and buttoned his great coat, which was getting worn at the elbows and shiny at the seams.

"It is a bright, clear morning, albeit a trifle frosty," said he. "I think I may walk as far as the Lennox farm without aggravating my cough."

And under his arm he carried a neat parcel.

Old Anastasia Akerly was winding blue yarn before the fire when he came in. She greeted him not without a shadow of suspicion.

Had he come like a spy into the enemy's quarters?

"I hope thee is well, Friend Anastasia," said he. "I have brought thee a jar of my daughter's wild plum sauce. Perhaps it may tempt thy appetite."

Anastasia Akerly colored.

"I ain't of no consequence," said she, "I dunno as I care so much about sweet things. Only there used to grow a wild plum bush on the hills at home, and mother used to boil the plums with molasses. They were drefful sour, but there was a flavor about 'em I haint never since tasted. And when Mary Moore told how good Leah's was, I kind o' notioned I'd like a taste o' 'em. But Leah said she hadn't none to spare."

"Leah was mistaken," said Friend Decker. "In our home there is always something to spare for an old friend like thee."

"I didn't know that you looked on me as a friend," she said sharply.

"Thee ought to have been certain of that."

"There were ugly things said about the way the Lennox property was managed," said Miss Akerly.

"Nothing was said by me, Friend Anastasia, observed the Quaker. "And" as far as in me lies I am anxious to be at peace with all the world."

"Humph!" said the old woman. "Well, there ain't no use making up to me; my will was drawn up long ago, and Moses Sawyer is my heir."

"Thee is welcomed to do as thee likes with thy own," said Friend Decker calmly, setting down the jar of wild plum preserves and glancing wistfully toward the cushioned arm-chair by the fire, for his limbs were enfeebled by age, and he had walked a considerable distance.

But Miss Akerly did not ask him to sit down and rest, so he took a fresh grip of his knotty cane and started on his homeward tramp.

"Good morning to thee, Friend Anastasia," to which the old lady only responded with an articulated grunt.

But when he was out of sight she unscrewed the lid of the jar, and with an old silver spoon, worn thin with long usage, she tasted the sweetness of its contents.

"Jest like them mother used to boil down with molasses when I was gal," said she. "I could most fancy I was a gal ag'in, in the old plum time, a-cuttin' across the lots with my sun bonnet hitched on by one string and the red dog caperin' at my heels. Waal, waal! It don't seem like I was close on to seventy years of age."

Miss Anastasia had some of the wild plum sauce with her scanty dinner. It gives it a relish. She ate some more with bread and cheese for her supper.

"I never did taste nothin' that went to the right spot like them plums," said she. "It ain't 'cause they're relishin'. It's 'cause they make me feel like I was in Wisconsin, with the sassafras leaves turnin' yaller and the wind blowin' in my face."

Leah did not know until a neighbor's boy brought back the jar neatly wrapped in a newspaper what a treat she had afforded her neighbor.

"What is it, Willie?" she asked the boy.

"It's the jar that had the wild plum sass in it," said Willie. "Miss Akerly says she's much olbiged, and she gave me a ginger cookey for bringing it back, she did."

"Father," said Leah reproachfully to the old man, "this is thy doings. Thee is always thinking of some one else."

"It has done me more good than if I had had eaten it myself, Leah," said Friend Decker apologetically.

Leah ran to him and gave him a hug.

"Thee is an old darling, father," said she; "and thee makes me ashamed of my own temper sometimes."

She put the jar on the top shelf of the little pantry, and never thought anything more about it till one day when she wanted a jar to put fresh cranberries in. She was in a hurry, for Miss Anastasia Akerly was to be buried that afternoon. She died as she had lived, sitting alone before the fire, and this was the day they had appointed for her funeral.

Friend Decker had expressed a desire to attend the obsequies of the kinswoman who had been so little to him, and Leah was hurrying through her work so that she might brush the well worn suit and take a much needed stitch in the coarse worsted gloves.

As she tore off the newspaper wrappings she stopped suddenly.

"Father," she cried, "here is a piece of thick, yellowish paper rolled up and put inside this jar that came from Friend Anastasia's. What does thee suppose it is? Father it is a will!"

She ran eagerly with it to Friend Decker. He looked dubiously at the outside.

"Thee is right, Leah," said he. "Friend Anastasia's heart was softened towards us. This is doubtless the will she mentioned—will in favor of Moses Sawyer. She has sent it to us to destroy. Nay, daughter, nay," as Leah eagerly caught it up and hastened toward the fire. "Give it to me. It is not for us to make or meddle. If Friend Anastasia wished the will destroyed she should have done it herself. I shall take it back to Friend Johnson the executor."

"Father," cried Leah, "thee would not give him the will?"

"Does thee think it would be an honorable thing to destroy it, Leah?"

"If she wanted us to do so, father."

"But we have no right to presume anything of the sort, daughter," reasoned Friend Decker, buttoning it up under his coat. "Nay, nay, do not fret." For Leah, overcome by the sudden blaze of hope and the after blackness of despair, had burst into a flood of tears. "It will be well with us, never fear."

Judge Johnson, the great man of the neighborhood, received the paper with some surprise.

"December sixth," he read. "Hum! This is the latest document she has executed. Oh, yes! I remember it very well; I drew it up myself. But why did you bring it here, Friend Decker?"

The old man briefly related the circumstances.

"Old people are apt to be capricious," said he. "Doubtless the trifling matter of the plum sauce pleased her and she sought to reward us. But I should never take advantage of Friend Moses by burning the will."

"But why in the name of common sense should you burn it?" said the judge. "Are you in the habit of having estates left to you every day that you dispose of them so readily?"

"I don't think I quite understand thee, Friend Johnson," said Decker.

But Leah's face brightened like a rose.

"I see! I see!" she cried. "Father, Friend Anastasia has done right, late though it be. She has willed the Lennox farm to thee."

And Leah spoke truly. The dead woman made tardy reparation in her last days, and Friend Decker and his daughter had at last legal possession of what should long ago have been their own. No amount of reasoning or remonstrance had availed, but one of those sudden touches, which, "striking the electric chain wherewith we're darkly bound," sway the soul with disproportionate force, had induced her to perform an act of justice at last, and the jar of wild plums, with its train of associations, had been the most eloquent pleading of all.

In the Tunnel.

On a Colorado road, where tunnels are quite numerous, a charming matron with her little daughter occupied a seat in the coach, and opposite her was a colored nurse and the travelling bags. The mother's sparkling eyes, exuberant health and vivacious spirits attracted the attention of a handsome young man, who occupied a seat just back of the one she was in. By his attention to the child he soon scraped an acquaintance with the mother, and as the day passed was essaying to make himself very agreeable to her.

He was a presumptious man, and thought that he had made an impression; his elation manifested it. The lady, dreaming of no wrong, was apparantely pleased with her casual acquaintance. By-and-by, as the train approached an unusually long tunnel, the gay young man leaned over and whispered something in the lady's ear. For an instant she was thunderstruck, and her eyes flashed with indignation.

A moment more, and a smile lighted up her features. She made him some reply that seemed to please him very much. She chatted with the nurse about several matters, and presently the train reached the tunnel. In a few moments the train came into daylight again, but the mother and nurse had changed seats. The mother looked amazed, the colored nurse was very disconcerted, the young man looked dazed. "Jane," said the mother, "what have you been doing?" "Nothing," responded the nurse. "Yes, you have," said the mother in a tone that attracted the attention of all in the car. "See how your collar's rumpled and your bonnet smashed."

The nurse hung her head for a moment and then, turning round to the nice young man, replied: "This man kissed me while the train was passing through the tunnel." The young man occupied the smoker during the rest of his journey.

Regulating His Expenses.

There is a certain young student at the Boston Institute of Technology whose method of regulating his personal expenditures is so strikingly original as to be worthy of description. Like many another youth of salad age he finds it impossible to refrain from squandering his money. It simply burns a hole in his pocket. So to get over the difficulty he has hit upon the following plan: Upon receiving the check for a fortnight's allowance, intended to cover his living expenses, he first liquidates any indebtedness that may be outstanding to his lodging-house keeper and washerwoman and converts the whole of the balance into fifty cent silver pieces.

Then going to his room and closing the door, he takes the coins by handfuls and scatters them broadcast about the floor. A few of those which remain in plain sight he puts into his pockets. When they are spent he picks up a few more, and so on, as necessity requires. After a week or so has passed he is compelled to hunt about pretty sharply for cash, and the last days of the fortnight find him grubbing under the washstand and bureau, poking beneath the bed, and squinting down the register in the hope of discovering a stray half dollar that had eluded previous search. But, though occasionally impoverished, he is seldom reduced to absolute pennilessness.

Charity Appreciated.

A benevolent old lady who lives in a fashionable London suburb started a soup kitchen on a small scale, with the object of alleviating the distress of which she had read so much. Only eight persons applied for relief. One, a crippled woman, continued as a constant visitor. Four of the applicants did not like soup. Two others did not return with the jugs lent to them. The eighth was a small boy who was punctual in his attendance, and evidently, as believed, appreciated the soup. There was something in his manner that aroused the sympathy of the old lady, so she interrogated him.

He was a crossing street sweeper in a grand square close by. He confessed that his earnings amounted to sixteen shillings (four dollars) a week, while his mother could earn two shillings and sixpence a day by charing. The old lady, who was taken aback, asked, "And do you think you ought to come for soup? With that frankness which is so charming in the small boy, he replied: "Well, no, I don't, and that's a fact, ma'am, but if you'll only give me a penny every time you walk over my crossing you can eat your soup yourself."

Facts not Always Considered.

An exchange says with a good deal of force: "The advertising rates in this paper are very low, but it is absolutely necessary to charge for space occupied for money-making purposes. It is hard to eradicate from some minds the belief that while the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker must be paid in cold cash, the local newspaper can be satisfied with a cold bluff—or a free ticket. We regard a ticket as a request to attend and report—not a substitute for the cold cash which our advertising space demands."

A Lively Funeral.

On a recent Sunday a funeral procession wended its way through South Weymouth and turned into the woods. About two hundred mourners were gathered at a secluded spot among the trees, and the hearse stopped on arriving there. The undertaker lifted out two caskets, and placed them carefully on the ground. Then he lifted the lids and out hopped two game roosters. A rousing cocking main followed, and there was more enthusiam than was seen in any church in South Weymouth for a long time.—Old Colony Memorial.

Independence Day.

The United States is the only country with a known birthday. All the rest began they know not when, and grew into power they know not how. If there had been no independence day, England and America combined would not be so great as each actually is. There is no Republican, no Democrat, on the Fourth of July; all are Americans. All feel that their country is greater than their party.—James G. Blaine.

Another Trip—No. 5.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

After stabling our horses in the log barn we adjourned to the house, which was also built of logs. I made up my mind that it would be no picnic for either of us to stay even for one night in such a place. The house was one story and contained two rooms.

After waiting an hour we had supper. At the table I told the mistress that I liked "considerable milk in my coffee." She struck an attitude, placed her hands on her hips, looked at me as if she never expected to see me again and then replied, "Yeou du? I 'clar to goodness." I didn't get the milk. While we were sitting by the open outside door, the women, without ceremony, retired to bed in the adjacent room. "Pat" didn't need to blush, for that was the color of his face, but with me it was different, and then I am naturally bashful.

After a time we were taken through the room to the back side of the house, invited to climb up six very high steps, crawl through a hole about two feet square close under the eaves, and enter our room. Pat needed just a little forgiveness when he made a mistake in the height of one of the steps and went headlong. I don't think he really meant to say the word, but it was sort of jerked out of him. I didn't blame him much after that supper. We bunked together that night. I took a horizontal position on the back side of the bed, watched the moon and stars as they peeped through the thousand and one holes in the sides and roof of the house, dug mud from between the logs at the side of the bed, and waited for the dawning of the morning.

It came at last and "Pat" and I, after making as brief a toilet as possible, crawled out of the room—or rather backed out—feet foremost through the little door, and down the stairs. The house is in a valley. About us are the "Sour-wood mountains, gloomy enough, but made famous by the negro song, one verse of which runs thus:

"When I go on the mountains, I'll plant me a patch of cane;
I'll make me a jug of 'lasses, and go with
'Liza Jane.

CHORUS.

The dogs won't bite, and the chickens won't crow
In the 'Sour-wood mountains, unless I go with 'Liza Jane."

After breakfast "Bismark" and "Gold-dust" were groomed and quickly mounted, the bills paid and we were off; glad to think that we were "a day's march nearer home." During the forenoon's ride "Pat" took occasion to "warn" several persons to "appear in court next Saturday week." This was done by word of mouth; in one instance when the man was a quarter of a mile away, at work in the field. If we want to "cross lots"—which is often the case—"Pat" dismounts, takes down a section of the "Virginia rail fence" and makes a road to suit our convenience. There is a charming fascination about all this, and a novelty full of richness. To be sure it is not a "downy bed of ease" one finds awaiting him at night; neither does a "Parker House" bill-of-fare greet him at the breakfast table; but it is experience, such as one gets in no other way. It is real life without veneer or varnish, flounces or frills, fuss or feathers, or much dry goods for that matter. How can one eat such food? Well the only way is to carry a commissary department along with you, or "do as the Romans do."

I prefer the latter although the samples, of corn bread and biscuit I secured are anything but attractive or wholesome looking.

For some distance we have been travelling in a highway full of ruts as deep as the hub of a wagon; rocky, crooked, sidling, horrid.

All at once "Pat" dismounts, opens up the "Virginia fence" and we are off up through a valley to the side of a mountain; down across a stream through more fences and gates; fording other streams until at last we arrive at an old mill at the foot of a steep mountain. Can we get up through that narrow ravine between those two high ridges? We can try! We had hardly gone a dozen rods when we came to a large tree lying directly across our path, but was not quite high enough for our horses to go under. "Pat" jumped to the ground, took hold of the bridle, scaled the steep bank and said "come." It was an almost perpendicular climb up into the bushes, but the horse did it. The big tree was jumped successfully and the horse slid down the bank again. "Gold-dust" repeated the operation. Again we mount. A brook of swiftly running, dirty water is beneath our feet, but up we go. At last we leave the gully for the high ridge; out into the clearing; down through an old pasture to a log house where we take dinner.

It is anything but a pleasure to remember some things. "Pat's" appetite, usually good, forsook him. I didn't happen to see what he did and so ate on in a blissful ignorance of anything of a suspicious nature. I felt badly afterwards, when the landlady at the hotel, took the "sample biscuit" I had secured a part of for my lunch, and threw it out of the window. It was the middle of the afternoon when I arrived back to the place we started from thirty-three hours before. "Pat" came in at 10 o'clock in the evening, and our horse back ride of fifty-four miles was completed.

"Buck" returned from his trip to "House and Barn Mountain," half an hour before my arrival. The "sailor" whom we had left behind, and who will play an important part in our next letter, was glad to see us.

To be continued.

Value of Old School Books.

"So you think that old school books have no special value to the book hunter," said a well-posted second hand dealer was heard to remark to one of his customers. "The costliest I can now recall is the New England Primer. It was printed over 100 years ago. It used to be a text book in Sunday schools. Copies of it are worth from $5 to $50, and I heard that $100 has been offered for a copy. There was a facsimile edition of it printed, and many collectors who think they have an original are giving shelf room to a counterfeit.

"Pike's Arithmetic is another one of the rarities. The author wanted permission to dedicate it to George Washington, but he would not lend his name to so paltry an object. Webster's spelling book, the one with the original story of 'Poor Dog Tray' in it, sold for a shilling once. Collectors now gladly pay down $3 a piece for them, they are hard to get at that figure."

CITY COUNCIL.

The special meeting of the Council, Thursday evening, to take action on the water bill, now in the hands of the Legislative Committee, called forth a lively discussion on the part of members of the Council and the citizens present, which was prolonged so late that no action was taken and the matter was finally left to be decided at the regular meeting of the Council next Monday evening.

Councilman Newcomb offered the following preamble and resolves:

WHEREAS,—After a fair and impartial hearing before the Committee on Water Supply of the General Court, a bill granting to the City of Quincy a right to take and supply water to the inhabitants of said city, independent from the Quincy Water company, was presented by the committee representing the city through its Council, and

WHEREAS,—Certain amendments to said bill have been proposed, requiring the City of Quincy to first purchase the property and rights of the Quincy Water company before exercising any of the provisions of said bill, which said amendments entirely change the intent and purpose of the bill offered by your committee, it is hereby

Resolved,—That the City Council of Quincy, at a special meeting duly called for the purpose of considering said amendments, are of the opinion that said amendments should not be made to said bill, and that the bill as presented be adhered to without the amendments requiring said city to purchase the rights and property of the Quincy Water company, and it is further

Resolved,—That the clerk of the Council forward at once to the senator and representatives from this district a copy of these resolves.

After a long discussion on the above resolutions the Council adjourned at 11.10.

May Festival.

The annual May festival of the Fragment society, connected with the First church, opened in the chapel Thursday afternoon and was attended by a good sized audience.

On both sides of the room was tables for the sale of useful and fancy articles, cake and ice cream, the table on the left of the entrance being for aprons and fancy articles, this was presided over by Mrs. T. A. Whicher, who was assisted by Mrs. Thomas Fenno, Mrs. George Keys and Mrs. John Shaw.

Opposite was the candy table in charge of Mrs. James H. Stetson, assisted by Mrs. Wilson Tisdale, Mrs. Joseph Morse and Miss Alice Emery.

At the loaf cake table Mrs. Samuel Crane was in charge, and the ice cream was dispensed by Mrs. E. G. Pratt, Mrs. E. W. Henry Bass and Miss Jennie Draper.

The entertainment in the afternoon was by Prof. Clare, Quincy's prestidigitator, who amused the audience between the hours of 4.30 and 5. Then came tea which was served until 8. This department was in charge of Mrs. Eben Stanwood and Mrs. J. Frank Faxon. Tea was poured by Miss Fannie Manson, and coffee by Miss Bessie Pratt. The other waitresses were Miss Caroline Faxon, Miss Ellen R. Dewson, Miss May Rice, Miss Georgie Lane, Miss Abbie Wood, Miss Mary Holden, Miss Carrie Hatch, Miss Emma Newcomb, Miss Maria Whitney, Miss Mabel Shaw, Miss Georgiana Field and Miss Minnie Rogers.

Universalist Kirmes.

The attendance on second day of the Kirmes at the Universalist vestry, was even better than on the previous day. Supper was served to a large number, and when the entertainment commenced the vestry was full. It was in charge of Mr. Herbert Fay Nye, and the artists were Miss Minnie Litchfield, reader; Miss Lillian Atwood, soprano soloist: Miss Alice Gould and Miss Penniman, piano duets; Mr. Walter Loud, violinist; Mr. J. Harvey Page, baritone soloist; Mr. Nye, accompanist; and Mr. Walter Loud, Mr. Willie Draper, Mr. Arthur Hall and Mr. Harvey Field, violin quartette.

The audience was very much pleased with the entertainment prepared for them and were profuse in their applause. All the talent kindly responded to an encore, making quite a lengthy programme. Miss Litchfield received her usual warm greeting, and gave two extra readings. Miss Atwood's singing was much enjoyed and her selections pleasing. The violin solos by Mr. Walter Loud, were up to his usual high standard, and he was a great favorite with the audience. Praise was heard on every hand of the quartette of violin players, and the young men may well feel proud of their success. Mr. J. Harvey Page sang a baritone solo in his usual pleasing style, and he and Mr. Nye also sang a duet, which closed the evening's entertainment.

The sale booths were bountifully spread and well patronized, as was the ice cream and cake.

On the whole we think the fair was a success in every way, and we hope the ladies have reaped a good harvest for their cash box.

Huntington, vice-president of the Nationalist Club of Boston, on Social and Industrial Transition. BIRTHDAY PARTY. Some thirty, or thereabouts, of the friends of Miss Lottie Spear, met at her father's residence on Franklin street Thursday evening, to enjoy a few hours pleasantly with that young lady who had just reached the 21st milestone of her journey through life. Miss Spear was the recipient of some valuable and handsome presents, among which was a beautiful etching from Wollaston friends, a handsome book-case from her aunt, Miss Lottie Mitchell, some valuable books from her mother, and her father celebrated the event with a generous sum of money. The evening was very pleasantly spent by the young people, they being entertained with vocal and instrumental music, and pleasant games. A spread of cake and ice cream was then enjoyed, and at the conclusion of the repast, a renewal of the evening's enjoyments was entered into until the speeding hours reminded the company of the near approach of another day when the young folks bade their hostess a fond adieu, and with best wishes for many happy birthdays to come, they took their departure.

In compliance with the laws of our order, our established custom, and general orders from headquarters, the comrades of this Post will observe Saturday, the thirtieth day of May, as Memorial day.

Comrades, let us observe Memorial day with reverence and thoughtfulness. Let us bring our fairest blossoms, and with tenderest and most loving thoughts place them upon the graves of our departed comrades. See that not a single comrade's grave be forgotten. Let the flag they so dearly loved wave over each. Swedish St. Paul Church.

Rev. Charles Paulson, the new pastor of the Swedish St. Paul's church, formerly of Bridgeport, Conn., occupied the pulpit Sunday for the first time. Following is an abstract of his sermon:

John 6: 28—"What must we do that we may work the works of God." We are all before interrogation today. I for you and you for me. You know your former pastor who was with you for three years. He did a good work among you. And I, during my five years' pastorate in Bridgeport, had occasion to be familiar with the people there. But in accordance with the laws of the Methodist Episcopal church are we now united without any former acquaintance. It is with the Methodist preachers and churches as it is with young people in the eastern countries, they are often united in marriage by their parents without any former introduction to one another. How will it be here, I hear some say: "Shall we gain or lose by this change?" The future will tell. But our common question today and henceforth should be: "What must we do that we may work the works of God?" Our Lord has something for each of us to do. And if we obey His command, our lives will be happy ones.

The works of God are opposite the works of the devil. Satan has many workers but he wants more. His works are to turn people from God. But we as God's servants must do our best to bring men to Christ. I am here to help you my dear countrymen in this our Master's work and hope that we together may be able to do something for Him who has done so much for us.

City Hospital Report.

The trustees of the City Hospital have issued the first annual report in pamphlet form which contains much interesting information and statistics. The frontispiece is a new view of the hospital, which is, we think, the finest ever presented. Then there is a plan of the hospital when completed, showing the second wing. The act of incorporation and amendment thereto, are printed in full; also the deed of the property by Mr. William B. Rice to the corporation, and a list of the members of the corporation. The addresses at the dedicatory service appear in full. There is a financial exhibit of the current account and endowment fund, medical statistics, occupation of patients, by-laws and rules, donations and report of the Hospital Aid Association. It all makes a book of seventy pages.

—June 9 will be memorial day among the Odd Fellows.

The Willard school building has been washed on the outside which has greatly improved its appearance. The window frames are all in place, and it is expected that by Saturday night the sashes will have been put in.

Another Fire.

Just as the citizens were becoming tranquil after the incendiary fires of a week ago, they were aroused last Tuesday by an alarm from Box 23, and once more the Durgin & Merrill block was the scene. Smoke was first discovered in J.F.Merrill's grocery, but it was some minutes before the fire was located, and meanwhile at 8.05 an alarm was pulled in. The fire department responded unusually prompt, but the blaze was an incipient one in the boiler room and was easily extinguished by the use of one of the Edison hand extinguishers.

The fire had started on the upper side of a timber which runs below the floor timbers. It is directly above a large steam pipe, perhaps six or eight inches, but Chief Engineer Ripley and others who have investigated the fire, think it would have been impossible for it to have caught, and do not hesitate to pronounce it as incendiary.

Favorable to New Building.

A special meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening, all members, with the exception of Dr. J. A. Gordon being present.

The special business to come before the committee was the matter of better school accommodations for Ward Three.

Messrs. Claflin, Crane and Keith the sub-committee appointed at the regular meeting reported that there are at present accommodated in the John Hancock building 522 pupils and as there are but eight rooms in the building there are over sixty-five pupils to a room, which is too many, and the number of school children in this section is rapidly increasing which shows the need of better facilities.

The commitee after some discussion determined to suggest to the City Council the following two plans:

First,—that an addition of four rooms be made to the John Hancock building, and the bonding or purchasing of a lot of land on the Plains, with the idea of erecting a building there at some future time.

Second,—that a building of not less than eight rooms be erected on the Plains immediately.

The idea of these two plans is to impress upon the Council the great need of more school room, and to have them take immediate action.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Roach, Cotton and Sheahan was appointed to consider the matter of instruction in technical grammar in the schools.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, May 13, 1891.

The division of the State into congressional districts was reported in the House Thursday forenoon and it is a thorough shakeup from the present arrangement. In the first place the numbering begins at the west, instead of the east. The western district is number one, instead of number twelve; the Cape Cod district is number thirteen, instead of number one. The first district takes all west of the Connecticut river, except Northampton and Easthampton. District number two also extends across the whole breadth of the State and the eastern line of towns is Winchendon, Templeton, Barre, Oakham, North Brookfield, Brookfield, Brimfield and Holland. District number three takes southern Worcester, except Milford and Hopedale, and includes Hopkinton in Middlesex. District number four takes northern Worcester, except what is number two, and a great share of Middlesex. Number five takes Lowell and Lawrence. Number 6 is Cape Ann and adjacent ports. Lynn, Malden and Chelsea are the largest places in number seven (which includes Congressman Lodge and Speaker Barrett). Cambridge, Somerville, and part of Boston make most of number eight. Nine is in the heavy Democratic wards of Boston. Ten takes South Boston, the Dorchester and Roxbury wards and Milton and Quincy. Number eleven extends from Belmont to Milford and North Attleboro. Number twelve takes eastern Norfolk, northern Bristol and nearly all Plymouth county. Number thirteen cuts straight across the State south of Plymouth (town), Middleboro and Dighton. On the presidential vote of 1888 all the districts are Republican but two. On the congressional vote of 1890 the Republicans carried numbers two, three, four, six, seven, twelve and thirteen, and the Democrats numbers one, five, eight, nine, ten and eleven. But that was a phenomenal vote and there are really only two sure Democratic districts. However, they have strong hopes of others and so accept the bill.

The House this forenoon passed to be engrossed the bill to incorporate the Quincy electric freight railway. Mr. Quincy of Quincy had it amended so that the location of the tracks shall be under the direction of the City Council of Quincy. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The fight over the Quincy water bill is still brewing and the committee will take up the matter on Friday. They stand five to five, the Senate chairman, Mr. Bradley of Essex, not having declared himself. The delay is due to the recommittal in consequence of the slight alteration made after the committee acted upon the bill. That alteration was made by Mr. Quincy and was supposed to be acceptable to the dissenters on the committee. Mr. Burke of Quincy saw personally every member of the committee and procured his agreement to the change, so far as he was personally interested, with the exception of Mr. Johnson of Haverhill, who was absent on the day when the change was made. Everything was done fairly and honorably, so far as the change in the bill was concerned, and there was no intention of putting anything through without the full knowledge of every member of the committee. It will be seen from the position of the committee how utterly impossible it will be to foretell the result when the matter gets into the House and Senate, whether the city of Quincy or the Quincy Water Company will carry the day.

The Senate on Thursday passed to be engrossed the Donovan bill to repeal the prohibition of a public bar, which has also in it a provision to save it from being defeated on the point of order that it had been acted upon before. In the course of the debate Senator Champlin of Suffolk, a Republican, stated that the liquor dealers spent $50,000 last fall to elect senators and representatives who would vote to repeal the public bar law. The vote for the engrossment of the bill was 21 to 12. The twelve were all Republicans and the twenty-one were all Democrats but three.

Senator Donovan, from whom the above bill is named the Donovan bill, moved a bill to repeal the law which permits owners of property within twenty-five feet of where it is proposed to exercise a liquor license to enter an effective objection. He said it caused blackmail. This was denied and his bill was rejected 12 to 18. The twelve were all Democrats and two Democrats—Eaton and Thayer—voted with the Republicans.

The Senate also passed on Thursday to be engrossed the bill to enable cities and towns to make and sell gas and electric light. The Nationalists say they have won a great victory in support of the Bellamy doctrine, but considering the provisions of the bill, one of the senators charged the Nationalist leaders to their face of being in league with the present gas and electric light companies. Doubtless they are not, and yet the bill amply protects present property.

The Senate on Friday passed to be engrossed the House bill to stop fraudulent foreign corporations of Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey and West Virginia from doing business in this State unless they comply with certain regulations so that their standing can be known. It is the bill over which the great fight occurred in the House, but with the objectionable part removed.

The House passed to be engrossed the bill to limit the height of buildings in cities to 125 feet. Mr. Ladd of Boston was against it because it would stop building enterprise and because it was in the interest of real estate speculators who wanted Boston to struggle out horizontally, rather than grow upward. But almost nobody in the House agreed with him.

Friday afternoon the House came to its first vote on the doomage bill. This is the outcome of the work of the Equal Taxation League, of the stand taken by the State Board of Agriculture and of the work of the granges. It requires complete lists of personal property to be made and sworn to by every taxpayer to the assessors. If the person neglects to do this or to answer questions to enable the assessors to find out all his personal property, he is to be taxed for double the amount they put down to him and there can be no abatement unless he can show that he was not at fault in not returning the full amount of personal property. The bill was very bitterly opposed, but the House voted for it, 107 to 59.

The great fight in the House over the assessment endowment orders came on Monday, the issue being whether companies of other states should be permitted to continue on the same terms as those of Massachusetts. The insurance commissioner, the insurance committee and the home companies which wanted the field to themselves were against the foreign companies and the bill was reported to that effect. On the floor of the House the contention was that many of our people have gone into these foreign corporations and that they are just as sound as the Massachusetts Corporation. But it was to be noticed that only one member said a good word for the system and even he did not believe it is being honestly administered in this State. The vote was very close, there being 91 in favor of foreign companies to 95 against, and the bill was then passed to be engrossed. It has to go to the Senate.

The Senate bill for a general law for municipal control of gas and electric lighting has been ordered to a third reading in the House without debate and assigned to Monday next. Mr. Murray of Fitchburg will lead against it. Speaker Barrett is interested in its favor.

The Senate bill to repeal the law against the public bar, has been assigned by the House to next Tuesday and a great contest s expected.

Last year's effort was renewed by Mr. Kittredge of Boston, for the passage of a law to forbid the use of dangerous fireworks in public streets and many harrowing tales were told to show how life, limb and property are destroyed by explosives, but on the other side was Fourth of July patriotism, and the American small boy with his firecracker, and the bill was killed by a small adverse majority.

The House engrossed the bill to raise the compulsory school age to 15 years, but only after amending it so as to apply to cities and towns which furnish industrial education.

The power of the railroads over the Legislature was shown by the action of the House on the bill to change the grade crossing law, so that the grade of railroads may be altered without the consent of the directors. On two stages, after debate, the House had stood by the bill by good majorities, but on the final stage the vote on passing it was, 86 yeas to 99 nays.

An amendment ought to be made to the lobby law to provide some means for instituting proceedings against the members of the third house who defy it and do not register. Some of them are registered and are trying to live up to the law, but others take advantage of the fact that there is nobody to begin proceedings and flourish unchecked thus far.

Neponset.

John Hurley a blacksmith at Neponset, dropped dead Monday evening on his way from work. Hemorrhage of the lungs and the bursting of a blood vessel was the cause. He leaves a widow and a large family of children.

Whitmarsh-Loring.

A home wedding took place in Neponset last evening, when Rev. G. H. Hosmer of the church of the Unity married Mr. W. P. Whitmarsh, son of Mr. W. W. Whitmarsh of the Putnam Nail Company, and Miss Kittie F. Loring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Loring.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. Loring, the ceremony was very simple.

The bride was attired in a gray travelling dress, and after a brief reception of guests the young couple started on an extended tour through the South and West, after which they will reside in their new home in Quincy.—Globe.

Be Careful What You Say.

In speaking of a person's faults,
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember those in houses glass
Should never throw a stone.
If you had nothing else to do
But talk of those who sin,
'Tis better to commence at home,
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide.
Some may have faults-and who has not?
The old as well as young;
We may perhaps, for ought we know,
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you of a better plan,
And find it works full well;
To try my own defects to cure,
Ere I of others tell;
And though I sometimes hope to be
No worse than some I know,
My own shortcomings bid me let
The faults of others go.

Then let us all when we commence
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word may do
To those we little know.
Remember curses, sometimes like
Our chickens, "roost at home;"
Don't speak of others' faults until
We have none of our own.

Household Receipts.

BANANA CUSTARD. Beat three eggs, add a pinch of salt and three tablespoonsful of sugar; heat one pint of milk boiling in a double boiler, and stir in the egg preparation until it thickens. Peel and slice four bananas; sprinkle over them one tablespoonful of sugar and one of cold water. Pour over it the custard and set in a cold place. Serve cold.

LEMON JELLY. Soak one-half package of gelatine in one large cup of cold water for one hour. Stir into this one cup of sugar, the juice of two lemons and the grated peel of one and add two cups of boiling water. Strain without squeezing into a wet mould.

ORANGE SHORTCAKE. Make a shortcake of a quart of flour and two teaspoonsful of baking powder wet with sweet milk, and half a cup of shortening (butter is best). Roll rather thin and bake in two round tins.

LEMON FRITTERS. Sift a half pound of flour into a tablespoonful of baking powder beat the yolks of five eggs, add to the flour with a teacupful of milk. Beat the whites of five eggs with a quarter of a pound of sugar and the juice of two lemons. Drop in boiling lard a spoonful at a time. Serve with powdered sugar.

BREAKFAST FRITTERS. Beat two eggs very light with half a pint of milk, one teaspoonful of salt and two cupfuls of flour, with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat well and drop a spoonful at a time in boiling lard. Serve with maple syrup.

CREAM FRITTERS. Sift one and one-half pints of flour, add one pint of milk, six eggs, one teaspoonful each of baking powder and salt, beat well and add a teacupful of cream. Drop a spoonful at a time in boiling fat. Sprinkle with white sugar.

Keeping Lamp Burners Clean.

The other day a lady noted for her attainments in housekeeping showed me me some lamp burners that had been used for many months, yet were as bright as if just purchased. In response to my inquiries as to the means used for keeping them so bright, she told me that when she baked beans she saved the water in which they were boiled, and put the burners in that, boiling them until clean; then they were rinsed in boiling water and dried.

THE PRECOCIOUS BUFFALO BOY.—A true story of precocious juvenility was told over a Buffalo dinner table the other day. The hero of the tale was a small boy named Paul, and he wore beautiful yellow curls—much against his will, be it said. But Paul's mother had seen "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Paul was walking on the street with his maid when a lady came up behind him, and seeing the beautiful curls, said: "What pretty curls! You must be very proud of them."

"No, I'm not," was the discontented reply; "mamma thinks they make me look like those damned cherubs."—Buffalo Express.

HE COMPREHENDED. A young man of this city who prides himself on his musical talent, called on a young lady, taking with him a banjo for which he had just paid a good price. "It won't work," he remarked mournfully, as he handed it to her. "Perhaps you can get some out of it." "Its n. g.," she said, as she twanged the strings, it needs a flat and sharp to make it go." "They were both there when I bought it," he answered humbly.

☞ The largest kitchen in the world is in the Bon Marche in Paris. It has 4000 employes. The smallest kettle contains 100 quarts and the largest 500. Each of fifty roasting pans is big enough for 300 cutlets. Every dish for baking potatoes holds 225 pounds. When omelettes are on the bill of fare 7,800 eggs are used at once. For cooking alone sixty cooks and 100 assistants are always at the ranges.

Anecdotes.

Irate Citizen—"Look a-here, mister! You are taking my umbrella."

Sleek Citizen—"I beg your pardon, sir! I thought it was somebody else's."

He—"I don't think the world is exactly fair to men."

She—"Why not?"

He—"Well, the man who has a head, for instance, get ahead, while the man who hasn't one doesn't."

Mamma—"You naughty girl! You've eaten every cookie there was on the plate. I told you, you might have three."

Little Edith—"Yes, but you didn't tell me which three. So I had to eat all to be sure to get the right ones."

"By Jove, old man, that is a nice crocheted necktie you have on!"

"No such thing; it's simply an ordinary black silk one."

"Well, that's crow-shade, isn't it?"

A gentleman, coming home at evening, spoke harshly to his little three-year-old, who was playing very noisily.

The little lady dropped her playthings and retreated hastily to a corner.

"What's the matter?" asked papa.

"Well," said the child, "I've been a good girl all this day, and now you come home and make trouble the first thing."

"Oh, look at those big waves," said the girl at the seashore. "Those are breakers, aren't they, pa?"

"Yes," said the old gentleman as he gazed at the hotel bill, "they are breakers."

Boston Amusements.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The famous Austin Daly Company comes to the Hollis, Monday, May 18th, to play a three weeks' engagement, prior to sailing for London for their summer season. It is said John Drew will leave the company next season so the present engagement is of unusual attractive. "The Last Word" is announced for the first week and it is a play in which the special favorite, Miss Rehan has a particularly charming part. The first half of the second week "The School for Scandal" will be given, and "Taming of the Shrew," the remainder of the week. The attraction for the third week will be announced later. The sale of tickets is very large up to date and tickets must be secured ahead to get good seats.

Tremont.

The new play of "Judah" presents Mr. Willard in a very different light from that of "Middleman," for as Judah Llevellyn he appears to be in the first flush of manhood. The play developes a powerful love story. The heroine is a young girl who has become famous for a miraculous gift of healing the sick through faith and fasting. Lord Asgarby has a daughter who is ill and the girl is brought to the castle in the belief that she can save the earl's daughter. The handsome Welsh minister of the town is deeply impressed with the healer's saintlike character. Her scheming father excites the suspicion of a local professor who presently challenges the fasting girl to bear the test of seclusion and watching. Out of fear of her father and love for the young minister the girl accepts a trying ordeal, which gives to the story its romance and dramatic effect. There are in this comedy elements that are very taking, notably certain love scenes between two young people who regulate their courtship on scientific lines; and also in the contest of wit and cunning between the London professor and the father of the girl. "Judah" is a play to see; its success in London and the English provinces has been of the very greatest. Next week is the third and last of Mr. Willard's engagement.

Boston Museum.

"Hands Across the Sea" will be presented at the Museum for only six more performances, Saturday night May 23 being given up to Miss O'Leary for her benefit when she will play in the famous "Octoroon." This closes the regular dramatic season at the Museum. The summer season will begin May 25th Kellar, the magician being the attraction.

Boston Theatre.

Today sees the last performance of "The Soudan" at the Boston Theatre being given this afternoon and evening as usual. Monday the 18th a new comedy drama The Wolves of New York, will be presented with new and elaborate scenery. The play is full of fun and sure to please the public.

He Threw the Best Hat Away.

I heard of an amusing little affair today. A son of a friend of mine desired to purchase a cheap new hat to wear about the store where he is employed, and he and his father started out to make the purchase. Previous to their departure, Jim, the boy, concluded to wear his "Sunday-go-to-meetin'" hat, an almost new four dollar tile, and, unknown to the father, he put it on, told his father he was ready, and off they went in search of a new head covering. It did not take long to make the purchase. A two dollar hat was selected. Jim told his father that he would go down town a while, and asked his father to take home his old hat, which had been tucked away in a paper bag.

The father started home with the bag, and while on the way concluded it would be useless to carry the "rusty" thing further, so he quietly laid it down on the pavement and moved on. A gentleman and lady came along soon after, picked up the bag, advanced to a gaslight hard by, examined the contents, became satisfied it was a good find and went on their way rejoicing. The father went on home, told his wife that Jim had bought a two dollar hat, and that he had thrown his old hat away. "Thrown the old hat away!" exclaimed his wife. "Why, that was his Sunday-go-to-meetin' best. Here is the old hat."—Louisville Post.

Ice and Flowers.

The fields of flowers skirting the forests surpass in rank luxuriance and in brilliancy of color anything of the kind it has been my fortune to see elsewhere. On the terraces and slopes of the mountains projecting into the Malaspina glacier one may walk for miles through flowery meadows, shoulder deep in a sea of bloom. No daisy meadow in New England is more thickly carpeted with blossoms than these remote, unexplored gardens of southern Alaska. Winter and summer lovely verdure and icy desolation are here side by side. One may stand on the border of an ice field miles in breadth and pluck as beautiful a garden of flowers and ferns as ever graced a May festival.

A few hundred feet above the timber line it is always winter. Near the lower limit of the summer's snow there are occasional summer slopes so situated as not to be swept by avalanches, which are covered with a dense plush of brilliant Alpine blossoms, and form a most pleasing contrast to the sparkling cliffs of snow and ice surrounding them. In the higher mountains there is absolutely no vegetation. Even the tints of lichens and mosses are absent from the precipices, and all the less rugged slopes are buried beneath snow and ice.—Israel C. Russell in Century.

Teachings of Science.

The liquor, which for a time relieved his agony, at length fails to do so, unless carried to the extent of stupification and approaching unconsciousness. This quantity is therefore taken and this increasing indulgence, if it does not induce sooner some form of disease, brings him to the fourth and extreme stage of habitual drunkenness, which, though it is sometimes endured for a considerable period, usually results in death. Besides rendering other diseases and accidents much more severe and fatal, this excessive drinking produces several particular diseases of the brain and nervous system. The one best known to persons not of the medical profession, because of the striking character of the symptoms, is delirium tremens. In this terrible disease the brain becomes so affected by the alcoholic poison that all its functions, physical and mental are performed in the irregular and fearfully perverted manner. There is usually a premonitory stage in which the patient is restless, wakeful and apprehensive of some violence, misfortune or calamity.

When attempting to sleep he is awakened with frightful dreams, which are so vivid as to appear to be realities for a time after awakening. These and other symptoms may cause the patient to stop his drink, but too late to prevent its effects. In other cases, quite as numerous, the premonitory symptoms are less regarded, and the full development of the disease comes on in the midst of gross indulgence in drink; but the phenomena in either case are similar. The face now becomes paler, the surface is covered with a profuse sweat, there is trembling in every muscle, the patient looks wildly about him, seeing in his delusions frightful objects in every quarter; and though his pulse is weak and fluttering and his whole appearance indicates great debility, he still moves about restlessly and often actively, and he frequently exerts himself violently to escape from imaginary enemies. His whole mental functions are perverted even more than his bodily ones. The most characteristic mental condition is fear, which is always present. His ever present hallucinations, or morbid imagining of sight, sound and feeling are of a frightful character. He think he is pursued by "a man with a red hot poker," that "snakes are in his boots," that disgusting bugs are crawling over him, that great bats are flapping their skinny wings in his face, that vampires are sucking his blood, or that demons are about to seize him, and he cries and struggles in mortal agony. He may make a fatal leap from a high window, or, escaping from his room, may run half naked through the streets. No condition of horrors or mental suffering can exceed this state. The ancient idea of Gorgons and Furies must have been derived from experiencing or witnessing this disease, which occasionally occurred among the wine-bibbers of the time.

Punctuality.

When eight Quaker ladies had an appointment, and seven were punctual, and the eighth, being three minutes too late, began apologizing for keeping the others waiting, the reply from one of them was:

"I am sorry, friend, that thee should have wasted thine own three minutes; but thee had no right to waste twenty-one more of our time, which was not thine own."

Of Washington it is said that when his secretary, on some important occasion, was late, and excused himself by saying his watch was too slow, the reply was:—

"You will have to get another watch or I another secretary."

Napoleon used to say to his marshals:—

"You may ask anything of me but time."

DIVORCE SUITS BREWING. A few weeks ago, Deacon Snodgrass said, in a trembling voice, to the bewitching Mrs. Snowball, who was boiling soap:

"Lubly woman! Jess lemme taste dose lubly lips, I only wants to finds out ef dey has as much flop as my wife's lips."

"Ef dat's all yer wants to know, jess ax my husband. He's allers a-kissin yer wife's mouf. I reckon he oughter know," replied Mrs. Snowball.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

ANNIE O'BRIEN.

The Connaught Castle had arrived in New York. The cabin passengers had gone ashore. The steerage people were being carried away by their friends or by the boarding house keepers who always lie in wait for them. Those yet uncalled for sat about the decks. Wistful eyes turned shoreward, anxious to see a familiar face and form among all those strange ones.

Pat Nolan had come aboard in all his bravery—a new blue coat flung open, that it might not conceal the shining watch chain dangling from his vest pocket, his hat tipped to one side in true Connaught fashion, with a mighty show of white collar and cuffs and blue necktie, and his boots for once polished by an "Eyetalian." He threw his shoulders back and looked his best, for "didn't he come aboard to bring his sweetheart Annie O'Brien, home, and wasn't she the purtiest girl in ten counties, and hadn't she crossed the ocean for his sake?"

Pat felt as though every one who saw him must know his business there.

Standing still he looked about him, expecting to see his little Annie somewhere not far.

"Sure, an' wouldn't she be as anxious to mate him as he would be to mate her?" But strange to say he could not see her.

He was a little late, for there had been a delay of the train in which he came down from the place where he was working as coachman and gardner. But surely Annie would never have gone ashore without him. He walked about for full ten minutes, looking everywhere, but still missing the face he wanted.

Every now and then a gay ribbon or a bright coil of hair would make his heart dance, but it was never Annie's hair or Annie's bonnet. At last he made up his mind that she had gone ashore; but in that case she had left word for him, of course—word where she had betaken herself.

"I beg pardon, sir," he said, stepping up to a man who wore a gold band upon his cap, and was presumably an officer—"I beg pardon, sir, but I'm Pat Nolan. Is there a bit of a message left for me, do you know, sir?"

"Not that I am aware," the officer replied.

"It was Annie O'Brien," said Pat. "She came over on this steamer; she expected me to mate her. We're to be married, you know, sir, and she'd lave word where she is gone—Annie O'Brien."

The officer turned a curious, startled gaze upon him.

"Annie O'Brien," he repeated. "A steerage passenger?"

"In coorse, sir," said Pat. "She's comin' over to marry me, and she's a workin' girl. We're naythe iv us rich."

The officer looked at him again.

"I know the name," he said.

"You couldn't help noticing the girl," said Pat. "She's a purty crayther, is Annie, wid eyes like the sky and golden hair, and a waist ye would span wid yer two hands—barrin' she would permit ye to do it—and a foot light as a bird's upon the floor. A little jewel is my Annie. You'd not fail to notice her."

"Sit down a moment, Mr. Nolan," said the officer. "I will make some inquiries. Wait here for me."

"A mighty polite gentleman, though he's as solemn as a funeral," said Pat to himself. "I hope he'll not delay long. I'm wild to see Annie. Oh, the divil fly away wid the cars that kept me from her! I wonder is she cryin' her eyes out for not seein' me? It was what she had a right to expect—the first one aboard."

The officer was returning.

He looked more serious than ever.

"Mr. Nolan," he said gravely, "the captain would like to speak to you. I will take you to him. We have had a very stormy voyage, as winter voyages often are."

"But you've come into port on as pleasant a day as there is in the calendar," Pat said cheerfully. "A Christmas couldn't be brighter."

"But we have had a very unpleasant voyage," said the officer gravely.

He opened the door of the captain's cabin. Pat entered with his hat in his hand.

The captain, a grave, bronzed man, with iron gray hair, sat at a table before an open book, on which his hand lay.

"Sit down," he said.

"Thank you, sir. It's as easy standing," said Pat, with a bow.

"You had better sit down," said the captain. "I may have to talk to you for some minutes. I have something very particular to say if you are the right man. Your name is"——

"Pat Nolan," said Pat, beginning to feel astonished, but then perhaps the captain, knowing he was to be married that evening, wanted to congratulate him, to offer him a glass of something, or perhaps it was the way of the captains of ocean steamers to be slow and solemn, not thinking how he kept people from their sweethearts. So Pat sat down, put his hat on the floor, and not knowing just what to do cracked all his knucles one after the other as he waited.

"Your name is Patrick Nolan," said the captain again, "and you came on board to find a young woman—a friend of yours?"

"My sweetheart promised to me. We are to be married today," said Pat.

"If God wills it," said the captain.

"Ay, sir; we can do nothing widout that I well know," said Pat. "The good Lord above and Father Dunn will help me; but I'll do the best I can to furder it myself."

The captain looked down upon the pages of the book before him.

"And the name of the young girl you are asking for?" he said.

"Annie O'Brien," said Pat, beginning to think the captain very stupid—"Annie O'Brien. She's the Widdy O'Brien's daughter—a dacent woman is the widdy, and well respected. They are neighbors there at home in the ould counthry."

The captain ran his finger down a long column of names, and stopped at last and looked at Pat again.

"We had a very unpleasant voyage," he said slowly—"a very, very unpleasant voyage."

"The other gentleman was telling me that, sir," said Pat, wishing that this old gentlemen would stop talking about the weather and tell him something about Annie. "Bad weather must be a threat on the say," he said, in order to be polite. "And wid all thim passengers to be watchin' and carin' fer—worse than a stableful of bastes!"

"Yes," said the captain, "we try to care for our passengers, but the steerage is a little crowded. They are often very sick."

"Yes, sir. I was that sick myself I thought I'd be dyin' said Pat.

"Some are severely ill," said the captain.

This time Pat made no answer, but stared at him with a hot flush rising to his face.

"Sometimes they are so very ill that they die," the captain went on. "Delicate women, you know—little children and delicate women."

Pat still looked at him in silence.

"When I said that we had a very unpleasant voyage I meant," said the captain, "that we had serious illness—that we had death on board. Two steerage passengers died. One was William O'Rourke, an old man coming over to live with his son."

"God rest his soul!" said Pat, crossing his forehead.

"The other, who was very ill, was a woman," said the captain, "a young woman, and very pretty. Mr. Nolan, we have to prepare for storms in this life—we have to brace up and bear them as well as we can. They are very hard to bear. At my age that goes without saying; but you are young and full of hope. I am very sorry to say that I am afraid you are about to suffer a terrible shock. It is a painful task to tell you. Brace up my lad. The other passenger was a young woman, and her name, as we have it written here, was Annie O'Brien."

All the color had gone out of Pat's face by this time. It was white, lips and all. He dropped his arms on the table and hid his face on them, and great sobs shook his frame.

The captain wiped the tears from his own eyes.

"Talk does no good," he said. "Time only can comfort you."

"It seems as if I could not believe it, captain," Pat cried, lifting his tear swollen face. "Annie—my little Annie! Are ye sure it was Annie?"

"There was but one Annie O'Brien on our list," said the captain. "She gave her name just before she breathed her last. The only steerage passenger of the name of O'Brien died on the voyage of a fever. The doctor cared for her as well as he knew how. The women nursed her kindly. We buried her at sea, and the burial service was said by a Catholic clergyman who was on board. You might like to know that, so I tell you."

"My Annie—my Annie at the bottom of the say!" moaned poor Nolan. "An' I'll niver see her again; niver kiss her red lips; niver feel her two arms about me neck! Ah, Annie, I won't live after you—I won't live after you! Life is too hard to bear wid that to think of. It's turned me to a woman, sir, I'm thinkin'; but it's the worst blow I iver had in me loife".

There was a knock at the door just then. Pat hid his tear stained face again.

"No admittance just now," cried the captain.

"I didn't mane to come in plase, sir," said a sweet voice, "but I'd like to spake to ye, captain, af ye'll let me. I'm waitin' this long time till me frind comes aboord to bring me home, and I'm gettin' anxious, fearin' something has happened him. What will I do, sir? I know no one in Americay. Perhaps he might be on boord and me not know it. He'd be askin' for Annie O'Brien, and he'd bé Pat Nolan, that I'm promised to. Would ye"—

But the captain had flung wide the door, and Pat was on his feet, and with a roar like that of a buffalo had flung his arms about her.

"Glory be to God and all the saints!" he cried. "You're not dead at all! You're alive! I've got you safe and sound! They've been tellin' me you were dead. God help the man that put the thrick on me, for I'll lave but the bones av him!"

"Quiet, there!" shouted the captain. "Down with your fists, or I'll put you in irons! What did you mean by asking for Annie O'Brien, a steerage passenger, when you wanted Annie Bailey, a first cabin passenger? That is the girl that stands there. That is the name she gave us—Annie Bailey."

"Captain, dear," cried Annie, clutching her Pat by the coat tails, "captain, darlin' Pat niver knew—he did not. Since writin' him, my mother—a widdy—married again wid Mr. Peter Bailey, that kapes a foine tavern in our town. So long as I was goin' from her, and he proposin' to her, why wouldn't she? And he, havin' money to spare, said I should come like a lady, and paid me passage in the foinest place; and out iv compliment to him—being my mother's husband and so generous to me—I sailed as Annie Bailey. That is the way it was, captain; and indade all the throuble arose from it—for I wanted Pat to find me sated in the illigant saloon, and remained there waitin' for him."

"You excuse me, sir," said Pat, bowing low, "on account of what I've been through."

"All right, my man," the captain answered; and then Pat threw his arm about his Annie and led her away, the happiest fellow alive.

She Believed in Her Father.

One of Beverly's pastors has a six-year-old daughter who evidently believes in her father. Her desire to attend a Sunday-evening service at which her father was to preach did not seem to receive parental approbation. She hung her head for a moment with disappointment, and then lifted her bright face to her mother's, as she asked, "How can I be a good Christian, unless I hear good preaching?" The little girl was right.

Magnitude Truck Farming.

Truck farming is distinct from market gardening. It is carried on at a distance from market, water and rail transportation being necessary.

Upward of $100,000,000 is invested in this industry, the products reaching a value of $76,507,155 on farms after paying freights and commissions, and realized upon 534,440 acres of land. There are employed in this industry 216,765 men, 9,254 women and 14,847 children, aided by 75,866 horses and mules, and $8,971,206.70 worth of implements. The Norfolk district, embracing 45,375 acres, shipped products valued at $7,692,859; south Atlantic district, 111,741 acres, products $13,183,516; Mississippi valley, 36,180 acres, products $4,979,783.

Nearly 75 per cent. of the truck produced in the United States comes from a belt of country along the Atlantic coast lying east of a line drawn from Augusta, Me., to Macon, Ga.; from southern Georgia, Alabama and Florida; along the north and south lines of railroad in the Mississippi valley from the Gulf of Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas city, and from the celery districts of Michigan and Ohio.

More or less of the truck, however, is produced in all the states. The following figures show the total acreage of the leading vegetables grown upon truck farms of the United States; Asparagus, 37,979; beans (string or snap), 12,607; cabbage, 77,094; kale, 2,962; spinach, 20,196; Irish potatoes, 28,046; beets, 2,420; celery, 15,381; cucumbers, 4,721; watermelons, 114,381; other melons, 28,477; peas, 56,162; sweet potatoes, 28,621; tomatoes, 22,802; miscellaneous vegetables, 82,601.—*Washington Cor. Breathing Properly.

In all the various systems of physical culture now in vogue the greatest importance is attached to taking the breath properly. The breathing should be slow and deep, six breaths a minute being a safe average. There is still a difference of opinion in regard to the relative value of abdominal and chest breathing, and each system has its advantages. One of the best exercises for increasing the capacity of the lungs is to draw a full breath very slowly and through the nose. Keep the lungs inflated as long as possible, and then expel the air suddenly through the mouth, and repeat the process.

Care should be taken not to try to make the period of holding the breath too long at the start; the more gradually the power of doing this is attained the better will be the permanent results. There are many breathing exercises, and one of the best is the taking of a deep breath and swinging the arms, first one, then the other, and finally both, while the breath is inhaled. Excessive practice of any system should be avoided, and the golden rule of taking moderate and judicious exercise should be observed.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Best Glasses of America.

All the glasses and spectacles sold here are of American make, with the single exception of the very poorest and cheapest, which are imported from France. The latter may be had—sold on the spot—at $6 per gross, or fifty cents per dozen. And they are real bona fide spectacles. The frame is made of hollow wire, bent in shape by machinery, and left open for them. Such cheap spectacles cost in the manufactory in France about two cents apiece. Such spectacles, of course, are not much good, and are about as easily broken as a raw egg. The principal place of manufacture is Southbridge, Mass., but there are other places as well, all in the East though.

"What is the best to wear, viewing the thing from an optical standpoint, spectacles or eyeglasses?"

"Well," said the veteran optician, "it depends on circumstances somewhat. For the eye, of course, a well-adjusted pair of spectacles are the best. But with a person whose time is precious eyeglasses are preferable, provided his nose is suitable."

"His nose?"

"Yes, the bridge of his nose. That must be so built as to give the glasses a firm position. If his nose be flat or snub the glasses will slide and constantly get out of position, thus forever irritating the optic nerves and changing his angle of vision."—Chicago Herald.

Cause of the Red Sun.

As usual at this season of the year the sun has been for several days of a blood-red color, and the cause has been generally attributed to distant forest fires; but Sargeant Smith, of the United States signal service, gives a different explanation. He says it is due to the universal drought that has been prevailing east of the Rockies for several weeks past. Although there have been several small showers reported from different parts of the country, there has been no general rain storm for four weeks. This has been productive of "dust storms," several of which have been traced in their well-defined movement across the country from west to east. These are attended with high winds which carry the dust from the prairies in upper regions for hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles. There have been several large prairie and forest fires raging in the west, and these have contributed their share to the present condition.

Pineapple for Dyspepsia.

Another possible triumph of medical science over disease is suggested by a paper read before the Detroit Medical Association recently on "Alimentation in Therapeutics" in which was announced an important discovery by Signor Vincente Marcano, of Venezuela, in regard to the pineapple. According to Signor Marcano there is in the common pineapple a ferment or principle similar to pepsin, of such remarkable strength that the juice of a single pineapple will digest ten pounds of beef. If this proves true a new and important agent in the treatment of dyspepsia has been discovered. As nearly all other diseases are directly influenced by the degree in which food can be assimilated, and as millions of people have imperfect digestion, the possibilities of this discovery are almost limitless if it proves to be as represented.—Cleveland Leader.

Another Trip—No 6.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

Just below the hotel where we were stoping was a single track railroad tunnel 1100 feet long.

"Come" said the "Sailor" one day, "let's go down the track and get some views of the big tunnel." We went. At the eastern end, in fact at both ends, were deep cuts for quite a distance before the "hole in the ground" was reached. We passed a "blind tiger" in safety, started in through the cut and halted at the mouth of the tunnel. This was wide enough to let a train through and leave a little space at the end of the ties, a sort of ditch for the mud and water to settle in. The afternoon freight had just pulled into the depot back of us. Casually I remarked to the "Sailor" that if a train should come along while we were going through there would be room enough for us in some of the niches in the rock.

"Yes," said he, "but the 'freight' stays at the depot some time," so we entered, passing over wet ties, dodging tiny streams, and drops of water, as they trickled down through the rocks above. We had not gone more than a hundred feet before it began to grow dark, and by the time we were in the middle of the tunnel, it was as dark as night. We were groping our way slowly along when all at once there was a peculiar ringing sound in the rails. In an instant the shrill whistle of a locomotive sounded at the curve, just below the western end of the tunnel. "The passenger train," shouted the "Sailor." "Get down at the end of the ties, quick! somehow! anyhow!" The bit of light peering in from the distance, was suddenly obscured by the entrance of the train. It was total darkness. The "Sailor" stepped into the soft mud, ankle deep, at the left of the track and leaned against the wall, while the cold chills cavorted up and down his spinal column in quick succession; they were not caused from any lack of warmth in the tunnel either. With my cane I felt my way into the darkness at the right and lay down on a pile of broken rock at the end of the ties so to get below the car steps. It was a case of very sudden, and very "nervous" prostration. A half minute would cover the time from the first warning until the train went thundering past. It would be hard to tell which we were the fullest of, thankfulness, or smoke from the engine, but we were safe.

"What fools we mortals be," must have been inspired by some such experience. Out into the open air; through the 'cut'; down to the left, and we stop in front of a log house: it is the residence of Mr. Smith, a colored man. The 'cold chills' and 'nervousness' had disappeared; the "button" was pressed without a tremor and the "Kodak" contained the likenesses of five members of the Smith family grouped together, forming a picture of wondrous interest if not beauty, and of which any artist might be proud. With these photographs properly labelled, the name of Smith can now be handed down to future generations, while without them, it might become neglected, or lost entirely. Taken altogether I consider this one of the biggest successes of the trip. I wish you could see the result. One day I wanted to go back down the road some 14 miles, but how to get there was the question.

The passenger train did not go east until sometime in the afternoon, but there was a morning freight, which if I could take would get me there just at the time I wanted to arrive. There was one difficulty; they were not allowed to carry passengers.

The "Sailor" said I would have to go as "freight," and if I could only get into a car just as the train started, they wouldn't stop to put me off and when I got to my destination, I could slide out." That might have worked well but the train wasn't to stop where I wanted to go. Finally the "Sailor" and gentlemanly telegraph operator solved the problem by getting the new conductor to take me into the "caboose" and unload me at the station. I occupied a seat in the "lookout," from which the whole length of the train could be seen. I offered to pay for my ride but "we are not allowed to carry passengers" greeted my ears. However, George, the colored porter, was permitted to "accept" a quarter. When I spoke to him he was standing directly underneath my perch. He looked up so suddenly that the newly opened can of tomatoes from which he was lunching, nearly slipped from his hand while the quarter which I dropped tried first to go where he had been putting the tomatoes, and then into the can.

"Oh, golly! thank ye boss," ejaculated George, while a 7 by 9 smile lighted up his face. The train stopped to let me out, and I had the supreme satisfaction of sitting on a pile of logs for an hour, waiting for the up 'passenger' to take me up and down the road 23 miles. I say "up and down," for fourteen miles west, the top of the mountain is reached and then we go down a steep grade, a hundred feet to the mile for the first four miles.

A late dinner at a log house, where the dog was so cross that even "Pat" was afraid of him, coffee without sugar or milk, and corn bread without butter, bacon and eggs fried in the greasiest of hog fat, and the passenger train stopping between stations for the conductor and brakeman to get a drink of water from a spring under the bluff, are some of the experiences of one afternoon. The following day we left for St. Paul, still further down the road. What happened, the next letter will tell, meanwhile adieu.

Demands in Restaurants.

A restaurant waiter in this city says: "There are some things about people's habits of eating that defy explanation. For instance. Monday is known in the restaurants as sandwich day, for twice as many sandwiches are sold then as on any other day of the week, and, what is still more curious, more corned beef is called for on Monday than at any other time. Saturday is deviled ham day, for two orders of deviled ham will be called for on Saturday to one on Monday, though why no human being can guess.

"Sometimes a most unexpected demand will be made for particular kinds of food. Some days everybody that comes in will want custard pie, and the next day we will not need to cut a single slice. On Good Friday, 1888, we had not made much preparation for a meat dinner, not expecting to do anything in that line, and to the astonishment of everybody in the place there was more meat sold than on any other day in the year. It seemed as if all the infidels in town came in and called for meat to show defiance of the day."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Real Estate Sales.

Auctioneer Adams sold at auction on Monday afternoon, the oldest house in Quincy, or, at least, one of the oldest.

Mr. Horace B. Spear thinks it was built in 1660. It was occupied for many years by his parents, but of late years, by Mr. and Mrs. Norton Q. Pope and Mr. Beverly Underwood and family. It is situated at the corner of Spear and Canal streets, and is in a fair condition.

There were at the auction enough capitalists to have bought many hundred thousand dollars' worth of property, providing it was sold at low prices, but in this instance there were two or more who wanted this property and were willing to pay a handsome price for it.

There is nearly a third of an acre of land with the old house, part of it quite low, but the most very good; a corner lot so to speak; and the price paid was $3,275; or over 20 cents per foot.

No one can deny but real estate is advancing in this city, if this sale is a criterion. This property a few years ago would not have sold for more than $2000, and Monday it brought over three. Michael F. Galligher, who resides on Brackett street, was the purchaser. He wanted it, and perhaps paid more than it is worth; still there are good reasons to believe that much of the real estate in Quincy is worth one-quarter more than it was ten years ago and is constantly advancing.

John E. Drake, who has recently erected a very fine house with modern improvements on Edison street, a new street leading off of Washington street, near Mr. Johnson's market, has sold the same to Cassie E. Eaton of Middleboro for $3000.

John R. Graham has also sold on the same street a new house with modern improvement to George H. Voorhees, superintendent of the Electric Light Company, for $3000.

Mr. Drake, we learn, intends to erect two more nice houses on the same street. This shows that real estate in this city is in good demand.

Bitten by a Dog.

Mr. George W. Kenison, an aged and respected citizen residing on Washington street in this city, was severely bitten on Thursday by a bull dog owned by John and Augustus Weeden. It seems that Mr. Kenison lets a stable near his residence to the Weedens, reserving the use of one stall, and other conveniences. On Thursday morning David Wilbur attempted to enter the stable when the bull dog owned by the Weedens, which was chained at the door, bit him in the leg drawing blood.

Half an hour later Mr. Kenison attempted to enter the barn, as he was wont to do, when the dog flew at him, knocking him down and biting him in the calf of the right leg, tearing out a piece of the flesh and lacerating the limb in a fearful manner. Mr. Kenison was carried into the house and Dr. Garey called who cauterized the wound.

Mr. Kenison has always made a pet of the dog, and why he should have bitten him is what he can't understand, unless it was because he was angered at being chained. The dog has been killed

Born in 1798.

Miss Mary Cleverly, one of Quincy's oldest residents, celebrated her ninety-third birthday Sunday by receiving a number of callers at her residence on Washington street.

Miss Cleverly was born in Quincy where she has always lived, and enjoys the distinction of having lived under the administration of all of the presidents with the exception of George Washington. Her memory is remarkably good and she readily recalls her early attendance at school, which was held in the house now occupied by Mr. Frank F. Crane at Quincy Point.

Miss Cleverly also recalls many events which transpired in the early history of Quincy, when it was a small town vastly different from today, particularly the visit of Lafayette to Quincy in 1824, how the ladies at the Quincy farm, where she was then living, went forth to meet him, wearing across their shoulders a wide ribbon sash on which were the words, "Welcome Lafayette." There are many other early events on which her memory is equally as good, and as she retains all of her faculties to a remarkable degree a pleasant and profitable hour can not be better spent than in conversation with her.

Considering her advanced age she is quite smart and enjoys very good health and was more than pleased to receive a few of her many friends who called.

Money Lost.

Mrs. Thomas Foye of Adams street mourns the loss of $72.75. She had the money tied up in a piece of cloth and dropped it accidentally on Hancock street. A search was afterwards made for it and the cloth was found but the money had gone.

The money had considerable of an adventure after it was dropped. Mrs. Sheppard passed along soon afterwards, and the cloth being tied in knots she knocked it over, but did not think it worth picking up, and passed on. Then came some children with a stick and a dog. It was thrown up in the air by the stick and landed in Mrs. Dr. Underwood's front lawn. She seeing them do it and not wishing to have the rag there, asked the children to remove it. Instead of going for it the children sent the dog who grabbed it and ran down the street shaking it, and finally dropped it. A more inquisitive chap soon passed along, and seeing it tied in knots at the corners, decided to examine the piece of dress goods, and was no doubt much surprised to find money in each corner. After securing the valuable contents he threw the cloth away, and went on his way rejoicing. The piece of plaid was afterwards found and returned to Mrs. Foye, but the money was gone. As she is a very poor woman her loss is felt quite severely.

Tour of Inspection.

Mayor Fairbanks accompanied by Councilmen John O. Holden and H. Walter Gray, Commissioner of Public Works W. Walter Ewell, and Supt. F. E. Hall of the Quincy Water Company, visited Cambridge Tuesday afternoon.

The visitors were received by Mayor Alger and in company with City Messenger Pratt, and Supt. Nevons of the water works, made a tour of inspection of the public buildings, of the city.

A visit was also made to the water works at Fresh pond, with which the visitors were very much pleased.

This plant as it is today cost upwards of three millions of dollars, and like that of this city, was at first owned by a private company, but was purchased by the city some years ago. The Cambridge gentlemen all advised that Quincy should own its own plant, saying that the Cambridge plant was making money for the city every year.

One of the most attractive tables was the gentlemen's table, which extended the whole width of the church. This table was presided over by Mayor Fairbanks, Mr. Walter M. Hatch, Mr. Charles T. Baker, Mr. Sylvester Brown, Mr. Chandler W. Smith, and Mr. E. H. Sprague.

The Ladies' Aid table, which was attended by Mrs. W. B. Hill, Mrs. Charles A. Haines, Mrs. Edward L. Mitchell, Mrs. G. B. Totman, Mrs. E. W. Arnold, and Mrs. Fenno, looked very attractive.

The liquid department, which Miss Cora Wellington and Miss Genie Hatch looked after, drew a thirsty crowd.

At the fancy table were Mrs. Nichols, Mrs. Kent, Mrs. J. H. Bennett, and Mrs. Thomas F. Mitchell.

Semi-Annual Meeting.

The Quincy Union of King's Daughters held their semi-annual meeting in the Baptist church, Wollaston, last Saturday evening. The church was prettily decorated with floral mottoes, and the programme for the afternoon and evening, under the direction of Miss Ella Godfrey, proved to be helpful and interesting.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale gave a very pleasing address, and emphasised the necessity of extending to all the privilege of serving the King At the afternoon session, at 2.30, the president, Miss Savil, was in the chair.

Rowdyism.

The citizens of Wollaston had a grand good meeting on Saturday evening, for the purpose of taking some action to stop the rowdy acts which are being committed in that beautiful and attractive ward of our city.

There was some plain talk which we believe will result in much good. It is wiser, in every sense of the word, to stop making rogues than it is to appoint officers who are smart enough to catch the evildoers after they have committed the crime.

If the City Council should vote to raise $25,000 to pay a police force to patrol our streets day and night there is not the least security that there would be no crime. It is not the cities who pay the most money to a police force that have the best order or the least crime.

If the good people of Wollaston will allow their stores to be broken open, the windows in their churches broken, signs disfigured, and know who the guilty parties are without punishing them, they are greatly to blame. It is no fault of the city, as a city, but of the citizens of Wollaston.

If they allow rum to be sold they must suffer, whether they have a police patrol or not. If boys are allowed to repeatedly break windows, and no check put to it, then the crime will increase. But bring one or two boys who you know are doing this mischief before Judge Humphrey and you, the citizens of Wollaston, well know that these rascally acts will stop.

The Wollaston Vigilance Commmittee held an executive session Wednesday evening and transacted some important business.

A young lady, who has been studying with Miss Lucy Wheelock for the past year at the Chauncy Hall school, is desirous of forming a kindergarten class in Wollaston for children between three and six years of age. Friday, May 29th, is to be visiting day at the Wollaston schools, when the parents and all friends of the school will be invited to be present. The morning session will be devoted in the main to the ordinary work of the school and an exhibition of the children's work during the year. The afternoon exercises will be confined to the school hall, the programme having been made up with especial reference to Memorial day. His Honor, Mayor Fairbanks and other guests will be present.

CITY COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. All members with the exception of Councilman Morton being present.

Communications.

A communication from the Mayor in relation to the building of sidewalks where the abutters pay one-half, was referred to committee on streets.

A communication received from the Mayor in relation to the claim of J. W. Robinson against the city for transportation of children in 1887 and 1888, was referred to committee on claims.

A communication from the Mayor in relation to the acceptance of the Sewer Act, adopted by the General Court April 24, authorizing the city of Quincy to construct a system of sewerage, was referred to committee on elections.

A communication from the Mayor submitting a plan of Water street according to instructions received, was referred to Committee on Streets.

A communication from the School Committee in relation to school accommodations in Ward Three, was referred to a joint committee on public buildings and finance.

Water Supply.

Under unfinished business the resolutions offered by Councilman Newcomb, at the special meeting last Thursday came up for action.

In support of the same Councilman Newcomb said, the reason he had presented the resolutions was to bring the subject before the Council to see if they approved of the proposed amendments. He had rather see the bill defeated than to adopt the amendment. If we are to buy the Quincy Water Company, he had rather refer it to a commission appointed by the Supreme Court than to three referees, as it would be impossible to get three impartial men to adjust it to the satisfation of the city of Quincy or the Water Company. It is time we took a decided stand one way or the other.

The resolutions offered by Councilman Newcomb were then adopted:

WHEREAS,—After a fair and impartial hearing before the Committee on Water Supply of the General Court, a bill granting to the City of Quincy a right to take and supply water to the inhabitants of said city, independent from the Quincy Water company, was presented by the committee representing the city through its Council, and

WHEREAS,—Certain amendments to said bill have been proposed, requiring the City of Quincy to first purchase the property and rights of the Quincy Water company before exercising any of the provisions of said bill, which said amendments entirely change the intent and purpose of the bill offered by your committee, it is hereby

Resolved,—That the City Council of Quincy, at a special meeting duly called for the purpose of considering said amendments, are of the opinion that said amendments should not be made to said bill, and that the bill as presented be adhered to without the amendments requiring said city to purchase the rights and property of the Quincy Water company, and it is further

Resolved,—That the clerk of the Council forward at once to the senator and representatives from this district a copy of these resolves.

Licenses.

Applications from W. H. Ferry, Jr., for a common victualler's license to do business at Houghs Neck, and from Alex. E. Nash to do business on Winter street, were referred to Committee on Licenses.

Committee on Licenses offered an order granting a common victualler's license to Charles Lorendo. Order adopted.

Garfield Street.

Committee on Finance reported that it was the purpose of the Mayor to put the street in good repair, and recommended that the order appropriating $2,400 do not pass.

Councilman Jones said everybody knew there was a great nuisance on Garfield street. If the Mayor does not abate the nuisance, another petition will be presented.

Councilman Fallon thought $500 would be enough to fix the drain. He never knew before there was a sewer in Quincy.

Councilman Warner said they did not propose to build a sewer on Garfield street. The committee examined the street and the Commissioner of Public Works gave us an estimate; the estimate included the rebuilding of the drain and catch basin, paving gutters and fixing sidewalks; and it cannot be thoroughly rebuilt at a lower figure.

Councilman Pratt said, after we heard what the Mayor was to do, we concluded to recommend that the order ought to pass.

Councilman Jones thought the Mayor had acted queer in this matter. The Commissioner of Public Works had told him he had no money to repair the streets; and if that was true, where was the money coming from?

Councilman Wilde explained by saying the Mayor had an appropriation for miscellaneous repairs, and he could take enough out of that to pay for these repairs.

Councilman Jones thought it beyond the power of the Mayor to take any money from that appropriation.

The question was then taken upon the acceptance of the report, and it was lost.

Councilman Warner moved that the rules be suspended and the order take its final passage. Carried.

Councilman Warner moved it be passed to be ordained. This motion was lost by a vote of 15 to 6.

Hancock Street.

Committee on Finance reported a slight amendment in the order authorizing a loan of $10,700 for the completion of the rebuilding of Hancock street, which was accepted. The order was then, under suspension of the rule, passed to be ordained.

Cemetery Enlargement.

Committee on Finance reported order authorizing loan of $6,000 for enlargement of Mt. Wollaston cemetery ought to pass. Report accepted, and under suspension of rule was passed to be ordained.

Committee on Finance reported an order appropriating $500 for Grove street. It was the purpose of the Mayor to expend such sums of money as was needed in repairs, and recommended that the order be not passed.

Councilman Powers hoped recommendation would not be accepted. The city was liable at any time for damages. People who live on back streets needed some improvements, and this money ought to be appropriated.

Councilman Little hoped report would not be accepted. The Mayor says his appropriation will not last until July, and he could not understand how he was to repair the street.

Councilman Jones hoped the report would not be accepted.

Councilman Wilde admitted that the street ought to be repaired, and said the money would come from miscellaneous expenses.

The question on the acceptanee of the report was then put and lost.

Under suspension of the rule the order appropriating $500 was then passed to be ordained.

Washington Street.

Committee on Finances reported slight amendment to order for $10,000 for rebuilding Washington street, which was accepted.

Councilman Newcomb offered a substitute order that the street be macadamized and not paved, and thought the $10,000 would macadamize the entire road. If he had his way he would pave the entire street and have brick sidewalks.

Councilman Gray hoped substitute order would pass.

Councilman Fallon thought we were going back in the same old rut. Last year Councilman Newcomb wanted good streets, now he wants this macadamized.

Councilman Newcomb said he would vote to bond the city for $500,000 and pave all of the streets, but we cannot do this, and we should do what we can.

The substitute order was then adopted.

Councilman Bryant thought we ought to reconsider the last order passed and amend the original order, and so moved. Carried.

Councilman Bryant offered a substitute order. That the sum of $10,000 be and is hereby appropriated for the rebuilding of Washington street, commencing at Point bridge to Foster street, and the City Treasurer is hereby authorized to borrow the sum. Passed to be ordained.

Councilman Warner moved we reconsider vote whereby we rejected order appropriating $2400 for Garfield street. Carried.

Councilman Warner then moved to lay order on table. Carried.

Ordinances.

Committee on Ordinances recommended passage of ordinance in relation to truancy. Order passed to be engrossed.

Committee on ordinances recommended passage of ordinance, relating to amendment concerning ordinance on collection of taxes. Order passed to be engrossed.

Poor.

Committee on Poor reported on the petition of Thomas Lamb for removal of guardian, T. J. Lamb, that he be not retired. Report adopted.

Resolution.

Councilman Gray offered a resolve in relation to Water Supply bill and Councilman Hammond offered an amendment. The resolve was then adopted.

The resolution as amended reads

RESOLVED,—That in the opinion of the Council, any bill reported by the Committee on Water Supply of the Legislature upon the petition of the city, should contain a provision authorizing the taking, by eminent domain, by the city of any land which may be necessary for the protection of the purity of the water, under the bill asked for.

Location of Poles.

The order granting Chief Engineer a location of poles was passed to be ordained. Adjourned at 10.20.

HOUGHS NECK.

Houghs Neck, the Coney Island of Quincy, has begun to assume its summer appearance, and a trip there by the PATRIOT man, Wednesday, found everybody busy, making ready for the influx of summer residents which will soon arrive.

New cottages are being built; old ones are being repainted; lawns are being trimmed and on every hand there was a general look of activity, and now that the electric cars have commenced running, owners of cottages are making flying trips to get their places in readiness; others come to engage rooms for the season, and the general impression seems to be that the present season will be a prosperous one.

Notes.

Mrs. Mary Tomey, of Boston, has taken the "Neversink" cottage and will keep boarders.

Mr. Sandy McDonald and family, have taken the Hobbs cottage for the season and are already domiciled there.

The Brockton cafe is open and will be run as last season by Mrs. H. H. Connor.

A very pretty cottage is being erected near the Pierce house for John Day, of Boston.

Arthur Dunham, superintendent of the car house, has taken the Shaw cottage for the season.

J. L. Harvey has arrived at the West Side stable. He is to erect a building on the corner of Sea street and Bay View avenue for a restaurant; Mr. Smith, of Dedham, will also have a photograph saloon on the same corner.

Mr. Wiswell of Boston, is erecting a cottage on the extreme end of Great Hill.

The Urban Club, of Neponset, have a hop at the Casino Friday evening, May 29, and the Temple Club of Campello, Saturday evening.

Stanley Mears will have charge of the Great Hill pavillion this season.

Mr. Wiswell of Boston is at the Bay View cottage for the present.

A number have engaged rooms for the season at the Linden House.

Mrs. Andrew McIntosh is building a new cottage on Bird street.

Capt. Boyd will handle the mail, as last year.

Some of the cottages look as though they had not seen a painter's brush for ages.

Landlord Taber says if this is a good season that next winter he will build a twenty-five foot addition to the Casino.

William Ferris, Jr., of Field's Corner, Dorchester, has taken the Waverly cottage and will keep boarders.

Elmer Lincoln and family of Brockton are at the Bay View cottage.

Charles I. Goodale of East Somerville has arrived at his cottage, the "Somerville."

Resolutions.

At a regular meeting of Clan McGregor No. 5 of the order of the Scottish Clans, held May 13, '91, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the universe to remove from our midst our late brother, John Emery, and

WHEREAS, The intimate relations held by our deceased brother with the members of this Clan render it proper that we should place on record our appreciation of his merits as a man, therefore be it

Resolved, By Clan McGregor No. 5 of the Order of Scottish Clans, that, while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for our brother who has been called from his labor to rest.

Resolved, That in the death of John Emery this Clan loses a brother who was always active and zealous in his work as a clansman, ever ready to succor the needy and distressed of the fraternity; prompt to advance the interests of the order; devoted to its wellfare and prosperity; one who was wise in council and fearless in action; an honest and upright man, whose virtues endeared him not only to his brethren of the order, but to all his associates.

Resolved, That this Clan tender its heartfelt sympathy to the widow and relatives of our deceased brother in this their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this Clan and that a copy be sent to the widow of our deceased brother.

Fifty-Seventh Anniversary.

It gave us pleasure on Tuesday last to receive a call from Mr. George S. T. Whiting, who for the past sixteen months has been confined to his house, and a larger part of the time to his bed, by reason of sickness which at one time was of a very serious nature, but by careful nursing and a strong constitution, Mr. Whiting has so far recovered as to be able to drive around to see his old friends once more. He is unable to leave his carriage after being placed in it at his home until he returns, owing to his disease having assumed a dropsical form.

On the 13th of the present month a few of the many relatives of himself and wife, gathered at their residence on Quincy avenue to spend with them a few hours socially, the occasion being the fifty-seventh anniversary of the marriage of this worthy couple. They brought with them some beautiful flowers as a tribute of love and respect, and after pleasant congratulaions and many kind wishes for restored health, they bade their host and hostess goodbye.

Young Men C. Association.

"A Needless Lass" is the subject upon which the Rev. Edward A. Robinson of the Wollaston Congregational church will speak at the young men's meeting next Sunday at 4 P. M., at Plumer's hall.

A good audience listened to Rev. Mr. Norton's interesting address last Sunday afternoon on "The young men with young men." Mr. Griffith sang a solo in a very pleasing manner.

The finance committee of the Young Men's Christian Association held an important business meeting last Thursday evening.

Gver one thousand dollars of the necessary three thousand has been pledged.

Mr. A. H. Whitford, General Secretary of the Poung Men's Christian Association at Cambridge was present at the meeting and will assist the finance committee in raising the money.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, May 20, 1891.

The charter of the Quincy Electric Freight Railway Company has passed through its several stages. Mr. Quincy of Quincy has had it amended by the addition of the words that "the grant of locations to said corporation or the approval of the same under section two may be subject to such terms and conditions as the city council of said city may prescribe."

Representative Burke of Quincy was one of the speakers on Monday in support of the bill in favor of municipal control of gas and electric lighting. His time was extended under suspension of the rules and he spoke twenty minutes to show that the passage of the bill was in the line of sound public policy and would be for the advantage of citizens as gas consumers.

Committee on water supply has had another meeting today to discuss the water supply bill for the city of Quincy. They were in session in the forenoon and afternoon and finally voted, six to five, to report the bill, but amended that the city of Quincy may introduce a public system of water supply when it shall have bought out the present Quincy Water company, with all its rights and franchises. Mr. Johnson of Haverhill will report the bill. It is not at all the bill which is wanted by the city of Quincy and the minority of the committee will make an effort to substitute a satisfactory bill to the committee.

As the session draws to an end (which is not likely to be before the middle of June) the influence of the corporations begins to be more and more apparent, and it is no wonder that the corporation interest is exerted, as is said by one of the lobbyists who work for them, in favor of biennial elections and biennial sessions of the Legislature. They do not like the agitation which compels them to be so constantly on their guard for the protection of their interests. At the same time, they attempt to turn the annual sessions to their advantage, even if they do not always succeed. For instance, here is the street franchise bill. It was supposed to be, at first, a bill in the direction of progress and to recognize the new idea that street railways must pay something for the use of the streets. But, as the daylight was let into it more and more, it was found to be a very clever plan for giving great advantages to the West End Street Railway Company, while its provisions for taxation were so mild that very little could be obtained from the corporation. The bill was denounced by Mr. Wilson of Boston as a West End bill, pure and simple, giving $5 for five cents. So the opposition became stirred up and then the Boston city government attacked it, workingmen passed resolutions against it, and now it is said to be dead, though its decease is not formally announced.

That the bill had any standing at all in the first place shows the great shrewdness of the lawyers of the West End Company, for the committee was unanimous for the bill, except Mr. Wilson, and it was only the exposure after it was reported which showed how thoroughly it was in the West End interest.

Another proof of the ability of corporations to shield themselves from popular danger is found in the municipal lighting bill. Here is a measure for the control by cities and towns of the plants for the manufacture of gas and electric lights, allowing the municipalities, as such, to engage in the lighting business. One would suppose, with the danger that this privilege would create of interference with present private companies, that the stockholders and officers would haunt the State House to oppose the bill. But no. Present companies have been so carefully protected that they are very well satisfied with the bill as it is. If cities and towns go into the lighting business, they must make such payment to the old companies that the latter are perfectly willing to take what the bill gives them and go out of business without another word. That looks very much as if the companies were quite sure that they had the best end of the bargain. RULE.

Burning Accident.

Matilda Lorendo, a domestic employed by a French family, at Brewer's corner, met with a severe burning accident Monday afternoon.

She had built a wood fire, and in order to make it burn quicker resorted to kerosene oil, which flashed up and ignited her clothing.

Finding herself on fire she ran into the street screaming and shouting for help. Her cries were heard by employes at Brewer's store who rushed to her assistance and tried to extinguish the flames by wrapping a blanket about her but without success, and the flames were only extinguished after her clothes had been torn off, but not before she had been severely burned about the body and neck.

The unfortunate woman was taken to the City hospital, where everything possible was done to alleviate her suffering, and at latest account from that institution this Friday forenoon was doing very well.

James Rapson one of the clerks a Brewer's store, had his hands quite badly burned in his efforts to extinguish the flames.

The Guild of the Great Teacher will meet Sunday at 6.30 P. M. in the ladies' parlor of the Unitarian chapel. Subject: "Christ and the Samaritan Woman." Miss Kate L. Brown of Hyde Park will take charge of the meeting. A large attendance, of members especially, is desired.

The June number of Harper's Magazine will contain poems by Will Carleton, Elizabeth Stoddard, Louise Chandler Moulton, and George Horton.

For the Patriot.

A Beautiful Sport.

Six years ago the grass plot, near the Square, was an exceedingly unattractive spot. The few straggling spears of grass which ventured to appear were choked with dust, or buried under fallen leaves. A theoretical and very Unpractical Person, took up the idea of decorating these few feet of ground for the pleasure of the little world living around it.

The first season no more was attempted than to make the spot green and bright and tidy. The next summer this same Unpractical Person proposed adding a flower-bed. After being duly remonstrated with and laughed at by interested friends, this Unpractical Person carried her point; the flower-bed was planted, and in spite of the wicked small boy, stray cattle and malicious citizens, held up by opposers of the scheme, the flower-bed was a blooming success. No one molested it and every one enjoyed it, with its tulips in spring and geraniums in autumn.

An accident having capsized the iron drinking fountain near by, rendering it useless for its purpose, it was discovered after the pole and lamp were removed, a well proportioned iron vase was left. The Unpractical Person asked the City Fathers for this vase, and through their gallantry obtained it. The Adams Academy students presented the money to have the vase properly set, and through the kindness of Mrs. C. F. Adams, her gardner, Mr. Patterson, filled it with plants with as much interest as he had embellished the flower-bed.

Up to a year ago the Quincy Village Improvement Society had met all expenses, but at that time concluded the new stone fountain required all the energy and all the money.

Again the Unpractical Person came forward, and through the aid of the passers by, to whom this bit of ground had become a bright spot in the day, paid the sum required to keep the place in order. Mr. Driscoll, who has had charge of the spot almost from the first, has taken great interest in it, purchasing tools especially for the work, and chased dogs, stray papers and people off the sacred grass, with untiring diligence, and doing it all cheap as could possibly be expected.

But in spite of her best efforts the Unpractical Person finds herself this spring short of funds and in debt beside. However, someone always comes to the rescue of unpractical people. This time it is the Quincy Tennis Club. Its members have kindly consented to give an exhibition of skill on the opening day, Saturday, the 23d, thus giving an opportunity for an afternoon tea to be served at Mrs. Babcock's for the benefit of the flower-bed, vase and grass plot

Work on the fountain will doubtless temporarily interrupt the decoration of the spot in question, but it is desired to clear off the small sum owing for the past season and have a small amount ready when the beautiful fountain shall be in place, and it will be more desirable than ever to have the surroundings attractive. An Important Hearing.

At a public hearing hearing before the "Mass. Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners," a very important question was settled on Thursday, May 14th, 1891, which has been in dispute for a long time.

The hearing was closed by the board summing up in brief, and warning Mr. Chase and all the other boating people present that they were "offending against the law, if any one put a mooring, boat or any other thing whatever on Mr. Meek's or Dr. Disbrow's flats against their wishes or without their consent; that they were absolute owners of the flats in front of their upland property down to low-water mark, and the boat and mooring in question must be moved at once."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. A Re-call.

Ho! Robin Redbreast, thy true love is calling,
Haste to thy nest in yon apple-tree bough,
Spring-time is here, but the night dews are falling,
Twilight will vanish, O fly thee home now.

List to the plaintive cry. Ah! canst thou tarry?
Cold blow the breezes and darkness is near;
Cease from thy frolics abroad now, and carry
Joy to the watcher who holds thee so dear.

Off with thee now, leave thy revels so merry,
Lest some disaster thy pathway beset;
Storm-winds may bluster, but home-light is cheery—
While feeling its warmth all else thou'lt forget.

Haste then, O Robin, thy true love is calling;
Flee from the dangers that gather around;
Foes are about thee, while darkness is falling,
Fly, in yon nest may shelter be found.

Household Receipts.

FOAM PUDDING SAUCE. One-half cup of sugar, butter the size of a walnut, rubbed together with one tablespoonful of flour; turn on this a cup of boiling water, add the beaten yolks of two eggs while boiling, then the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth; flavor to taste. This is an excellent sauce for cottage pudding.

JELLY ROLL. To one cup of powdered sugar and one cup of flour, add three well-beaten eggs. Stir well and add one teaspoonful cream of tarter and a half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in three teaspoonfuls of water. Bake in two pie pans. Spread as evenly as possible. As soon as done turn the cake bottom side up on a dry towel. Spread it evenly with jelly, roll up quickly and wrap closely in a towel.

NICE MUFFINS. Two eggs, butter size of an egg, one cup of sweet milk, one tablespoon of sugar, one heaping teaspoon of baking powder, flour to make a stiff batter; bake in muffin rings or gem pans.

COFFEE CAKE. One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one cup of strong coffee, three eggs, half cup molasses, one cup of water, one cup each of raisins and currants, one teaspoonful cloves, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, one of allspice, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, and flour to make a stiff batter. Bake two hours.

MEAT FRITTERS. Two cups chopped meat, seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Make a batter of two eggs, a little salt, and flour to thicken. Fry in spoonfuls on a griddle. When both sides are cooked, place a apoonful of meat on each, fold over and serve.

POTATO SCONES. Take any boiled potatoes left from the dinner; mash them smooth and add salt to season; then shake some flour over them or work it in, roll out very thin, prick with a fork and bake on a hat griddle.

Tremont Theatre.

On Monday next, May 25th, the well-known actress, Miss Lydia Thompson and her Company of comedians will appear at this theatre, for one week only, in Thomas Addison's musical farce comedy, "The Dazzler," which has met with great success and afforded plenty of fun to large audiences all over the country. Of the play a New York Journal says: "The first act was rather quiet, but yet very enjoyable; but from the opening of the second act, clear through to the fall of the final curtain, the performance went with a whoop and hurrah that were without cessation. The second act of 'The Dazzler' is one of the very funniest things that has ever been set before the New York public.

Hollis Street Theatre.

Mr. Augustin Daly's famous company has been doing a rushing business the past week, many city people returning from the country for a few days to enjoy the plays. "The School for Scandal" will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, of next week, and "Taming the Shrew," Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon. The company is such a favorite one that it is almost impossible to get any kind of a seat, unless secured several days ahead of time.

Boston Theatre.

"The Wolves of New York" is the new comedy drama at the Boston theatre. The play deals with three country people, trying to earn a livelihood in New York City, and it is full of pathos, fun and laughter. The scenery and stage sittings are very realistic. Mr. Leonard Grover of New York is the author, and also plays the leading role, assisted by able talent.

Boston Museum.

The summer season at the Museum begins next Monday, May 25, opening with an engagement of Kellar. This is his first appearance here in two years, and he has several new specialties, including that latest novelty, Karmos. Herein Mrs. Kellar, ostensibly at least, is the most important figure, and she makes a deep impression, says the Philadelphia Ledger, speaking of the performance, by her "mind reading" exhibition. Whether the method by which she works is a simple trick or something more intricate, the result is certainly astonishing to the uninitiated. And while there are no doubt some in the audience who have their theories as to how the various feats are accomplished, it is safe to assert that the average spectator is pleasantly mystified.

Anecdotes.

Richleigh—"Julia, don't you think you could bring yourself down to love me just a little?

Julia—"I don't know. I should have to go down pretty far."

Richleigh—"How far?"

Julia—"About the bottom of your pocket-book?"

"How do you sell your music?" asked the prospective customer.

"It depends on what kind you want to buy," replied the dealer. "Organ music I sell by the choir and piano music by the pound."

Complainant—"The prisoner took a heavy bludgeon and clubbed my head to a jelly."

Magistrate (to culprit)—"How dare you, sir? You are not a policeman."

At the Golden Gate.—St. Peter (to college man, who has been loafing around)—"Won't you come in?"

College man (absent mindedly)—"What's the limit?"

Augustus—"But, Clara, ice cream at a dollar a plate is rather expensive."

Clara (haughtily)—"That is enough, sir. I do not believe you are a plummer at all."

"I paid $5.01 for that apple my boy ate."

"What?"

"Five dollars and one cent. Five dollars for the doctor and one cent for the apple."

Morse's District.

The new apportionment takes Quincy out of Congressman Morse's district, but he says he has not lost interest in us, and will do his best to serve us until we elect a Representative that can serve us better.

In answer to many inquiries that he is receiving about the extension of Free Delivery to Wollaston, Atlantic and Quincy Point, he sends us the following letter from Hon. Smith A. Whitfield, First Assistant Postmaster General.

It seems that the pressure upon the Department for the extension of the free delivery service, and for additional carriers where it already exists, is very great, and some of them will have to wait. There are large sections of the country where the Post Office service is not self sustaining, and the centres of population in the North have to suffer in consequence.

The extension of the free delivery service in Quincy is only a question of time. The following is the letter of the First Asistant Postmaster General:

Post Office Department, Office of the First Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C., Sup't. Free Delivery System.
May 15, 1891.

HON. E. A. MORSE, M. C., Canton, Mass.

Sir: Yours of the 13th received and in reply I have the honor to state that it will be impossible for us to inform you, at this early date, what can be done for Quincy, Mass., during the next fiscal year, as but comparatively few of the five hundred and nineteen free delivery offices now in operation have been heard from, but all we have heard from are clamoring for more carriers, the most of them to give additional deliveries to territory now served and to relieve carriers who are overworked.

The pressure for additional service will be so great during the next fiscal year that we will have to move slowly and with great caution, to prevent an unjust distribution of facilities, and creating a deficiency.

Very Respectfully.
S. A. WHITFIELD,
First Ass't. Postmaster General.

TRIMMINGS.

The prominence of tan or coffee cream shades, has caused a prolonged use of black trimmings. They not only make an excellent show on such pale backgrounds, but by means of them, many women can wear those stylish colors that otherwise would or should be impossibilities. Bands around the bottom of the skirts, extending all the way or partially, are in great favor and while elegant ones are of broad passementerie in close patterns, yet the majority are of silk or velvet, black or colored and not a few are of the material if plain. In the latter case, it is on the bias and headed by a narrow galoon or piping, often of gilt. Often too, the entire skirt is made on the bias and this is prominently true in respect to wools of large, loose diagonal weave in tan, coffee cream or gray. Two narrow ruffles of the material are very popular for light goods as also two narrow falls of lace, but a single fall of wide lace is so elegant, that it has come about almost inevitably, and tasteful dresses show a wide lace flounce around the lower edge that corresponds to one about the basque, while puffed lace sleeves over plain ones, may harmonize with a lace ruffle or jabot at the throat. The possibilities of renovating a last season's dress by means of basque skirtings and trimming at the bottom, are easily recognized and utilized by thrifty women.

FINE LEGHORN STRAW

is an exception to the rule against plain weave in millinery and some of the most elegant hats which even now are being sold against the summer resort season, are in this style. The majority are trimmed elegantly by broad ribbon loops and flowers that conceal the low crowns and catch the brims at the back and more or less at the sides, but a striking example shows a wide, soft brim puckered in the embrace of three large stems that quite encircle it and from which extends a spray of roses. A crownless hat is begun by a small circle of several very large knotty and thorny stems that are the prelude to a crescent shaped brim of puffed chiffon which forms the support to a beautiful spray of small flowers and bright berries, and a third unique example has the frame work wholly composed of large stems; the outer one forming an extended circle with inner ones interlacing at wide intervals. A dash of white lace on one side, seems to have fallen accidently into position, and completion is afforded by four wide open roses. Such hats of course come under the head of expensive caprices.

NOTES AND ANSWERS.

"Eleanor." A pretty cape for a watering place, would be of chiffon made in two full ruffles, the lower one reaching to the waist and with Henri Deux ruffling about the throat. Such capes ready made are sold for $5 apiece or if ingenious, you could make one for yourself. Refined examples are in white, but charming ones, are in pale blue, yellow or pink.

"Mrs. L." There is great choice in Florida water, and if you wish the best sold, ask for Murray and Lanman's to which none can compare for fragrance, purity or durability of aroma. Its popularity increases every season, since all who make trial of it, must perceive its superiority.

Gingham, batiste and similar light cotton fabrics are trimmed with linen lace or open work embroidery. Russian applique bands in cream color and briar stitched gimps as well, are also employed in finish.

Petticoats of taffeta silk trimmed with ruffles are in style because the long skirts require to be lifted. Taffeta silk is also quite fashionable for dresses and for either petticoats or dresses, the changeable is very stylish. Changeable silk parasols may correspond.

Widows in Excess.

There are over 800,000 more widows than widowers in England. The Westminster Review, in discussing the subject, attributes the disparity chiefly to the growing disposition of men, who marrying late in life, generally marry persons younger than themselves, which the Review considers a very serious evil in modern society.

It is seldom that anything of much value is given away just for asking, but the prettily printed "History of Queen Anne and her Reign" is one of the most interesting and really valuable little works we have seen. It contains a complete summary of English history during this period, brightly written, and showing how the true womanly character of the Queen influenced her course as sovereign. Every scholar, young and old, will find it of interest to read and valuable as a reference. Send your address on a postal card to Henry Wood's Sons Co., Boston, Mass., and get a copy free.

Teachings of Science.

In this disease left to itself, sleep and rest are banished and death by exhaustion is likely to occur in from a few days to a week. Many cases, however, under proper management recover from a first, some from a second and third attack. It would seem from such a warning that the first attack would be the last—that the cause would be avoided. But the desire to return to drinking is so great, the force of habit so strong, the self-control through brain impairment so feeble, that indulgence again occurs, and subsequent attacks generally follow. With each recurrence of the disease the chances of recovery are diminished, until death closes the earthly scene.

Subsequent attacks of this particular disease may not occur, death following from other forms of alcoholism, or from complications of other diseases; but when the brain is so far impaired as to produce delirium tremens, permanent reform is almost hopeless, and the victim is almost sure to die a drunkard. Death to our natural instincts is a fearful thing, come in what form it may; fearful when amid friends and family and loving care, made less appaling by affection earned by years of self-control, of duty done, of virtue, kindness and love. It is a terror even when life passes away with these surrounding, in resignation and hope, and ceases as music from a slumbering harp string. What then must be this dread event to him, who drives from his death chamber, or perhaps his gloomy cell, by his raving violence or his profane mutterings, his family and kin, who may have but the tattered remnants of abused affection, while he puffs out his last foul breath, a token of the corruption within, and nothing remains but an inheritance of painful memories and possibly of propensities which may lead his offspring to repeat his career.

Can it be possible that an article which so often produces the effect upon the brain and nervous system which have been sketched in mere outline is, as a beverage, even necessary, useful or safe; or indeed entirely innocent, habitually used in any quantity, however moderate?"

Eccentric Matches.

A child detests soap. How it would amuse a child to behold a number of matches rushing away from soap! Place some matches in a basin of water in the shape of a star. Take a piece of soap, cut into a point, insert it in the water in the middle of the matches, and lo! they will fly from it in every direction as if in horror. If you wish to bring the matches all together again you will treat them as you would children—with a lump of sugar. Dip the sugar in the water and little bits of wood will come swimming to it as though they yearned for a sip of its sweetness.—Once a Week.

Recompense.

Straight through my heart this fact today
By truth's own hand is driven:
God never takes one thing away,
But something else is given,

I did not know in earlier years
This law of love and kindness;
But without hope, through bitter tears
I mourned in sorrow's blindness.

And ever following each regret
For some departed treasure,
My sad repining heart was met
With unexpected pleasure.

I thought—it only happened so—
But time this truth has taught me;
No least thing from my life can go,
But something else is brought me.

It is the law complete, sublime,
And now with faith unshaken,
In patience I but bide my time,
When any joy is taken.

No matter if the crushing blow
May for the moment down me:
Still back of it waits Love, I know,
With some new gift to crown me.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Miscellany.

A DOMESTIC SKETCH.

Mrs. Baxter was lying on a lounge in her cool and shaded sitting-room. An odor of camphor pervaded the room. The pale face appearing from beneath the white bandage gave ample evidence that she was suffering the torture of a severe headache. Near her, moving a fan with a gentle motion, sat an eldly lady, Mr. Baxter's mother, who had arrived on a visit that day. There was a sharp click of the gate, and then the well known sound of slipshod feet across the kitchen floor.

"O dear, I do believe Mrs. Goodwin has come to borrow something again," moaned the sick woman, making a feeble attempt to rise.

The door, which had been left ajar, was pushed open, and a tall, gaunt figure appeared.

"Good afternoon, Mis' Baxter. I declare for it, if you ain't got one of them pesky headaches agin! Had it all day?" The caller spoke in a rasping tone, with a quick utterance. "You ought to take some hot hop tea and soak your feet and have a good sweat. Guess a dose of castor ile wouldn't come amiss, either."

Without stopping for a reply, or an introduction to the elderly stranger, she continued in a tone which touched every nerve in Mrs. Baxter's body: "I just had word that Mis' Springer and her sister from Boston was a-comin' to spend the afternoon with me, and me without a mite of sweetcake in the house. So I jest set to work to make some, and found I was all out of soda; so I just run over to borry some."

Mrs. Baxter made an effort to rise.

"La sakes! you jest lay still now. I can git it. I know jest where you keep it." And without other words she started for the pantry. Mrs. Baxter knew that honesty was one of Mrs. Goodwin's redeeming points, so she made no effort to detain her.

Having procured the soda, Mrs. Goodwin pulled her apron over her head again, and with a parting injunction to "keep her head cool, and above all to keep her nerves quiet," she hastened home.

The next morning, as Mrs. Baxter was busy about her household duties, and chatting with her mother, Mrs. Goodwin again appeared. She carried in her hand an empty cup.

"So you are round agin! Take any hop tea?" Without pausing for a reply, she continued: "Wal, I had a real good time yesterday, and my sweetcake riz beautiful, if I do say it. I was just a-gittin' ready to make some gingerbread, and I found I was out of merlasses, so I jest run over to borry some."

Mrs. Baxter quietly proceeded to fill the cup from her well-filled jug, Mrs. Goodwin indulging meanwhile in gossip, which, although not in the least malicious was exceedingly distasteful to Mrs. Baxter.

"So that is your husband's mother, is it?" she exclaimed, after being introduced. "Come unexpected, p'raps?"

"No, not unexpectedly. The visit has been a pleasant anticipation for a fortnight," replied Mrs. Baxter.

"Want to know! Why, you didn't tell me she was a-comin'. Wal, I must hurry. If I set here a-talkin' all day I shan't never get my gingerbread made." And soon the click of the gate announced her departure.

Mrs. Baxter threw herself into a chair with an expression of hopelessness that surprised her mother.

"What shall I do?" she exclaimed. That woman worries me to death with her borrowing. She is a good, honest creature, but hasn't the slightest idea how she troubles me. I don't want to be disobliging, or refuse her a favor. It's just so all the time. No sooner do I get about my sewing, or writing, or taking a nap, than I have to jump up to wait on her for something she has come to borrow. And that isn't all, either. Sometimes she forgets to return borrowed articles. I don't wonder at it, she borrows so much. And frequently the articles she returns are not as good as mine, Sometimes I can't use her flour or butter. I dislike to say anything to hurt her feeling or offend her, so I have borne it ever since I have lived here—more than two years. What shall I do?"

Her mother sat silent for a few moments. Then she said: "I know just how to sympathize with you. I once had a borrowing neighbor. I can tell you what I did, but perhaps you will not approve of my course."

"Do tell me," exclaimed Mrs. Baxter, eagerly.

"This neighbor was a good enough sort of woman," said her mother, "but she would borrow everything from a bar of soap to a bootjack. Sometimes she forgot to bring them back, and sometimes they weren't worth much if she did. I remember I began by setting aside all articles of doubtful quality, such as flour and butter, and when she came to borrow such things again I gave them to her. One morning she said to me:

"Seems to me that last butter wasn't as good as you commonly have, was it?'

"Says I, as calmly as I could, considering I was shaking inside for fear she would be provoked, 'I guess not. It's the same butter you brought back to me three days ago. I didn't like to use it. I thought maybe it was your kind, so I set it one side against the time you wanted some more.'

"She looked thunderstruck.

"'Was that what you did with the last flour I brought back?' and her tone was very suspicious.

"'Yes,' says I, as meek as a lamb.

"'And the tea, too?"

"'Yes,' says I, though I was trembling all over, I was so worried. 'I thought if they were your choice groceries, there couldn't be any objection.'

"You ought to have seen that woman! She looked all sorts of ways. If you'll believe it, she never said one word, but just marched straight out, and she never borrowed after that. She was rather cool for a good while, but she got over it finally, and I guess she troubled the grocers a little more than she did her neighbors."

"Why, Mother Baxter, I wouldn't dare do such a thing!" said Mrs. Baxter, Junior. "I should be afraid she would get very angry and gossip about me."

"What if she does? I guess you can live it down," said her mother.

"That very afternoon Mrs. Goodwin came over to return some borrowed butter. It was odorous, and therefore odious.

"I am desperate," said young Mrs. Baxter. "I shall certainly try your plan."

Next morning the molasses came home and was set aside in a cool place in anticipation of the time when it might want to walk back across the yard. The butter kept it company.

Only a few days passed, and butter was again called for. Mrs. Baxter shook in her shoes as she handed her neighbor that vigorous butter.

Next morning Mrs. Goodwin came in to borrow a little salt and a couple of eggs.

"Do you take butter from a new dairy now, Mis' Baxter?" she inquired.

"No—why do you ask?" said Mrs. Baxter, innocently, trying to suppress a smile.

"I kinder thought that last I borrowed here was not as good as common," she replied.

Mrs. Baxter braced herself mentally and proceded to face the music.

"It was the same you brought home the other day. I will tell you frankly that I thought it was not as good as mine. I am very particular about butter, even in cooking, so I saved it for you, in case you should happen to want some more."

Mrs. Goodwin's face flushed, turned pale, then red again. For once she was at a loss for words to express herself. Bestowing on Mrs. Baxter a look in which there was such a variety of emotions that she failed to interpret it, she hastened away.

"There, mother, I guess I have done it now!" And Mrs. Baxter repeated the conversation.

They saw nothing of Mrs. Goodwin for three days. At the end of that time she suddenly appeared, bringing a basket which she placed carefully on the table.

"There, Mis' Baxter," she exclaimed, "I've brought home all the borrowed things I could think on. It has just come to me what a pester I must have been; and me a livin' jest as near the store as you do. I calkerlate I shan't trouble you so much in future."

Mrs. Goodwin proceeded to unload the basket. There were eggs, salt, soda, a bar of soap, a cup of sugar, some tea, a paper of needles, some starch, a bowl of flour, ditto of pickles, some mustard, some writing paper, three postage stamps, and a bottle of cough-drops.

"And here's your basket, too. I'd had it so long I really forgot it was yours." And she sat the basket down at the astonished Mrs. Baxter's feet.

Mrs. Goodwin colored a little as she said; "Now I hope we shall be just as good friends as ever, 'cause I do like you fustrate."

"I hope so, I sure," replied Mrs. Baxter. "To tell the truth, it has inconvenienced me to get the articles, not but that I would just as soon you should have them. But if we understand each other it will be all right. Occasionally I shall be happy to oblige you."

"Wal, I must sharpen up my memory a leetle, and send for things when I need 'em, same as you do."

There continued to exist between them kindly feeling, but from that day Mrs. Baxter lost her borrowing neighbor.

California Prices in 1849.

From "Pioneer Mining in California, in the May Century.

During the winter of 1849-50 the cost of living was extreme. As the season was a very wet one the roads and trails were full of mud-holes, in which supply wagons were stuck and mules and oxen mired. Wagons and animals were unloaded several times a day to extricate them from the mud, and in one instance at least fourteen days were spent on the road from Stockton, fifty miles away. Flour reached a dollar a pound, rice the same, pork and bacon a dollar and sixty cents a pound, salaratus sixteen dollars a pound, and spermaceti candles a dollar each. An ounce of gold was the price of a pick or shovel, and almost anything needed, except fresh beef, commanded a proportionate price. That all miners did not get rich is accounted for in the statement that it took a fair claim to pay expenses. The short duration of a placer claim, the loss of time in finding another, and the too general restlessness tells the story of many failures to realize a fortune by even those who were the most lucky. Too often it was due to extravagance, gambling, or the guzzling of brandy or whisky at eight dollars a bottle. But drunk or sober one was obliged to pay two ounces for a pair of pantaloons, a hundred dollars for a pair of long-legged boots, and four dollars expressage for a letter.

With the Fingers.

The list of things that can be eaten from the fingers is on the increase. It now includes all bread, toast, tarts and small cakes, celery and asparagus, when served whole either hot or cold; olives, to which a fork should never be used; lettuce, which must be crumpled in the fingers and dipped in salt or sauce; strawberries served with the stems on, as they should be, are always touched to pulverized sugar; cheese, in all forms, except Brie, Acquefort or Cumbafort; all fruits except preserves and melons. The finger bowl stands by the plate and the napkin is ready.

Pioneer's Ten Commandments.

The following commandments were copied from I. Waterhouse's diary, used in the gold mines of California many years ago:

A man spake these words and said: I am a miner who wandered from away down East and came to sojourn in a strange land, and see the elephant. And behold! I saw him, and bear witness that from the key of his trunk to the end of his tail his whole body has passed before me; and I followed him until his huge feet stood still before a log shanty. Then with his trunk extended he pointed to a candle-board card tacked upon a shingle, as though he would say, Read! And I read—

The Pioneer's Ten Commandments.

I. Thou shalt have but one claim.

II. Thou shalt not make unto thyself any false claim, nor any likeness unto a mean man by jumping one, or I will visit the miners around to invite them on my side; and when they decide against thee, thou shalt take thy pick, thy pan, thy shovel and thy blankets, with all that thou hast, and go prospecting to seek new diggings—but thou shalt find none. Then when thou hast returned in sorrow, thou shalt find thine old claim is worked out, and yet no pile made for thee to hide in the ground, or in an old boot beneath thy bunk, or in buckskin or bottle underneath thy cabin; but thou hast paid all that was in thy purse away, worn out thy boots and thy garments, so that there is nothing good about them but the pockets, and thy patience is likened unto thy garments, and at last thou shalt hire thy body out to make thy board and save thy bacon.

III. Thou shalt not go prospecting before thy claim gives out. Neither shalt thou take thy money, nor thy gold dust, nor thy good name to the gaming table in vain, for monte, twenty-one, roulette, faro, lansquenet and poker will prove to thee that the more thou puttest down the less thou shalt take up; and when thou thinkest of thy wife and children, thou shalt not hold thyself guiltless, but insane.

IV. Thou shalt not remember what thy friends do at home on the Sabbath day, lest the remembrance may not compare favorably with what thou doest here. Six days thou mayest dig or pick all that thy body can stand under; but the other day is Sunday, yet thou washest all thy dirty shirts, darnest all thy stockings, tap thy boots, mend thy clothing, chop thy whole week's fire wood, make up and bake thy bread, and boil thy pork and beans, that thou wait not when thou returnest from thy long Tom, weary. For in six days' labor only thou canst not work enough to wear out thy body in two years. But if thou workest hard on Sunday also, thou canst do it in six months, and thou and thy son and thy daughter, thy male and thy female friends, thy morals and thy conscience be none the less better for it, but reproach thee shouldst thou ever return to thy mother's fireside and thou strive to justify thyself because the trader and the blacksmith, the carpenter and the merchant, the tailors, Jews and buccaneers defy God and civilization by keeping not the Sabbath day, nor wish for a day of rest such as memory of youth and home made hallowed.

V. Thou shalt not think more of all thy gold, nor how thou canst make it fastest, than how thou wilt enjoy it after thou hast ridden rough-shod over thy good old parents' precepts and examples, that thou mayest have nothing to reproach and sting thee when thou art left alone in the land where thy father's blessing and thy mother's love sent thee.

VI. Thou shalt not kill thy body by working in the rain, even though thou shalt make enough to buy physic and attendance with. Neither shalt thou kill thy neighbor's body in a duel, for by keeping cool thou savest his life and thy conscience. Neither shalt thou destroy thyself by getting "tight," nor "slewed," nor "high," nor "cornered," nor "half seas over," nor "three sheets in the wind," by drinking smoothly down "brandy slings," "gin cocktails," "whiskey punches," "rum toddies," nor "egg nogs." Neither shalt thou suck "mint juleps" nor "sherry cobblers" through a straw, nor gurgle from a bottle the raw material, nor take it neat from a decanter, for while thou art swallowing down thy purse and thy coat from off thy back, thou art burning the coat from off thy stomach; and if thou couldst see the houses, lands, gold dust and home comforts already lying there, a huge pile, thou wouldst feel a choking in thy throat; and when to that thou addest thy crooked walking and hiccoughing, lodging in the gutter, broiling in the sun, prospect holes half full of water, and shafts and ditches from which thou hast emerged looking like a drowning rat, thou wilt feel disgusted with thyself and inquire, "Is thy servant a dog, that he doeth these things?" Verily I will say, "Farewell, old bottle; I will kiss thy gurgling lips no more. And thou, 'slings,' 'cocktails,' 'punches,' 'smashes,' 'cobblers,' 'nogs,' 'toddies,' 'sangarees' and 'juleps' forever farewell. Thy remembrance shames me; henceforth I will cut thy acquaintance, and headaches, tremblings, heart burnings, blue devils, and all the unholy catalogue of evils which follow in thy train. My wife's smiles and my children's merry-hearted laugh shall charm and reward me for having the manly firmness and courage to say, 'No! I wish thee an eternal farewell.'"

VII. Thou shalt not grow discouraged, nor think of going home before thou hast made thy pile, because thou hast not struck a lead, nor found a rich crevice, nor sunk a hole upon a pocket, lest in going home thou leave ten dollars a day and go to work ashamed at fifty cents a day. And serve thee right! For thou knowest that by staying here thou mightest strike a lead and fifty dollars a day, and keep thy manly self respect, and then go home with enough to make thyself and others happy.

VIII. Thou shalt not steal a pick, or a pan, or a shovel from thy fellow-miner, nor take away his tools without his leave; nor borrow those he cannot spare; nor return them broken; nor trouble him to fetch them back again; nor talk with him while his water rent is running on; nor remove his stake to enlarge thy claim; nor undermine his claim in following a lead; nor pan out gold from his riffle-box; nor wash the tailings from the mouth of his sluices. Neither shalt thou pick out specimens from the company's pan to put in thy mouth, or in thy purse; nor cheat thy partner out of his share; nor steal from thy claim-mate his gold dust to add to thine, for he will be sure to discover what thou hast done, and will straightway call his fellow-miners together, and if the law hinders them not they will hang thee, or give thee fifty lashes, or shave thy head and brand thee like a horse thief with "R" upon thy cheek, to be known of all men, and Californians in particular.

IX. Thou shalt not tell any false tales about good diggings in the mountains to thy neighbor, that thou mayest benefit a friend who hath mules and provisions and tools and blankets he cannot sell, lest in deceiving thy neighbor, when he returns through the snow with nothing but his rifle, he present thee with the contents thereof, and like a dog thou shalt fall down and die.

X. Thou shalt not commit matrimony; nor court single blessedness; nor forget absent maidens; nor neglect thy first love. But thou shalt consider how faithfully and patiently she waiteth thy return,—yea, and coveteth each epistle that thou sendest with kisses of kindly welcome until she hath thyself. Neither shalt thou covet thy neighbor's wife, nor trifle with the affections of his daughter; yet, if thy heart be free, and thou love and covet each other, thou shalt pop the question like a man, lest another man more manly than thou shouldst step in before thee, and thou lovest her in vain, and in the anguish of thy heart's disappointment thou shalt quote the language of the great and say, "Such is life!" and thy future lot be that of a poor, lonely, despised and comfortless bachelor. A new commandment give I unto you: If thou hast a wife and little ones that thou lovest dearer than thy life, keep them continually before thee to cheer and urge thee onward until thou canst say, "I have enough; God bless them; I will return." Then as thou journeyest toward thy much loved home, with open arms shall they come forth to welcome thee, and falling on thy neck, weep tears of unutterable joy that thou art come. Then in the fullness of thy hearts' gratitude thou shalt kneel before thy Heavenly Father together to thank him for thy safe return. Amen! So mote it be.

Care for ex-Confederates.

Georgia's Confederate pension system, under which disabled veterans receive from $2 to $25 per month, according to the disability, is highly creditable to our State, but it should accept and maintain the home near this city in order to complete the good work. It will be of interest to review the situation in other Southern states. Virginia led in the movement and established a Confederate Home at Richmond, for the support of which the State expends $10,000 a year. Pensions to the amount of $5000 annually are also paid.

Alabama has no home, but pays $125,000 a year in pensions.

Arkansas has a home at Little Rock, built by private subscription, supported by State aid.

Florida has no home, but pays $30,000 a year to disabled Confederates who have resided in the State fifteen years.

Mississippi is without a home, but has made liberal provision for her indigent and disabled Confederates.

Missouri pays no pensions, but a movement is on foot to raise $100,000 to endow a home without State aid.

Maryland has a home costing $40,000, near Baltimore, aided by the State to the extent of $10,000 annually.

Louisiana has a home near New Orleans, and the State grants it $10,000 a year.

North Carolina not only pays pensions, but has appropriated $41,000 for a home.

South Carolina pays about $50,000 in pensions, but has no home.

Texas has a home established by subscription. It costs $3500 a year, and State aid is expected shortly.

Tennessee has established a home at the old home of Andrew Jackson, "The Hermitage," the State having given 475 acres of land and $10,000 for improvements in 1889. The Legislature which recently adjourned appropriated $25,000 for a building and $5000 for its support, and in addition $60,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for expenditure annually in pensions, which range from $2.50 to $25 per month. It is thought that $25,000 per year will cover the pension list.

Of all the Southern states Kentucky alone has made no provision for her ex-Confederates.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

A Cure for Toothache.

It is not at all uncommon to have toothache with perfectly sound teeth, or in teeth that have been recently filled. Without explaining the cause for this I would simply recommend a very convenient little application, which you can readily prepare yourself and keep on hand. Take a piece of chamois skin, or of fine closely woven flannel, and soak it thoroughly in a good extract of Jamaica ginger, or what is better still, in tincture of capsicum, which you can obtain from any druggist.

Let this dry, and put it away until the time of need. To use it in the case of the toothache I have mentioned, with a pair of scissors cut a small piece off, and place it between the gum and the lip directly over the root of the offending tooth. This will act as a counter-irritant, and its effect is really marvelous.

Smart Women.

The ladies living on Wade street, Cincinnati, recently gave the authorities of that city a lesson in street cleaning that will probably last them awhile. The women of Wade street became tired of the piled up rubbish and dirt along their thoroughfare. So they gathered brooms, rakes and wheelbarrows and swept the dirt clean up in piles, ready for the city carts to collect. Then they flushed the open gutters and gave them a scrubbing. This broom brigade of righteously indignant women attracted considerable attention, and that same day the city aldermen appropriated $10,000 additional for street cleaning. It is in the power of the women in every town in the country to have clean streets if they set their heads to do it.

Change of Occupation.

As for the feeling that we need rest, rest, rest, it is often a fallacious one. It is action which makes muscle. The spirit of life enters into us when we take a vital part in today. Often we suffer from rest. A change of occupation is what we most need, as a rule, and the relief hours of an active person turn out to be very intelligent. We must rest, but we need not lose our electricity, which the will, the thought, can command at all times, and which ought to be on guard, like an orderly, to summon up when we should become alert.

Headaches evaporate if we must exert ourselves for those we love, or we almost forget the pain, which is the same thing, and ill temper cannot flourish unless we have idleness in which to reflect upon the motes belonging to some one else. With energy leading the way, ennui lifts from the horizon, and we see color and distance again. There are women who labor day by day in hunger and despair. It seems as if others might labor in comfort and health, instead of sitting down to lassitude and sighs.—Harper's Bazar.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Capt. Spear and his assistants have been very busy at Mount Wollaston Cemertey cutting the grass and trimming the lots under their care, and the cemetery looks very attractive.

Besides what Capt. Spear has done, many owners of lots have been every day at work upon them setting out flowers and putting on the finishing touches.

Since spring opened, a number of handsome monuments have been erected, also a large number of tablets and markers.

Among the most noticeable monument, is a large granite shaft surmounted by an urn, erected to the memory of Seth and Elizabeth Spear and their children. On the base is the name "Spear" in large raised polished letters and on the sides of the polished die are the several inscriptions.

On Mangolia avenue there is a very neat granite monument which has the name "Bell" on the base; on the polished die is the inscription and several Odd Fellows' emblems.

On the Erskins lot at the back part of the cemetery is a large rough finished block of granite, one side of which is polished on which is the name "Erskins" and the inscriptions.

Near the main entrance is a monument (if it may be called so) that cannot fail to attract attention by its oddity. It is a large oblong piece of granite, roughly finished with the exception of the corners which are hammered; on the two ends there are sunken Maltese crosses; on the front in a panel is the name "Saville."

A very pretty granite tablet with a polished face has been erected on the Billings lot to the memory of Lemuel Billings.

J. W. and W. A. Hayden have erected a very tasty granite monument on their lot with a polished face for inscriptions.

A Teacher's Authority.

There is no position in the gift of a community which is more trying than that of a school teacher. Every act is severely criticised by the parents when it bears upon the children, regardless of the fact that there are two sides to every story. Parents too often look upon their children as saints and the teachers as arch-fiends.

There is now a case in point in one of the schools of this city. A day or two ago as the pupils were marching out of the building to be dismissed, three boys broke away from the line, and, regardless of the commands of the master to return, ran off. Two of the boys were returned by their parents, and the third one was apprehended at the depot by the master, (the city has no truant officers), and ordered back to the school. The boy refused to go. The master marched him back to school and then punished him.

From this simple state of affairs a blood curdling story was fabricated. The whole ward was up in arms and demanded the instant dismissal of a master who dared to do his duty and uphold the discipline of the school.

The moment that the discipline of the master over his pupils relaxes his authority is at an end. No school can have two masters.

In the case which we have cited, the citizens claimed that the master had no authority over the scholars outside of the school building or yard. The law on this is very explicit. While the pupils are on their way to and from the school, the authority of the teacher may be considered as concurrent with that of the parent or guardian. If the children in any way by their conduct injure the good order and discipline of the school, the teacher may take notice of such conduct by subjecting offender to such wise and judicious treatment as will have a tendency to prevent a repetition of the offence.

All Aboard.

For the past six weeks the Commisioner of Public Works has caused a team every Saturday afternoon to go through the centre of the city gathering up paper and other refuse matter, so that the streets may present a clean appearance. The cleanliness of our streets certainly gives strangers passing through our city a better impression than if uncared for. Much assistance can be given the Commissioner if the people, instead of thoughtlessly opening letters and bundles and throwing the wrappers into the street, use a little care and assist in the good work. Banana and orange peel, and sweepings from stores should not be thrown in the street.

Memorial Day.

Another year has come and gone and as Memorial day is here, the thoughts of our fathers go back to the time when shoulder to shoulder they faced the raging fire of the enemy on southern battle fields, and fought many a hard fight, that we of today might live and enjoy the blessings of a free and glorious country.

Many a bright light went out during those three years of battle and carnage, buried where he died, in a strange land far away from home and friends and in an unmarked grave. The war is over and those survived turned their faces toward home with a feeling of relief to re-enter with gladness the employments of peaceful life.

Twenty-five years have passed since the bells rang in the long prayer for peace, yet they have not been uneventful ones. Many changes have taken place and many of those brave sons who returned home have gone to join the ever increasing grand army above, and it is fitting that a day should be set apart when the flowers are in bloom to decorate the graves of those fallen heroes, who lie buried in our midst, with beautiful flowers.

Many of those who assembled last year to pay tribute to those gone before are today numbered with the dead, but though dead they are not forgotten and today when the members of Paul Revere Post assemble as in years past they will not forget to place on their grave with tender and loving hand the fairest of blossoms.

The Post will assemble at headquarters at 7 o'clock. Sergeant-Major Penniman and one comrade will proceed to Mount Auburn cemetery and decorate the grave of Col. Paul Revere.

Senior Vice-Commander Curtis and a detail of comrades and the Chaplain of the Day will visit the cemetery at the National Sailors' Home and decorate the old sailors' graves.

Junior Vice-Commander DeForrest, with twenty-five comrades will visit Mt. Wollaston cemetery and decorate the many graves of deceased comrades to be found in those beautiful grounds.

Officer of the Day Dunbar and ten comrades will look after the graves of old heroes in the Hancock and English cemeteries.

Comrade Cleverly will visit the North Weymouth cemetery and decorate the grave of Comrade Collyer.

Comrade Leavitt will decorate the grave of Comrade Cole in Greenwood cemetery, Chelsea.

At 9.30 o'clock the Post, under command of Commander John D. Williams, will proceed to West Quincy and hold appropriate services. Upon their return from West Quincy the Post will partake of a collation at Hancock hall, which will be served under the direction of Comrade George H. Osborne and members of Woman's Relief Corps, No. 103.

At 2 o'clock a line will be formed in front of head quarters and headed by the American band, and accompanied by the Woman's Relief corps and escorted by Francis L. Souther camp Sons of Veterans, will march to Mount Wollaston cemetery, where the soldiers' monument will be decorated, and appropriate ceremonies held. The Post will then march to headquarters where the line will be dismissed.

Water Supply.

Representative Johnson of Haverhill, chairman of the House Committee on Water Supply, submitted on Monday in the House the report of said committee on the petition of the city of Quincy for an act to enable said city to supply itself with water.

The new draft provides that the city may do this "after the purchase of the franchise, corporate property, rights and privileges of the Quincy Water Company as provided in Section 9 of Chapter 162 of the Acts of the year 1883."

The report is not a unanimous one, a bare majority being in its favor. These are Senators Bradley of Essex and Wyer of Middlesex, and Representatives Johnson of Haverhill, McFethries of Springfield, Danforth of Lynnfield and Nutting of Northampton. There are five dissenters who will offer as a substitute the bill first reported, viz: Senator Cooke of Worcester, Representative Finney of Plymouth, Howe of Gardner, Smith of Mansfield and Burke of Quincy.

The amendment submitted to the Quincy City Council proposed a different way of procedure from that laid down in the charters of the Water Company and of the city, but this amendment does not appear to have been included in the draft as submitted, and even if the new act is passed the city will be no better off than before it petitioned.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Rev. Edward A. Robinson was confined at his home by illness and consequently was unable to keep his appointment at the young men's meeting Sunday.

Mr. E. L. Robbins spoke very acceptably, as his substitute, upon the subject advertised, "A Needless Loss." His address was plain and practical, and was listened to with much interest by those present.

Rev. Mr. Humphrey of the West Quincy M. E. church will speak next Sunday on "Who is the true radical in reformatory work."

—The prohibition of the liquor traffic ought to be effective in Maine now if ever. At the last session of the Legislature a law was passed which imposes a sentence of sixty days in jail in addition to a fine of $100, for the first offence of selling liquor. Holding a United States license and having liquor on the premises will be evidence sufficient for conviction. Habitual drinkers will not be allowed to sit on the jury. Express companies which knowingly bring liquor into the state for illegal sale are liable to a $500 fine and one year's imprisonment. Temperance leaders have formed a league with $100,000 capital to enforce the law. It would seem as if the liquor interest had sustained a severe blow.

—This is the way a man in Arizona, living near the Mexican line, evades the egg tariff. He feeds his hens in Mexico where grain is cheap, and then drives them across the line to their nests in the United States. It is hardly necessary to add that the man is a Yankee.

—Mr. Phineas T. Pratt, of Holbrook, died on Thursday at the advanced age of 85 years. He was prominently connected with local affairs and was for many years a stone contractor.

Street Watering by Assesments.

The Malden city government is wrestling with an ordinance concerning street sprinkling. The city recently accepted the legislative act in regard to this matter, which is the necessary first steps for carrying it out, but the last step cannot be agreed upon.

The ordinance originally brought up made it necessary to secure the signatures of a majority of land owners on a street, before that thoroughfare could be watered The aldermen did not like this restriction, and said that the city could not send to Lynn, or wherever else the property owner might live, to get his name, and neither would they take it for granted that the owner would give his permission. So the aldermen crossed out the section, and made it a question for the street commission to decide, whether or not a street should be watered.

The council last night, declared that this amendment gave the street commission altogether too much power; that the citizens of Malden would be helpless in their hands, etc., and finally recommitted the ordinance back to the committee, with instructions to have it printed, with and without the amendments.

An attempt will be made to have the ordinance passed, in one form or another, before the summer is over.

Fire Inquest.

Judge James H. Flint has made the following report upon the fire inquest held last Saturday on the fires in Durgin & Merrill's block:

> It is found there is evidence that the fires occurring in the building known as Durgin & Merrill's block, on Hancock street, in said Quincy, on May 3, 1891 and May 12, 1891 were both of incendiary origin. That there is sufficient evidence to indicate that one Charles F. Tirrell of said Quincy caused said fire of May 3, 1891. That the evidence regarding the fire of May 12, 1891, is insufficient to connect any person therewith.

A Good Scare.

The alarm from Box 52 Thursday afternoon was for the burning of grass and underbrush in a ravine off Norfolk street, Wollaston. It raged quite fiercely, covering considerable territory and threatened the new house of Mr. A. Hale Kingsley. In close proximity also were the residences of C. W. Tucker, Watson H. Brazee and Mr. Edgarton. Hose 2 men and neighbors made quick work of extinguishing the fire by beating it out. The apparatus from the central fire station was promptly on hand had its services been needed.

District Court, Quincy.

Edward Starr, John Orr, and Michael Quinn, all of Braintree, were arraigned in court this morning for disturbing a religious meeting at East Braintree last Tuesday evening, and Edward Starr and John Orr for assault on George C. Buker.

The evidence for the Government was that a religious meeting was being held at the residence of George C. Buker, and a large crowd gathered in the street in front of the house and greatly disturbed the meeting by shouting, whistling and throwing stones against the house.

Mr. Buker testified that he went outside to get an officer, when Starr knocked off his hat and Orr struck him in the face. The defence was a general denial, that of Quinn being that he was in the house at the meeting until 9 o'clock, when he went home.

The court found Edward Starr and John Orr guilty of an assault and imposed a fine of $2 each. They were also found guilty of disturbing a religious meeting and fined $5 each. Michael Quinn was discharged.

Attempt to Wreck Train.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck a train on the Old Colony near Brockton, Thursday evening. A piece of rail was wedged into a switch near the old cemetery. The 8.15 train from Boston passed over safely, but passengers were considerably shaken up and frightened.

Boston's New Daily.

Boston is to have a new daily on Monday June 1. It will be styled the News, and will be a morning paper sold for one cent.

The Quincy Accident.

The report of the Old Colony railroad for the quarter ending March 31st, gives: Gross earnings, $1,711,864; increase, $50,847. Net, $340,043; decrease, $222,593; charges, $434,982; increase, 11,771. Deficit, $94,389; increase, $234,364. The deficit was swelled this year by the payment of $136,022 on account of the Quincy accident.

Police Reorganization.

A committee of the police of the city Officers McGrath, Spear and Williams, called upon Mayor Fairbanks Saturday evening with certain grievances, which are understood to be poor pay, the non-enforcement of the civil service rules, etc.

The interview coming the next evening after the incident in the Square, when one of the committee had ordered the Mayor to "move on," it did not prove as satisfactory as was hoped, and may prove a boomerang. The Mayor informed the committee that it was his purpose to reorganize the police force, reducing it in numbers; and the committee and others are now anxious as to the outcome.

Dorchester Regatta.

A sweepstake race will be sailed Memorial day under the auspices of the Dorchester Yacht Club. The entrance fee is $2 and the first prize will be 60 per cent. and the second 40 per cent.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, May 27, 1891.

Representative Johnson of Haverhill, who is in charge of the Quincy water supply bill (which has been reported as described in the interests of the Quincy Water Company, rather than of the city) has had it assigned to the first place in the House calendar for June 2. Senator Cooke and Representatives Finney, Howe, Smith and Burke dissent. Mr. Burke gave notice today that he should offer amendments to the bill. Of course they will be in the interest of the city of Quincy and it is expected that there will be a lively contest over the bill.

The House has passed to be engrossed the bill which provides for a commission to consider the taxation of corporations and the matter of a uniform system of taxation with other states. But the doomage bill has finely been disposed of by reference to the next Legislature. An attempt was made on Monday to reconsider the vote of Friday by which it was referred and though its friends put forth every effort and had the moral support of Secretary Sessions of the State Board of Agriculture and Major Winn sitting in the gallery, yet they could do no better than get a vote of 63 yeas to 71 nays. The queer part of it is that this fate of the bill was precipitated by the indiscreet action of its particular friend, Mr. Edson of Barnstable.

The last ditch for the $1000 salary bill was reached on Friday. It was taken from the table and put upon its passage. Mr. Lane of Springfield had a written speech against the bill and the members tried to clap and guy him down, but he pluckily stood his ground. The chief speaker for the bill was Mr. Murray of Fitchburg, who urged at least that enough Republicans vote with the majority of the Democrats to pass the bill. Mr. Carter of Wakefield ridiculed the House for voting for more money and then adjourning to see a parcel of boys play base ball; the members had been paid more than they had earned. The vote on passing the bill to be engrossed was 78 yeas to 85 nays.

Both branches have come to an agreement on the municipal lighting bill and now it only needs the signature of the Governor to become law. It first passed the Senate, then the House, with amendments. Then it went back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendments. The Senate concurred, but with amendments to the amendments. Then it went to the House for concurrence in these. This the House voted without debate or change and so agreement was finally reached. It involves a great departure and marks a stage in a long contest, but the rights of the companies for making gas and electric light are well protected and now towns and cities can go ahead and contract for building lighting plants of their own, just as they can for a water supply.

Wednesday afternoon in the House, Mr. Pratt of Lowell, one of the dissenters from the plan of the redistricting committee, asked leave to offer a substitute bill. It was the so-called Lodge bill and the accompanying tables of population gave the several districts, as proposed, the following numbers of people: first, 173,068; second, 170,257; third, 171,798; fourth, 175,000; fifth, 170,233; sixth, 171,490; seventh, 173,567; eighth, 172,982; ninth, 171,831; tenth, 170,516; eleventh, 171,992; twelfth, 172,068; thirteenth, 172,667.

All of Tuesday and Wednesday in the Senate were given to the House bill to regulate assessment endowment orders and the Senate gallery and the floor outside of the rail were filled with men who looked as if they had staked their last dollar on a chance to get $100 for $50 out of these rotten concerns. It was a fight between the Massachusetts companies and the foreign companies, whether the former should have the field of the State to themselves or whether they should share it with others. The foreigners won by a fair margin, but the bill was changed so that no new companies shall be started after May 1, 1891, and so that the insurance commissioner may have a more strict oversight over them. The amount of reserve fund was reduced from eighty-five to fifty per cent. of the assessments.

On Wednesday the House postponed to June 2 the bill to repeal the public bar law. Without debate of consequence, they killed the eight-hour bill for state, county, city and town employes by vote of 62 to 90 on giving it another reading. RULE.

Reception and Sale.

The reception and sale held Wednesday evening at Christ's church parish house, was a pronounced success. The grounds were very tastefully illuminated and a very large number of people were present and enjoyed the entertainment provided.

Among the many articles for sale were noticed some very fine photographs of the rector, the Curtis memorial fountain and the vested choir. During the evening the following programme was rendered:

Gala Day, Thompson's Island.

Tuesday was a gala occasion for the farm school on Thompson's island, it being the first spring visiting day. The steamer Gen. Lincoln carried about 175 friends of the boys and other visitors from Boston to the island in the forenoon. They were met by the boys with a band at the landing and escorted to Gardner hall, where musical and literary exercises were in order.

The visitors were also taken over the farm, which was found to be in excellent condition. Besides the regular crops, a cranberry bog is under cultivation, and there are 2500 head of asparagus. Fifteen hundred small trees have been planted this spring. The visitors returned to Boston early in the afternoon.—Herald.

Quincy Shakespeare Club.

The Quincy Shakespeare Club tendered to its friends Tuesday evening a very pleasing entertainment at Faxon hall, and was greeted by a crowded house. It was the event of the month, everyone present being delighted with the programme presented.

Mr. Frank A. Page, the president, welcomed those present and there was considerable pleasantry in his brief opening remarks.

An orchestra from Ditson's then gave a selection which was of a high order.

"The Nettle," a pleasing comedy, was next presented by two members of the club: Mr. Wing as Guy Charleton, and Mrs. Saville as Dulcie Meredith. The Nettle was a weekly paper of satire and society. Guy takes exception to a comment in the paper which he thought reflected on him personally. He calls at the office of publication to get satisfaction, but meets the editor's charming sister instead of the quill driver. He is smitten, makes love and finally becomes engaged. Rather an unusual occurrence in a printing office, but it offers a suggestions which is that the days of a "fighting editor" are over. But a thrashing would be preferable to such scenes every day. Both, however, took their parts very well.

After another selection by the orchestra, Mrs. Page gave two charming songs, and the audience would have been pleased to hear another. A violin solo in two parts by Mr. Hadley followed, and he was recalled.

Mrs. Page and Mrs. Rice, accompanied by Mrs. Smith, sang duets from the "Tuscan Folk Songs" which were well received.

The crowning feature was the presentation of J. K. Jerome's comedy, "Sunset," by the following cast:

Lois } Half sisters,	Miss Manson
Joan }	Miss Adams
Aunt Drusilla,	Miss Floyd
Mr. Rivers, Lois father,	Mr. Dewson
Azariah Stodd,	Mr. Crane
Lawrence Leigh,	Mr. Wing

Each carried their part almost to perfection, but Miss Manson as Lois and Mr. Crane as Azariah Stodd were particularly good. The final scene was rather abrupt.

The prospects of the club were never brighter than just now, and next season promises to be a most enjoyable one as the club has received new life from its new membership. The officers for the ensuing year are:

President,—Emery L. Crane.
Vice-President,—Howard M. Wing.
Secretary and Treasurer,—Miss Carrie Floyd.
Director,—Mrs. G. G. Saville, Mrs. A. E. Sproul and Mr. H. W. Lull.

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1891.

A Memory.

The morning stars were growing pale,
  But still we slept, as soldiers sleep
Who know not fear, deep in the vale
  Between the mountains dark and steep.

A quiet brooded o'er the camp,
  And not a cloud was in the sky,
With soothing dew our brows were damp,
  A sweet breeze fanned us tenderly.

It may have been a mocking bird,
  Low trilling to the dawning day,
But every veteran dreamed he heard
  His love sing as he sleeping lay.

Some loves were wives and maidens some,
  And some were mothers sweet and fair;
And some were children left at home
  Without a mother's tender care.

But ah! how mournful was that strain,
  That low, sad song in dreaming ears!
It rose and fell, and rose again,
  And died as if in sobs and tears.

Then brayed the trumpet, clashed the drum;
  "Fall in!" Up sprang we all as one,
Bullets like bees began to hum,
  And warm red blood like wine to run.

On which side fought we, shall I say?
  (We fought so hard, with hearts so true!)
We may have worn the stainless Gray,
  Or loyally the precious Blue.

Some fell, some lived, and all were brave,
  For all had heard love sing that morn.
O woman, weeping by a grave!
  O golden dream to tatters torn!

What, without love, is victory worth?
  What is defeat if love be won?
Hearts of the South, hearts of the North,
  Throb louder than the drum or gun.

Household Receipts.

CUSTARD PIE. Line a very deep pie plate with a good rich crust rolled quite thick and made to stand up around the edge of the plate. Put a quart of milk in a basin and set it in a kettle of hot water to get quite warm. Do not let it scald. Beat three good-sized eggs and one-third cup of sugar thoroughly together. Stir this into the warm milk with a pinch of salt. Fill your crust and bake a rich brown. Grate over the top while warm a generous sprinkling of nutmeg; 'tis good.

DELICIOUS SPONGE CAKE. Beat the yolks and whites of two eggs separately, and mix nearly all of one cup of sugar with the whites, the rest with the yolks. Add one cup flour, one generous teaspoon baking powder, and one-quarter teaspoon salt. After mixing all these well together, add one-half cup boiling water.

POTATOES WITH CREAM. Select small potatoes; pare a strip round and cook in boiling salted water till tender. Drain and peel them. Put them in a dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, put a bit of butter on each, and pour over them one cup of hot cream.

OMELET. Allow one egg for each person; two eggs make a small omelet. Beat the eggs well till light, season with pepper and salt and a spoonful of finely chopped chives or shallot and parsley; put a little butter in a pan, and when it is melted and hot, put in the eggs, etc., and fry. When the under side is colored and the top is about the consistency of scrambled eggs, slip it out of the pan into a hot dish, fold it over and serve at once.

Salt put in water which surrounds the ordinary glue-pot causes a hotter glue to be obtained than where simple water is used. Salt in the water where mason work is being done in cold weather prevents disintegration by frost.

Pensions.

The following new rules in regard to pensions we are informed will go into effect at the National Sailor' Home in this city on the first of June. The old sailors think it is a little hard that their money should be taken from them at an institution of this kind:

FIRST,—Each applicant for admission to the home who is a United States pensioner, and each inmate who is or may become a United States pensioner, must file his pension certificate with the trustees, to be retained by them whilst he remains in the home. If not a pensioner, the applicant or inmate must file an affidavit that he is not.

SECOND,—Each applicant who is, and each inmate who is or who may become a United States pensioner must execute and file a consent or agreement to assign and transfer to the treasurer the whole amount of his pension when and as he receives the same. Such amount shall be subject to the disposition of the trustees, provided that they may if they deem best, pay the same or any part thereof towards the support of the dependent family of the pensioner, and provided further, that to such pensioner there be allowed and paid the sum of two dollars per month for his own use, so long as no improper use of such money is made leading to his misconduct, or to a breaking of the house rules, in which event the treasurer may suspend the payment of the whole, or any part of said allowance to such pensioner, until by vote of the trustees such payment is resumed.

EDISON HOPES to have ready for the world's fair an invention which, combined with the telephone, will enable a man to sit in his parlor at home and see and hear all that is going on upon a theatre stage. This sounds like romance, but Edison says it is solid fact, and he has given to the world so many marvels that when he says a miracle is possible people are inclined to believe it is.

Little Daughter—"Say, mamma, won't you take me to Cousin Jane's funeral?"

Mamma—"No, petite; you went to the matinee yesterday and a party last night. You mustn't have too many entertainments at a time."

"Stop, Charlie, don't ask me. I've always regarded you as a good joke, that's all," said the fair maiden.

"Well, I tell you what," returned Charlie, "you'd better snap me right up. Good jokes are hard to find nowadays."

Mamma—"I hope my little boy, while dining with friends, remembered what I told him about not taking cake the second time."

Little Boy—"Yes, mamma; I remembered, and took two pieces the first time."

The Village Pastor—"Johnny, you tell me you have been to Sunday school?"

The Bad Boy—"Yes, sir."

The Village Pastor—"But, Johnny, your hair is wet."

The Bad Boy—"Yes, sir; it's a Baptist Sunday school.—Boston Times.

Druggist—"I don't see why we should be expected to sell postage stamps. They are not in our line."

Brown—"Of course they are not. When you run out of them you cannot sell anything else as a substitute."

Hollis Street Theatre.

"Taming the Shrew," is announced for this afternoon and evening at the Hollis Street Theatre and will prove an attractive holiday program. For the third and last week of the engagement of Augustin Daly's Company a varied repertoire is announced, namely, Monday night, "A Night Off;" Tuesday night and Wednesday afternoon, "Railroad of Love;" Wednesday night, "Love's Labor Lost;" Thursday night, "As You Like It;" Friday and Saturday night and Saturday afternoon, "7-20-9." Seats are now on sale.

Boston Museum.

Kellar, the wonderful wizard and magician is delighting large audiences at the Museum. He has many new and startling mysteries. Mrs. Kellar assists him, appearing in the famous Karmos.

THE BOSTON Home Journal in speaking of Memorial day, says: "Every year this holiday becomes more and more a happy feast time. The sadness in the honor of which it was first set apart has been almost entirely healed by time. Scarce a scar remains. The dead whose graves are annually decorated have to this generation become only dead whose fate is a trifle happier than the countless millions who have passed through the same exit into the mystery beyond,—they are to be remembered, others are forgotten. It is a pretty sentiment, now that all enmity has been buried too, and the graves of those who fought against the flag and of those who marched under it are alike remembered. It is not the cause, after all, that makes men great, it is the faith in it. Those who die for the wrong as well as those who die for right are heroes, for would not wrong have been right had the victory been different?"

POOR BUT RICH IN DOGS. One of the assessors relates an odd experience in Bucktown, near Indianapolis. He called at the house of an old woman, whose furniture was valued at fifty cents. Under the law he had to place the value at one dollar, which would make her tax a fraction over a cent. As he was about to leave the house he discovered that the old woman was the happy owner of six dogs, on which she was assessed eleven dollars.—Philadelphia Ledger.

—The Reading Chronicle had the following advertisement in last week's issue: "Wanted—Rain." The rain came before the ink was dry on the paper. Moral: If you don't get what you want, advertise for it in your local newspaper.

—The United States Supreme Court has decided in favor of the constituional right of a state to levy taxes upon the property of a corporation lying within its territory, although the corporation is engaged in an interstate business. It will now be appropriate for Massachusetts to collect from the Western Union telegraph company and similar corporations.

—In the North American Review Henry Clews prophesies good times for the country during the remainder of this year. He does not regard the movement of gold to Europe as a cause of alarm. Mr. Clews also believes that New York city is destined to become the financial centre of the world.

—A good many people are Nationalists to the extent that they would like to see the railroads and the telegraphs of the country controlled by the government, as the post-office is now.

—George E. Olmstead, a Brockwayville Penn., boy just out of knee breeches, has been offered $40,000 for a fire escape he has just patented. Like a sensible boy he is going to take the money and give himself a good education.

—Boston has a "Bicycle Inn," at which place bicycles can be stored by wheelmen riding into the city. The "Inn" is at 194-196 Columbus avenue, and E. E. Brown is landlord.

—The postmaster at North Lansing, N. Y., was appointed during the administration of John Quincy Adams, and has held the position ever since. His name is Roswell Beardsley.

To make an impregnable glue, soak ordinary glue in water until it softens, and remove it before it has lost its primitive form. After this, dissolve it in linseed oil over a slow fire until it is brought to the consistency of a jelly. This glue withstands water.

—The New York Sun having declared that "No president can be elected a second time," the Washington Post queries: "Then what will happen should Harrison and Cleveland be the nominees next year?" Perhaps the Farmers Alliance may have a third candidate in the field and he be elected.

—Director Leech of the United States mint has issued a circular letter to artists inviting them to supply designs for the new coins,—a half dollar, quarter dollar, and dime.

—Charles G. Hathaway has been promoted from the position of cashier to that of president of the Randolph National bank, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Royal W. Turner.

—The so-called bond investment corporations from New Hampshire and other states will need speedily to pack up their belongings and skip from Massachusetts; the senate by a practically unanimous vote, has passed the house bill declaring the business of these concerns unlawful in this commonwealth.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale is shortly to commence a serial story, on life as lived in the Boston of today. It will touch the condition of our every day life in New England most closely. This story is to be published exclusively in his weekly paper, the Boston Commonwealth.

—Plymouth householders protest against paying thirty cents a hundred for ice claiming that the price is higher than that asked in other towns. Some of the kickers are talking up a co-operative ice company next season.

☞ Two boys at Prairie du Chien, Wis. died a few days ago from the effects of excessive cigarette smoking. A post-mortem examination showed the presence of phosphorous, together with nicotine of the arsenical solution used in preparing wrappers.

Teachings of Science.

In the last chapter some of the effects of the habitual, excessive use of alcholics were mentioned, especially delirium tremens. Insanity is another condition of the brain caused by chronic alcoholic indulgence. The statistics of all insane asylums bear evidence of this fact. In the list of causes of this most terrible of calamities, intemperance occupies a prominent place; but those who have given most attention to the subject express the opinion that this disease is more likely to attack the offspring of drunkards than the drunkards themselves. These latter cases are not usually charged, in the statistics, to intemperance, though they are remote consequences of it. The first attack of insanity in the drunkard is usually recovered from under asylum treatment and where further indulgence is prevented; but the patient too often returns to his drink when released, and subsequent attacks are very liable to occur, from which the patient is far less likely to recover. Occurring in the children of drunkards, the first attack is more liable to be permanent. Idiocy, blindness, deafness, and other defects of the nervous system are painfully common in the children of the intemperate. In what is called chronic alcoholism, paralysis from brain and nerve impairments is a not infrequent occurrence. It takes different forms as it affects different parts, and usually indicates such an advanced and extreme state of alcoholic poisoning as renders recovery very rare. Fits of apoplexy, often speadily fatal in the first paroxysm, and almost ineveitably so when repeated, is another result of intemperance, and when partial recovery takes place, brain impairment remains, frequently accompanied by palsy.

Epilepsy is another disease of the brain and nervous system sometimes produced by alcoholism.

Slept in her Coffin.

Bridget Cahill of St. Louis, almost 80 years of age, applied recently for a warrant for the arrest of Delia McGlynn who she charged wtth stealing her coffin, smashing it into pieces and burning it. In reply to the officers inquiry she made the following statement:

"For fifteen years she and the old woman had lived together. Bridget had an idea she might die suddenly, and according to her own crude statement she had a dread of the grave. That troubled her. Finally she had a coffin made to her notion. It was fixed up in great style with cushions, a head rest and several iron bars to keep it from caving in.

"I've slept in it for the last year," said Bridget, "and I don't want a better bed."

It was this that Delia burnt. The warrant was not issued and the old woman seemed inconsolable at her loss and walked out of court crying as if her heart was broken.

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Poetry.

The Wood Buttercup.

We marvel why thou raisest up
Thy tiny golden cup
In this sequestered place,
Where dense bows interlace,
Thou that dost love the light,
Pure, warm, and bright.

Did a malign, relentless power,
In some ill-omened hour,
Thus have thee woodward sent
In cruel banishment,—
Thou that dost bravely bloom,
Despite the gloom.

Should an adverse, unfriendly fate
Upon our pathway wait,
May we not bow the head,
But lift it high instead
In patient bravery,
Remembering thee.

THE BURNED WILL.

I had been engaged to my cousin Kenneth for two years, and the course of true love had run as smoothly as possible.

Nobody objected. Nobody prophesied evil for the future.

In fact, my uncle Graham, Kenneth's father, had been delighted when he discovered our liking for each other.

"It was what I hoped from the first," he said. "Bessy will make a good wife, and she is the only girl I know that I should like to have about the house. Of course, you will both live with me, and everything I have will be Kenneth's when I go."

Was ever beginning more auspicious?

When I left boarding-school and came to my uncle's to live, I had never seen him or my cousin. I had been left an orphan as a little child, and knew I was to keep house for my uncle Graham when I was old enough; but he had been abroad, Kenneth at school and college, and I had only been able to wonder what my unknown relatives were like.

How delightful it was to find them charming, to be made much of by them, to be petted by the servants so that my housekeeping was a mere position of dignity involving no responsibilities, and finally, to know that in Kenneth I had met my fate.

I had nothing to lose, as those have who leave a happy home for an unkown future, but everything to gain.

Life had just begun for me. For six months no cloud arose upon my horizon.

How could I fancy that a storm was brooding? It came in a most unromantic shape.

That important period in a young man's history, the election day on which he casts his first vote, had arrived for Kenneth, and he voted for the wrong man. I still think it was for the wrong man, for it is not in a woman's nature to set politics before love.

Kenneth voted for the man of whom his father disproved. It was a terrible surprise to my uncle, a great shock, an unendurable offence.

He believed that Kenneth respected his opinions, would be guided by them in all things.

He reproached him bitterly at first, and placed the matter in such a light that my sympathies were his, and I reproached him also, though rather by tears than in words.

Of the question itself I knew nothing, but my uncle was a large man with a loud voice, and a confidence in himself seldom equaled.

Besides, he had been in office, and it appeared to me that he must know which was the right man in the right place.

Kenneth talked a great deal about his principles and how a man could not change them to please anybody. The house rung with reproaches, arguments, and finally with abuse.

Kenneth uttered words he never should have spoken to his father, and my uncle was horribly offensive.

One day they were at it hammer-and-tongs, and in order to escape the noise I went out for a walk.

On my return I found my uncle, white as a sheet, pacing the library floor.

He paused on seeing me, and lifting his hand toward heaven, cried out:

"Stand where you are, Bessy, and listen to me. From this time forth Kenneth is nothing to me, nothing to you. To both of us he is dead."

"Uncle!" I grasped.

"Not a word," said he—"not a word. I have turned him out of my house. I had reason. I am justified. Tomorrow I shall alter my will. Kenneth shall never have one penny of mine. I'll make you my heiress—you—you! Do you hear me? You stuck by me. You are all I have now!"

And my uncle flung himself upon a sofa and buried his face in the pillows.

In vain I pleaded, in vain I wept. Nothing touched him.

I hoped time would change his resolution, but he never faltered.

What had become of Kenneth I did not know. He never wrote to me. He never sent any message. He had been vexed with me during the last few days. And as time went on I made up my mind that he no longer loved me. He could easily have communicated with mutual friends had he desired to do so.

I had loved him dearly. This sudden separation made me very miserable.

I was vexed with my uncle, but I could not leave him. He had been a hale, hearty, middle-aged man when the quarrel took place.

From that time he broke down rapidly, changing before my eyes to an old man.

His spirits left him. His temper grew outrageous. He refused to see his friends, and at last he took to his bed. I nursed him tenderly.

One day, as I sat beside him, he said, more gently than usual:

"Bessy, you will be a rich woman very soon. All I have is left to you. I have heard of my son. The unfilial and unnatural boy has not prospered. He is in need, I believe. I am sorry."

I sunk on my knees and implored him to send for Kenneth, to forgive him, to embrace him once more.

"He is your natural heir," I said. "I hope you may live many years. But pray alter your will. Give him your blessing, and forgiveness, and his portion. You will be glad when you have done it—glad whether you live or die."

He shook his head.

"Neither will I give him," he said. "And I have made my last testament so carefully that you cannot help him, as no doubt you would. Anything you attempt to bestow on him you will only lose yourself. He shall live to regret his disobedience and ingratitude to a good father."

Then he fell into a rage that was, I believe, his death warrant, for he died that night. I was alone with him. I had sent for the doctor, but he had not come.

When all was over I kissed him, and said aloud:

"If your spirit is aware of what I do it will thank me for it. I cannot take my cousin Kenneth's fortune."

Then I opened the desk where the private papers were kept, found the will, glanced over it and saw that it indeed gave everything to me, with the proviso that I should, under no circumstances, aid my cousin, and folding it again thrust it deep into the heart of the grate fire, and watched the flames consume it.

"You will be glad, dear uncle," I said, "when soul has triumphed over the body, and you know how anger warped your mind."

At that instant feet flew up the stairs, and the doctor, followed by the servant I had sent for him, entered the room.

After the funeral I packed my small belongings, put into my purse the money which my uncle's generosity and my natural economy had made my own, and left the house.

I had seen my cousin in the great drawing-room in which we assembled. He was thin and wan, and did not look toward me. In common with everybody else, he still believed himself disinherited, and I resolved that he should always believe that his father had relented and destroyed the will.

I had made all my plans for leaving the town, and soon found a situation as teacher of a country school many miles away.

Through a friend I heard that Kenneth had come into the property, and that everyone felt that my uncle had done well in forgiving his son, and the popular opinion was that he would have left me something had not death come to him so suddenly.

I was not happy in my new position. I did not fill the place well. I had no proclivity for teaching, and I had been too long used to being petted and cared for to take kindly to the hard life of a country school-teacher, but never once did I regret what I had done.

Shame would have been mine if I had taken Kenneth's fortune—grief if he had been in need, and I unable to help him; for though he had forgotten me so easily I still loved him fondly, and always should I knew. Even that I should one day hear that he had chosen another for his wife, I could still give him a sister's tenderness while life lasted.

The winter passed, spring came. The grass that grew about the rustic schoolhouse was flecked with golden dandelions, when one day, just as my last scholar passed out at the door, a shadow fell across the floor, and looking up I saw my cousin Kenneth.

"Cousin Bessy," he said, advancing and holding out his hand, "I have had a long search for you. Why did you hide yourself away? I am sure my father did not mean to forget you. I know he would be anxious to see that you had a share of what he left. You were a daughter to him. I have come to talk to you of that," he said politely, but coldly; no trace of the lover remained in his manner.

The man I had promised to marry, whose betrothal ring I yet wore, spoke to me of money and money only in this our first hour of meeting.

My pride arose, I drew myself to my full height—not a great one to be sure.

"Cousin Kenneth," I said, "thank you very much. I know my uncle intended to remember me, but since fate interfered, the matter is settled."

"It is my duty to protest," he said. "I am merely acting as my father's substitute." Paying his debts, remember, not mine, and his fortune was very large."

His manner was as cold as ice as he stood there measuring his words, and looking away from the woman who loved him so, who longed to cast herself into his arms and cry:

"Thank Heaven, we meet once more!"

My heart ached, my brain throbbed.

"I will not accept charity," I cried in my grief and wrath, "I will accept it from no one, least of all from you. I can earn my bread."

And I rejoiced that, though he did not dream it and never shall, he owed all that "large fortune" of which he spoke to me.

Now suddenly his face changed.

"Bessy," he said, "how strange that I once thought you had a tender heart! I was disabused of that when you sent me back my letters and told me through the pen of another that you despised me too much to hear from me again."

I stared at him astonished.

"I never received a letter!" I cried. "I wondered that you did not care to write, but——"

I paused; on the same instant we both understood that in some way my uncle had intercepted the messenger who brought my letter and had written one which furthered his own plans and made Kenneth believe me false to him.

"Don't speak!" I cried. "Don't ask me anything. Don't tell me anything. Only believe me. I never had a word from you though I longed for one. Believe me by our old friendship."

"And I thought you false and cruel all this while," he sighed.

He held out his arms and I crept into them, and we kissed each other, we forgave the wrathful old man for all the sorrow he had given us—forgave him utterly and forever.

As for the burned will, that is my secret, mine alone. I keep that even from my husband, and when he says:

"After all, he forgave me at last, poor old father," I rejoice that I have done so.

CATERPILLARS. Hordes of caterpillars are overrunning eastern Connecticut, and in every orchard the trees are filled with the silken webs woven by the little pests. The apple crop, which gave such abundant promise, will be little better than a failure because of this plague.

The farmers are fighting them by firing blank cartridges into their webs from shotguns, and a continual fusilade is going on which reminds one of Fourth of July.

Another Trip—No 7.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

It was Sunday. We wanted very much to stay and hear the three preachers who were to hold forth at the old church up on the side of the mountain. The service would begin at 11 o'clock in the morning and hold until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There was, however, a big "gap" between us and the one we wanted to reach on the morrow, "Big Stone," and the prospect was anything but cheering for the three "imperial tramps" who were to take the trip. Then again, we thought we could not stand the severe contrast between going to church in such a place, and St. Paul, as it looked on the map. We were satisfied by the prominence given to it, that it must be the Mecca to which our hopes had been casting such wistful glances. We didn't know whether it was named after the old apostle, or the western city of the same name, but we mistrusted the latter for there was a Minneapolis on the opposite side of the river.

It was twenty-three miles down the Clinch valley to St. Paul, which was as far as the passenger trains went. Beyond that to Norton the road-bed had been made, the ties placed on it and the rails on top of the ties, but it was unballasted. We bade Pat good-by, got on board the train and started down the valley. The day was warm and all along the way, in the river, could be seen hundreds of turtles sunning themselves on stones and logs. There was no fishing in that river, unless one fished for them, and they were not good to make even "mock turtle" soup. At the upper side of the county we passed a "blind tiger" anchored in the stream. It was "anchored" by a long rope tied to a tree on the bank. This was one of the meanest looking and most dangerous "tigers" in that part of the country. It was 12.30 P. M. when we arrived at St. Paul. We stepped from the train, took a good survey of our surroundings and drew a very long sigh.

The "Sailor" had secured a little piece of paper—meaning much to us—on which was written the following: "Mr. ——, foreman track laying; Dear Sir—Please pass Mr. —— and two men on the construction train to Norton, at their own risk. Pass not good on hand car. Allow two to return." This was duly signed by the engineer in charge. The three referred to were the "Sailor," "Buck" and myself. The construction train was a locomotive, and was to leave early Monday morning. We cleared our conscience by trying hard to get out of the place that night by going on a hand-car, and would have succeeded but there were two too many of us. Sadly we wended our way down over the bank to the hotel. The survey we had taken revealed to us the fact that there might be a Mecca somewhere, but it was not there. St. Paul consisted of a depot, a store, one or more liquor saloons, three or four houses and the hotel. We registered our names and sat down to rest and meditate. There were two chairs both occupied, an old settee, a trunk and a little antiquated bed in one corner of the room.

The "Sailor" and "Buck" tried the edge of the bed for awhile, but the top of the trunk wasn't flat enough for a very comfortable seat, so I stood up after making a failure on the trunk.

After dinner we walked up the river a little distance past another "blind tiger" in the river, and wondered if the afternoon would ever wear away. We were told that twelve murders had been committed there, or near that place, since the first of last December, and we believed the man implicitly when he told us that the town was "completely given over to the devil." Minneapolis was just across the bridge and boasted of two houses, if they could be called such. Judging from the plans and prospectuses of these places one would suppose them to be both large and prosperous.

Broad avenues and streets with high sounding names and brilliant (future) prospects were on the plans, but nowhere else.

After supper we sat on top of a board fence and sung "gospel hymns." Our audience was not large but respectfully attentive. When bed time came three of us were put into one room which contained two beds. The rooms adjoining were separated by a light board partition, through which the slighest sound could be heard. I had promised to have the "Sailor" and "Buck" up in season for the train the next morning, and my first effort in that direction was 2 o'clock, my second attempt was 4 o'clock and was successful.

"Buck" hastily dressed and went up to the depot to interview the engineer, in order to find out what time he wanted to start down the road. After going through a lot of "red tape" he was told that the engine would not go till between 6 and 7 o'clock, probably about 7. We took an early breakfast, parted with the hotel without reluctance and were at the depot at a quarter to six, ready to use our pass, but the engine had been gone nearly half an hour.

It was a case of getting badly left.

(To be continued.)

A Dollar worth Two Thousand.

A silver dollar of the coinage of 1804 is said to be the rarest of all American coins, and to be valued at $2000.

The reason given for the scarcity of the date of 1804 is that during the war with Tripoli the total coinage was $19,570. Most of the dollars were sent to pay the sailors, who exchanged them with the natives on the coast of Africa for provisions and supplies. A desire for the bright coins caused the King to call them in from the subjects, who thereupon buried many.

Mr. Frank M. Connor of Lynn is the fortunate owner of one of these coins, he having attained it through a bank in Lynn.

There are only five other specimens known to be in existence, and they are owned by Mr. Stickney of Salem, Mr. William S. Appleton of Boston, and a physician of St. Paul. One was sold in the Parmalee sale in Boston. The best specimen is at the mint.

Massachusetts Legislature.

Apropos of the recent bill to increase the salaries of the members of the Legislature, the compensation of legislators for the past forty years will be of interest.

In 1850, their salaries were $2 a day; 1857, $3 a day; 1861, $300 a year; 1864, $450; 1865, $4 a day; 1867, $5 a day; 1871, $750 a year; 1876, $650; 1879, $500; 1884, $650; 1886, $750.

—The output of cigarettes throughout the country for the month of March amounted to 250,501,860, against 154,234,800 during the same month of last year. And yet we keep on legislating against them.

CITY COUNCIL.

All the members of the City Council were present at the regular meeting Monday evening, and a session of two hours and a half was devoted to city business. Among the citizens present were ex-President Federhen, Theophilus King, H. H. Faxon, J. Q. A. Field, Rev. A. F. Roche, Cornelius Moynihan, George Cahill, Wilson Tisdale, W. T. Babcock, George H. Hobby, B. J. Weeks and others.

Want Taxes Refunded.

The Mayor forwarded claims of William B. Rice and L. V. Titus for the refunding of certain taxes. Referred to Committee on Claims.

The First Veto.

Mayor Fairbanks returned without his approval Order 52, granting Charles Lorendo a common victualler's license, giving as his reason that the applicant had not complied with the statute requirements.

After some discussion, during which the Mayor was sent for and reiterated his objection, the veto was sustained by a vote of 5 to 17, viz:

YEAS—Fallon, Hammond, Little, Powers and Warner—5.

NAYS—Bass, Bryant, Drake, Duffield, Gray, Hayward, Holden, Jones, Morton, Moxon, Newcomb, Pope, Pratt, Rinn, Roberts, Sherman and Wilde—17.

Two Other Licenses.

The Mayor also vetoed the orders granting common victualler's licenses to James F. Kane and Edward Haverhan, for like reason, basing his action on the report of the Deputy Manager of the Police Force.

Councilman Powers thought Mr. Kane had complied with the requirements since the first visit of the Deputy.

This was corroborated by the Deputy.

The Mayor would offer no objection to granting Mr. Kane a license in that case, but as he could not withdraw his veto, it was passed "notwithstanding the objection of the Mayor."

That portion of the veto relating to granting Mr. Haverhen a license was, upon motion of Councilman Powers, laid on the table.

Grove Street Vetoed.

Mayor Fairbanks also vetoed Order 43, authorizing a loan of $500 for the repair of Grove street.

The Mayor said: "In my judgment, if the city is to use any portion of its borrowing capacity in repairing streets, the money should be expended on our main thoroughfares, putting the same in safe condition for public travel for the general good of all.

"On all other streets I believe that all needs should be classed as current expenses, and the expenditure of any money for repairs be charged to the appropriation for miscellaneous highways. This is under the control of the Commissioner of Public Works, who must endeavor with the means at his disposal to pursue a well defined policy of remedying the worse defects on our streets first.

"I therefore do not consider it a safe or wise policy to borrow money for these minor repairs, leaving to other administrations the burden of paying for the same."

Councilman Powers believed the street needed repair, and the Commissioner had said he could not spare money from the general appropriation. Did not think it a minor street.

The vote on passing the order over the veto was 14 yeas and 8 nays, not the necessary two-thirds, and the order was declared rejected. The vote:

YEAS—Councilmen Bryant, Drake Duffield, Fallon, Hammond, Holden, Jones, Little, Morton, Newcomb, Pope, Powers, Sherman and Warner—14.

NAYS—Councilman Bass, Gray, Hayward, Moxon, Pratt, Rinn, Roberts and Wilde—8.

Monthly Statements.

The June 1 statements of the Treasurer and Auditor were received and referred to the Committee on Finance.

A Tent Show.

An application of Walter L. Main to give a tent show, was received and granted in consideration of $25.

Application on Licenses.

Were received from Angie L. Macomber, common victualler; J. L. Harvey & Co., common victualler; Joshua Wales, common victualler; Stanley Mears, common victualler; Thomas H. Conlon, common victualler; George M. Sweeny, job wagon; J. H. Finnegan, to collect junks, etc.

State Aid.

An application of Aaron Leavitt for State Aid was referred to the Committee on State Aid.

Want a Sidewalk.

Councilman Hayward presented the petition of A. Bingham and others, for a sidewalk on North street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Adams Street.

The Committee on Finance reported amendments to the $3000 order for Adams street, making the loan fall due in three years, it having been left blank in the order.

Councilman Bryant favored making all such loans for one year, that improvements might be made and promptly paid for without going to the debt limit.

Councilman Pratt of the Finance Committee thought there was enough falling due next year; that the committee had carefully considered the matter and had placed it where it should go.

Councilman Gray favored the one-year loan. The city was growing faster than its finances. Much might be saved in interest in paying loans quicker.

Councilman Pratt said that was just it, there was a good healthy growth and he did not believe in retarding it by making the taxes $17 or $18 on a $1,000.

Councilman Fallon of the Finance Committee thought said committee had given the matter careful consideration. The debt falling due this year amounted to about $42,000; in 1892 from $27,000 to $30,000; and in 1893 from $25,000 to $28,000.

Councilman Bryant believed the taxpayers were willing to pay higher taxes if they got the improvements. This could be ascertained by making short loans. If the taxpayers objected, then an effort should be made to retrench. Thought a mistake had been made during the first years of the city government, in making the rate so small.

The amendment of Councilman Bryant to make it a one year loan was lost on a rising vote, 9 to 12. Those voting yea were Councilman Bryant, Drake, Duffield, Gray, Little, Newcomb, Pope, Powers and Warner.

Councilman Holden speaking in favor of the order said the sum originally asked was $5,000, but economy had been talked so much that the committee had decided to recommend but $3,000. This was not enough to put the street in good repair, but would improve some of the worse spots.

Councilman Fallon asked what part of the street it was proposed to rebuild.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1891.

TELEPHONE 54-3, QUINCY.

THE WEATHER FOR SATURDAY.

Blue Hill, Milton,
Friday, June 5, 2 P. M.

Indications for Saturday: Fair and warmer.

H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

Memorial Day.

Saturday was observed in Quincy, in common with other cities and towns, by the members of the Grand Army of the Republic as Memorial day; a day when the members of that noble organization put aside the pursuits of daily life and with tender and loving hands place simple but none the less beautiful flowers upon the graves of those of their comrades who have gone to join the grand army above.

The weather was rather dubious and threatening until late in the afternoon, although the sun made its appearance at intervals. As no rain fell, however, it was about as favorable a day as could have been desired. The rain of Friday had laid the dust, and although it was rather muddy in some places, the veterans did not mind that as it was much better marching than if there had been several inches of dust upon the streets.

The Post assembled at headquarters in the early morning in accordance with the general orders issued, when Sergeant-Major Penniman and one comrade proceeded to Mount Auburn and decorated the grave of Col. Paul J. Revere.

Senior Vice Commander Curtis with a detail of comrades and chaplain of the day, Rev. J. H. Humphrey, visited the National Sailors' Home, where appropriate services were held and the graves of fifty-three comrades who are buried in the cemetery there decorated.

A delegation of ten members of the Kearsarge Naval Veterans joined the delegation of the Post in the exercises. They brought a beautiful floral tribute, an anchor of Scotch thistles.

Junior Vice Commander DeForest, with twenty-five comrades visited Mt. Wollaston cemetery and deposited beautiful flowers on the last resting place of one hundred and forty-five deceased comrades.

Officer of the day, Dunbar, with a detail of ten comrades decorated sixteen graves at the Hancock cemetery and one at the English cemetery.

Comrade Cleverly visited the grave of Comrade Colyer at North Weymouth, and Comrade Leavitt that of Comrade Cole at Greenwood cemetery, Chelsea.

At 9.30 o'clock a procession was formed and a march taken to the junction of School and Franklin streets, where barges were taken for

West Quincy

Alighting at the junction of Copeland and Crescent streets the line was reformed and proceeded to the Hall cemetery, where the Post formed a circle around the Willard monument. The band then played a dirge, and Rev. J. H. Humphrey offered prayer, after which seventeen graves were decorated, this duty over the comrades and citizens assembled were briefly addressed by Mr. Humphrey.

From here they marched to the Catholic cemetery where services were conducted by Rev. F. A. Friguliettí, after which seventy-two graves were decorated. The march was then resumed to the junction of Copeland and Crescent streets and barges again taken for headquarters.

Dinner

Which was served in Hancock hall by Comrade Osborne, who was ably assisted by the members of the Woman's Relief Corps. The principal dish was baked beans, but there was an abundance of sandwiches, rolls, cold meats, cake, pastry, coffee, etc., which the veterans enjoyed very much.

In the Afternoon

About two o'clock a procession was formed in front of the headquarters at Hancock hall in the following order:

Detail of Police.
Officer of the Day. Warren Dunbar.
American Band, South Weymouth.
Bay View Fife and Drum Corps.
Capt. C. E. Bowker.
Francis L. Souther Camp, S. of V.
35 Members.
Commander Williams.
Past Commanders.
Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.
Ninety-two Comrades.
Carriage containing Chaplain Humphrey, Mayor Fairbanks, President Thompson and Commissioner Ewell.
Carriage containing City Clerk Spear, City Treasurer Adams, Overseer Field and Chief Engineer Ripley.
Barges containing wounded veterans.
Barges containing Woman's Relief Corps.
Citizens in carriages.

The line of march was through Hancock, Greeleaf, Valley and Sea streets to the Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

At the Monument.

It was thought that there were at least 2000 people in the cemetery during the exercises at the Soldiers' Monument. The programme was as follows:

Commander Williams

Spoke as follows:

Friends: As Commander of Paul Revere Post, I welcome you to this Memorial service. Comrades, the duty of today is of impressive significance. We meet to honor our dead; our reverence for their worth; and to strengthen among ourselves the bond of Fraternity. Let our soldierly deportment be such that we may honor the graves we decorate, the memories we cherish, the flags we salute, and the G. A. R., to which we belong. In closing he addressed a few remarks to the Sons of Veterans and the Woman's Relief Corps.

His Honor Mayor Fairbanks

Was introduced and spoke as follows:

With mingled feelings of joy and sadness, you have again cheerfully answered the summons of your Commander and with loyal hearts have been engaged in discharging the duties of true comradeship, placing upon the sacred mounds these beautiful mementoes of your affection.

Shoulder to shoulder you have marched today, with the dear old flag waving above you, the beautiful emblem bringing to your hearts, thoughts of those comrades who gave their lives, that it might float over one undivided nation.

They were of you and with you engaged in maintaining the principles of freedom, and writing that eventful history, on every page of which is inscribed forever, the records of the noble heroic deeds of those who braved the perils of those dark days. And so it is with feelings of joy in one sense, that has inspired your loyal hearts to reverence this day, for you have reason to be proud of your brotherhood, the members of which are cemented together by the strong ties of loyalty and fidelity.

But these feelings are also tinged by sadness, for the emblem recalls to you, the weary marches, the sufferings and the sacrifices shared by all, and when at last the glad tidings of victory and peace sounded o'er the land, many of your brave comrades had answered their last roll call, and were sleeping the sleep of our honored dead. Thoughts also will come today of the vacant homes, of those left dependent upon charity, and rising still higher in true manhood, you at once took upon yourselves the still nobler duty of guarding the interests of those, who were still with you and of you in spirit.

These beautiful emblems so feelingly laid upon this sacred ground will soon wither and fade away, the fragrance of the flowers can be with us, but for an instant, but the sentiment which prompts your noble action, which bids us all to reverence this hour, speaks to us in the deepest tones bidding us to ever keep in remembrance the memory of those who sacrificed so much for their country's honor, and that sentiment will have its influence, long after the roll of the drum, musters out the brave soldiers who saved the Union.

In the little villages that nestle on the hill sides, or in the valleys, in the busy cities, all over this great country, the beautiful flag of freedom is waving, all toil is stopped, and loving hands are engaged in reverencing the memory of our heroes. The lesson of loyalty and fidelity to ones country is again before us, stamping its silent influence upon our hearts, telling us the duty that is before us as true loyal citizens in the future. Nobly have you performed your duties, but with those principles still in your hearts, your life's work is not ended, until your Supreme Commander calls you to him. Faithful to your Country's honor still, against foes without and foes within, still must you by your example continue to prove yourselves worthy of a nation's gratitude. And may this silent monument fashioned and erected by human genius, ever inspire within you the true motto,—"On guard always for the right."

Past Commander Porter,

The first Mayor of this city, spoke briefly. It was a proud moment for the citizens to meet the Grand Army on these occasions. Quincy was represented in most of the battles of the Rebellion from the Atlantic to the Plains. Many of the Post have comrades and brothers in this cemetery, while other relatives are in distant cemeteries, in distant States. But there was but one sentiment today, that of a free country united under one flag. It should be maintained unsullied as many lives had been laid down in its defence. It was the last time so many members of the Grand Army would perform the duties of Memorial day; they were rapidly joining the Grand Army above. Let us all live in Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty to perpetuate their memories.

At F. L. Souther's Grave.

The decoration of the grave of Francis L. Souther by Francis L. Souther Camp, Sons of Veterans, probably escaped the attention of most of the people in the cemetery. Directly after the exercises at the Soldiers' Monument, the Camp proceeded quietly to the Souther lot and there deposited a beautiful wreath of roses.

A lengthy discussion on this subject followed and the subject was brought to a head by Rev. A. F. Roche who moved that the study of technical grammar be introduced into the four grammar grades. This motion was lost by a vote of six to three. Messrs. Claflin, Corthell, Cotton, Crane, Gordon and Sheahan voting in the negative and Messrs. Hall, Keith and Roche in the affirmative.

The matter was then indefinitely postponed.

Superintendent Aldrich then called the attention of the committee to the large number of assistant teachers that were necessarily employed on account of the crowded condition of the schools.

The matter of compensation of said teachers was referred to the finance committee.

The meeting then adjourned for one week.

The trouble at the Wollaston school did not come up as was expected.

Mr. and Mrs. John Richards stood up with the couple, the bride being given away by her father.

The bride wore a travelling costume of slate colored henrietta.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the Quincy House, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Bolles left for New York at 6 o'clock, and after a brief tour they will reside in Pauline, N. Y., where Mr. Bolles is engaged in the monumental business.

Singular Explosion.

A singular and suggestive electric phenomenon is reported from Cape Ann. On Tuesday afternoon the workmen of the Pigeon Hill Granite Company had completed and charged four holes, 14 feet deep and 3½ inches in diameter, ready for blasting. No connection had been made with the battery, and the nearest wire was 10 feet away. While the workmen were engaged in preparing two other holes, the four were discharged by atmospheric electricity, displacing 600 tons of rock and imperiling the lives of the workmen, but none were injured. Electricians are wondering whether the two derricks near by attracted the electricity from the clouds, or whether the whole atmosphere was so charged as to explode the charges. The incident suggests a new peril in quarrying during a thunder storm.—Herald.

Street Railways.

On Monday, June 1, the first passenger car of the Brockton, Avon and Randolph street railway was run on the new track laid from Avon to West Corners, Randolph. The first ground was broken about the middle of April, at the Avon and Randolph line, and the work has continued almost uninterruptedly from the beginning to the end, finishing last week.

It is pleasing to note that Mayor Fairbanks is careful to whom common victuallers' licenses are granted. There are too many of these small shops which pose as restaurants or hotels. It would be just as well if less of the so-called light drinks were sold.

Saturday noon a floral pillow, valued at $10, was stolen from the Brickett lot in the Hancock cemetery. Last year a floral piece was stolen from the same lot and this year Deputy Langley was requested to keep his eye on it. He did so but while absent at dinner the piece was stolen. There is no clew to the thieves.

The special sermon of Rev. Edward Norton Sunday morning, on the "Echoes of Memorial day" embodied many excellent sentiments, which we would be pleased to print in full but space will not admit. Memorial day he said should remind us of the future as well as the past. There were sometimes greater dangers in the time of peace than in the time of war, and he believed the crucial times were yet before us.

The police are still in suspense over the rumored reduction of the force, the matter not having been brought to the attention of the City Council Monday evening as was anticipated. The Mayor is said, however, to have nearly completed a set of rules for the government of the police which will be printed in small convenient books for the use of the members. It is unfortunate for the interests of the city that there is so much jealousy among the police.

Quincy is fortunate, or else other cities are unfortunate. Once in a great while Quincy has a burglary, and then we are told the city should have night police, but one who has read the papers lately could not but notice how frequent burglaries have been in Brockton which has a police patrol. Wednesday morning six houses were entered on North Main street, and at one the value of $300 secured. We do not say this city should not have a permanent police force, yet we believe it would not be much freer from burglaries and depredations if it had.

We think we voice the sentiment of our citizens when we say that the city of Quincy has no interest in the water bill as it now reads, and care little whether it passes the Senate or not. Should the bill as it now reads, be enacted, we doubt if the City Council will ever submit it to the people. The defeat of the measure is laid at the door of Representative Quincy, who came forward at a very inopportune time with his unfriendly amendments, and who by his attitude in the House Tuesday, clearly showed that he was not willing to carry out the wishes of his constituents. As the Herald said, "Mr. Burke of Quincy, made an able effort in the House to amend the bill" and came near overthrowing the committee's recommendation.

Wollaston Riding Club.

The grand meet of the club Decoration day was indeed a grand one, as fourteen of the members participated in the event. Although the weather looked very uncertain, after some delay in the bugler not having a bugle, and a half-hour being spent in finding one for him, the party started off in high spirits. A circuit of the plains was made, then the club formed a line-up at the adjutant's home on the hill, from thence through Quincy Centre to the city drug store, where Commander C. W. Smith ordered a line-up, and then treated the club to soda. A visit was then made to the Bigelow street tennis courts, after which a business meeting was held in the adjoining field. While the horses refreshed themselves on the fine grass and clover. A subscription was there and then raised to furnish the bugler with a suitable bugle, and the ringing notes from a fine silver bugle which will always assemble the club, will be the outcome of the subscription, for the riding club of Wollaston do not do things by halves.

A ride to Houghs Neck and a fish supper is the next order, of which due notice through the PATRIOT will be given, everybody is invited to join the club. No expense to join, just bring your "boots and saddles."

Water Supply Bill.

The question of ordering to a third reading the Quincy Public Water Supply Bill, as reported by Representative Johnson, came up in the Legislature Tuesday morning. As soon as the bill was before the House, Representative Burke moved to amend as follows:

> In lines 5 to 10 of section 1, strike out the words "after the purchase of the franchise, corporate property, rights and privileges of the Quincy Water Company, as provided in section 9 of chapter 162 of the Acts of the year 1883."
>
> Also by adding at the end of section 1 the words "or for preserving the purity of said waters: provided, however, that any lands taken for preserving the purity of said waters or water supply shall not be more than 1,000 feet distant from the same.

The question then was on the adoption of the amendment.

Representative Johnson immediately took the floor and said: "The Water Company having the general welfare of the city obtained a charter and then offered it for sale when the citizens poo-hooed it, but with the assistance of outside capital they were enabled to establish a company. They have furnished a supply of water which at first was not of the best, but has been improved. They are willing to sell, the price being determined by three disinterested parties appointed by the Supreme Court. They invested their money, built the works, and sold the bonds, which were purchased throughout the Commonwealth because it was understood they were a good investment.

If the amendment is carried the result will be death to one or the other, a loss to Quincy or the Water Company. He would leave it to the House to say whether they wanted to annihilate and ruin the investments of the Savings Banks, and citizens.

Representative Finney of Plymouth said the amendment put the bill in the form the City Council of Quincy wanted it. This is one of the corporations which applied to the Legislature before they began to stop granting of charters to private corporations. The corporation has the charter and has established a water supply which any company aught to be indicted for maintaining. The City Council of Quincy has petitioned the Legislature. The first thing the company did after establishing their plant was to double up its stock, and he did not believe the Legislature gave them the franchise to speculate on, but to supply the city with pure water. The water supply which Company wants Quincy to purchase has been condemned by the State Board of Health. In closing Mr. Finney hoped the House would pass the amendment and give the citizens what they want.

Representative Burke was the next gentleman to speak, and he did himself proud, as he worked hard for the interests of his constituents. He said the bill was reported by a majority, but five members dissenting. Through a slight technicality the bill was recommitted. I ask the members of the House to consider a petition signed by 1700 citizens and taxpayers of Quincy. They ask for the right to supply themselves with water. Your Committee on Water Supply sat in session for seven long hearings listening to testimony from citizens and from the Water company, and it was not denied that the city had a grievance.

The city put on seventeen witnesses. It could have put on seventeen hundred. They testified that the quality of the water, was bad to smell, bad to taste and bad to health. The State Board of Health say the present supply is unfit for use, it is good enough for washing purposes but very unpalatable.

The city of Quincy asks to supply itself with pure water from natural resources.

What evidence did the Water Company put on to substantiate their claim? They put on five witnesses outside of their officers. They said the water was good but three of the witnesses have business in Boston, where they can obtain Belmont or Everett spring water to drink, or if preferred, stimulants, which cannot be had in Quincy.

Mr. H. H. Faxon had testified that the water was good yet he further testified he had not drank a gallon for five years, he drank appolonaris. Everybody can not afford to buy that and this is why this petition has been presented, that they may have something palatable.

Mr. Johnson tells about bonds held about the State. In 1888 these bonds were placed on the market and the capital stock increased from $125,000 to $250,000, and it was brought out in the testimony that not $1 was paid for the new issue of stock.

The Legislature can never uphold a monopoly.

Representative Tuttle was not in favor of private Water Companies in a town, but one had been established and why should it not be supported, if the stock was not properly issued there was a proper course to take. Having allowed it to be established it is only fair that it be compensated.

A Representative, whose name could not be learned, said that after the city of Quincy had had the use of the supply it was not fair to say it was poor. It is more the property of the city today than the corporation.

Representative Carter said it was time the Legislature called a halt and did something for the people. The town of Wakefield was in the same boat with Quincy. Theirs commenced twenty years ago.

An innocent corporation came there and promised everything, and that corporation, without a cent, worked it round so the town voted to pay six per cent. per annum for twenty years. Judge Devens said if the town was foolish enough to vote to do a thing of that kind it should be placed under guardianship.

Representative Burke again took the floor and said the company have thirty miles of pipes, and by the report of the Commissioner of Public Works Quincy has one hundred and thirty miles of accepted streets. One-third of our streets are unprotected for fire purposes. The town tried to have the company extend their pipes, but they would not.

Representative Johnson said the act granting the charter to the Quincy Water Supply company provides the city shall pay what it is worth and does not say anything about the watered stock.

The bill first reported gave the right to the city of Quincy to put in a supply entirely independent of the present company. The gentlemen from Quincy, (meaning Representative Quincy) does not believe in the bill as reported and that is the reason why he added these words.

Representative Quincy interrupted the speaker by saying he did not think it right for the gentleman to state what his private opinion was. The adding of the words did not alter the meaning of the bill.

Continuing, Mr. Johnson said he did not state what he believed but what he knew. Those words were added so I would withdraw my objection to the bill. The Quincy Water Company are doing all in its power to improve its supply. The Blue Hill Supply could be turned into the present supply for $1250.

The evidence in regard to fire, showed the reason why the hydrants could not be opened was because the Quincy firemen turned them the wrong way. It is not expected that a private Water Supply Company would put in pipes on all the back streets, they have covered the principal streets. What fairer way is there to purchase the property, than by a committee of three disinterested persons. In closing, the speaker hoped the bill would pass as reported.

The questions on the adoption of the first amendment offered by Representative Burke was taken and lost. Mr. Burke doubted the vote and a rising vote was taken the result being 62 in favor of adopting the amendment and 75 against.

The second amendment was adopted by a rising vote of 77 to 48. The bill was then ordered to its third reading.

Representative Quincy who was present remained very quiet and did not have anything to say on the question, a fact some of the Quincy gentlemen present could not help commenting upon.

Among the Quincy gentlemen present were Mayor Fairbanks, John Shaw, James H. Slade, Dr. W. L. Faxon, Supt. F. E. Hall of the Water Company and others.

Section one of the bill now reads as follows:

> SECTION 1. The city of Quincy, for the purpose of supplying the said city and the inhabitants thereof with pure water for the extinguishment of fires and for domestic and other purposes, after the purchase of the franchise, corporate property, rights and privileges of the Quincy Water Company as provided in section nine of chapter one hundred and sixty-two of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, may take, hold and convey into and through said city, the waters of Blue Hill river and of the tributaries thereof, excepting Braintree Great pond and Houghton's pond in the town of Milton, at any point or points in said city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Milton, with any water rights connected therewith, and may also take and hold by purchase or otherwise any land, rights of way, easements and real estate necessary for laying, constructing and maintaining pipes, aqueducts, water courses, reservoirs, storage basins, dams, filter galleries, and such other works as may be deemed necessary for collecting, purifying, storing, retaining, discharging, conducting and distributing said waters, or for preserving the purity of said waters; provided, however, that any lands taken for preserving the purity of said waters or water supply shall not be more than 1,000 feet distant from the same.

Wednesday afternoon the Quincy Water bill was at the end of the house calendar, and it was passed to be engrossed without debate. Mr. Burke felt that he had made a square fight for his city and done all he could for the amendment of the bill and that in the temper of the House it was better to let the bill go to the Senate than to renew the contest.

Brooklyn Bridge.

As the last stroke of the midnight bell pealed forth Sunday night, the great Brooklyn bridge between New York and Brooklyn was thrown open free to foot travel. It is eight years and a week since it was first opened to public.

Last year $18,000 was collected from foot passengers, who were obliged to pay one cent each. It cost $12,000 to collect this toll, and keep six collectors busy.

One of the recent innovations was the placing of seats at the platforms surrounding the towers and at intervals along the promenade so that persons desirous of doing so may rest in crossing the structure, the distance from end to end of which is a mile and three-sixteenths. It has been proposed to increase the number of these and also to build light shelters over the trusses crossing the car tracks, where people can spend their time on hot days sheltered from the sun and in the breeze always to be found up there.

An Expression of Esteem.

At the Universalist Sunday school, Sunday morning, advantage was taken of the presence of ex-Superintendent H. W. Lull of Quincy, to present him, as a token of appreciation of his former services in the school, a set of three volumes on biblical history, handsomely bound in calf. He and Mrs. Lull were also presented with a fine silver berry spoon, and the birthday book which was prepared for that purpose in connection with the recent fair of the society. The affair was a complete surprise to both, but Mr. Lull was at no loss for words in which to express his thanks for the kindly remembrance of his many friends. It was an incident of the school session highly pleasing alike to the donors and the recipients.—Milford Gazette.

☞ The last Sunday evening concert in Boston this season will occur at the Hollis street theatre Sunday evening, the occasion being for the benefit of John H. Stevens, ticket agent, and Daniel Sutton and Thomas Gaffey, advertisers. Although this is the last, it will not be by any means the least pleasing programme offered to the Boston public, for a bill full of novelties, fine music and excellent singing will be presented. The Hollis has become famed for the excellence of its Sunday concerts. The New York Star Concert Company, the best in that State, will come to Boston specially for this event, and it contains most excellent talent, among which may be mentioned Fred Emerson Brooks, the California poet, humorist, and a great favorite with the G. A. R.

—The Veteran Firemen's association of Brockton, voted to buy an engine at their last meeting. The committee in charge of the matter were given full authority to close the bargain.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, June 3, 1891.

Most of Thursday was devoted by the House to the congressional redistricting bill and the programme of Tuesday's conference was pretty well carried out. But it failed. Mr. Bill of Paxton moved to refer the whole matter to the next Legislature and the contest was waged over that motion all day, the Lodge bill which Mr. Pratt of Lowell offered the day before not being offered as a substitute. Congressman Lodge himself was in the speaker's room most of the day and called out Republican members to urge them to defeat the committee's plan. Mr. Sohier of Beverly, who led the caucus months ago to declare for a non-partisan redistricting, was the first to attack the plan of the committee and he was ably seconded by Messrs. Wardwell of Haverhill and Murray of Fitchburg. The Democrats said but little, Mr. Quincy of Quincy having the most to bring forward on their side for the committee's bill. Finally a roll call was ordered and there were 90 yeas to 113 nays on referring the matter to the next Legislature. With the Democrats voting no were twenty-six Republicans. Then the bill was ordered to a third reading by 125 to 75. It has another stage in the House.

The House has adopted unanimously resolutions in honor of Lieut. John M. Hawley, who saved the man-of-war Nipsic at the hurricane at Samoa in March, 1889.

The House has voted by 93 to 57 in favor of the bill to levy a collateral inheritance tax. It encountered some sharp opposition and was denounced as an act of confiscation pure and simple, but on the other hand it was defended as a measure which would bring a large amount of money into the State treasury and relieve many people from tax burdens, while it would not increase the burden of anybody. So it had a good majority, but has yet to pass the Senate.

The House suspended its rule in order to pass the appropriation of $50,000 for the extermination of the gypsy moth. This will make a total of $100,000 which the State has appropriated, and it was stated in the debate that if this was not sufficient the United States government would be asked to help.

Some of the Boston and Cambridge friends of the Institute of Technology tried to get half of the government allowance for agricultural and mechanical education, instead of one-third as now, leaving the agricultural college half, instead of two-thirds as it now has. It was urged that the Institute is a great deal bigger than the college, that it has of the fund only $50 to every student, while the college has $500 and that by the change it would have only $75 and the college $375. But the House stood by the college and the movement failed.

The Senate has settled the fate of the fraternal endowment bill by referring it to the next Legislature by vote of 29 to 5, the latter being Messrs. Bradley of Essex, Champlin and McNary of Suffolk, Eaton of Norfolk and Raymond of Middlesex. In one sense it may be regarded as a dodging of the question, but really it is not so, for it is a defeat for all those who wished to prolong the lives of these fraudulent concerns. Under the present law but fifty per cent. of assessments can be held in a reserve fund to meet the liabilities as they become due. All sorts of the associations wanted this limit changed so that they could accumulate more of a reserve and thus avert for a longer time their inevitable doom. Feeling sure that every remedy which might be tried would fail utterly and being benevolently disposed to give them plenty of rope with which to hang themselves, Commissioner Merrill and the insurance committee made no opposition to the granting of their request and the bill was drawn to allow them to hold eighty-five per cent. of their assessments in a reserve fund. But the bill has failed and so the fifty per cent. provision is in force. This means that when the associations are within three months of the time when certificates mature they must clap on a lot of assessments in order to get the money to meet their obligations. This means that these people who were to get rich suddenly out of their scheme will take money out of one pocket to put it into the other, minus the handsome total which they have to pay their officers and for expenses. They will also have ever afterwards the sneaking consciousness that they went into the scheme knowing that it was mathematically impossible of honest success and that what one gained must come out of other poor wretches who would be frozen out because they could not pay assessments. Nobody had a word to say in the House in defence of the system, and though three leading members I know are interested in these orders, yet not one of them dared to breathe a word so that the House should know it.

Another positive result of referring the bill to the next Legislature is that the foreign orders, for which Senator Champlin made such a warm and successful fight in the upper branch, are shut out. It is true that the law can be evaded by their transfer of all their members to a Massachusetts corporation and it is said that this has been done in one case, but the absolute prohibition of them, as well as the prohibition upon forming any more home companies, will limit the evil and put a stop sooner to this peculiar form of gambling.

The absolute prohibition upon the bond investment companies has passed both House and Senate. Commissioner Merrill says in his annual report: "It is doubtful if, since the famous South Sea bubble, such a gambling mania has seized on intelligent people as that developed in the spread of the assessment endowment and its natural and legitimate offspring—the bond investment insanity."

The Senate Treasury Committee reported ought not to pass on the House bill to compel the publication of election expenses and on Wednesday that report was accepted by 16 to 4 without a word of debate for or against the bill. This is the second year in succession in which the House has passed the bill only to have it killed in the Senate.

The last fight in the House over the repeal of the public bar bill was on Tuesday. The temperance men tried their best to put in a substitute bill that liquor should be sold to only bona fide guests and not served at tables in rooms where meals were not served. The vote was 83 yeas to 111 nays. Only three Democrats voted yes and 31 Republicans voted no.

Quite a sharp fight on every stage over the bill to allow savings banks to put deposits on interest monthly resulted in the defeat of the bill by 85 to 104 on the last recorded vote.

By 69 to 90 the House refused to admit the bill to give the Governor power to remove any member of a State Commission at pleasure. It was a close party vote, only two Republicans favoring the bill and one Democrat opposing it.

The long and hard struggle over the Cape Cod canal has ended with the victory of the Fox, or new company. But their bill has been so amended that they are to pay the old company for what it has done (so far as it is used), and if they do not go ahead in three months, then their privilege reverts to the old company.

An Italian Missing.

Orazio Buzzi who lives at the corner of West and Centre streets is reported to Deputy Langley as missing since last Thursday. That morning he left home, saying he was going to Craig & Richard's Granite Company to seek employment and he has not been heard from since. He cannot speak English. He is about 35 years old and 5 feet, 4 inches tall. He leaves a wife in poor circumstances.

—Commencement exercises will be held at Wellesley college June 23.

Col. Paul J. Revere.

The Saturday Globe had the following sketch of Paul J. Revere, for whom the local Post was named. It might have added that he married a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Lunt of Quincy:

Paul J. Revere was born in Boston, Sept. 10, 1832, and was a grandson of the Paul Revere of the revolution. He graduated from Harvard in 1852. When the call for volunteers was made, he said to his mother:

"I shall feel humbled to stay at home."

She replied,—"Do as you think right."

He was commissioned major of the 21st, and was in the fight at Ball's bluff. When taken prisoner he had refused to leave his commander, although he could easily have escaped by swimming across the river to the Maryland side.

He was one of seven hostages selected by order of the Confederate secretary of war to answer with their lives for the safety of the privatesmen, held by the United States under a charge of piracy on the high seas.

The authorities at Washington reprieving the privateersmen and retaining them as prisoners of war, Major Revere was parolled, Feb. 22, 1862, and returned home.

Anxious to be at the front before the expiration of his parole, he arranged, through the influence of Secretary Stanton, for an exchange with a Confederate prisoner at Fort Warren, and in May was again with his regiment.

He was in the contests at Chickahominy and Fair Oaks and was wounded at Antietam and obliged to return home.

Having sufficiently recovered to again report for duty, he was commissioned colonel of the 20th, in May, 1863.

Col. Revere was killed in the battle of Gettysburg. His body was recovered and buried at Mt. Auburn.

Four Nights of Drama.

Once the cry of the Grand Army boys was "On to Richmond" now the cry is on to Detroit" and in order to reach the latter place the interesting and pathetic military drama "The Celebrated Case" was given at Hancock hall, Wednesday evening, and will be repeated every evening this week. Music was furnished during the drama by Peter's orchestra, and the costumes were furnished by Fred Baxter of Boston.

The drama abounds in touching scenes such as the murder of Madeline, the convicting of John Renaud by his daughter's testimony, the recognizing by Adrienne of John as her father. The discovery by Valentine that her father, Count D'Mornay is the murderer of Madeline, and the proving of John's innocence.

The principal characters in the play were interpreted by Councilman W. H. Warner as John Renaud, the soldier and condemned murderer; ex-Councilman H.O. Souther as Count D'Aubeterre; little Miss Maud Welsh as John's daughter in the prologue, and Miss Mary E. Parker as Adrienne in the play; Miss Gertrude Boyd as Madeline and Valentine; L. J. Downey as Dennis O'Rourke; E. J. Parker as Lazare and Count D'Mornay; Miss Annie Cahill as Louise and Duchesse; Miss Mary E. Griffin as Chanoinesse of the College, and M. J. Garrity as The Seneschal and the Viscount de Langley, other parts were taken by J. Bruce, J. Cleverly and Miss Jennie Welsh and members of Post 88.

The drama has been presented each night since, and with each production an improvement is noted. Last performance Saturday night.

Landlord and Tenants.

The landlords, or owners of houses to let, held a meeting at the office of Geo. H. Brown & Co., on Tuesday evening to take some steps to form an association for their mutual protection.

It is proposed that each member shall forward to the secretary, the name of any tenant who does not pay his rent, and the secretary shall print every month a list, (known as the black list,) and forward it to each member.

It being a stormy evening only a dozen persons were present, but they were anxious to join an association of this kind; but to give others a chance to be present at the organization of the association, the meeting was adjourned to next Monday evening at the same place.

CAT SHOW. The first show by the Boston Cat Breeders' Association opened at 131 Tremont street, Boston, on Thursday. HOUGHS NECK.

Last Saturday and Sunday saw two of the largest crowds of people at this pleasant resort than ever before for this time of the year. The electric cars carried something like eleven hundred people Saturday and ten hundred Sunday. Many of these were attracted by the thoughts of a good shore dinner, and others having a holiday took the opportunity to take their families on an outing.

Besides those that came on the cars many rode in carriages and numbers of young men on their wheels, and it can readily be said that these were the opening days at Houghs Neck, and from this time on things will be lively there.

H. Ramsdell and family, of Newton, are at C. French's cottage on Great Hill.

The Temple Club of Campello held a hop at the Casino Saturday evening.

Mr. Balkham and family, of Brockton, have taken a cottage on Manet avenue.

A paper is being circulated among the residents which will be presented to the Electric Railway company asking them to have the lettering on its cars changed so as to read "Houghs Neck and Manet Beach.'

F. W. White and family have arrived at their cottage.

Miss Sarah Caryl and Miss Mary Demond of Ware, and Mr. Thomas Tilton of this city, are stopping at the "Pleasant View Cottage" on Great hill.

Mr. John Evans and family, of Newton, have arrived at their cottage on Great hill.

Mr. J. J. Wyeth and family of Sharon, are at Rock Island.

Mrs. Maria Belcher, of Stoughton, is at Rock island.

Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander and daughter, Emma, Mr. Frank Bass, Messrs. John and Charles Alexander all of Brockton, and Mrs. C. F. Perry of Quincy, have registered at the Rockland cafe this week.

Mr. Henry Edison and family are at Rock island.

The weekly hops at the Casino will commence Wednesday evening June 17.

A neat fence is being built on Sea street along the property of Messrs. Braizee, Caryl, Wills and Billings.

Mrs. H. Brainard is at the Loretto.

Mr. Sidney F. Squires and family, of Boston, have arrived at their new cottage on Manet avenue.

MILTON.

Mr. John McElwain, assistant pastor of Clarendon street Baptist church, Boston, will preach at the Baptist chapel, East Milton, next Wednesday evening, June 10.

Arthur Merritt formerly of East Milton, is here from California on a few days' visit.

Josiah Babcock has so far recovered from his recent illness as to be able to be about once more.

The electric lights were turned on Thursday night.

Kemp & Tisdale have added another new horse to their business which the increase in trade demanded.

The Park Commissioners were out viewing the town, Memorial day, looking for a site for the new park, and also to see what could be done to beautify the general appearance of the town.

A dance is to be held at Washington hall this evening the proceeds to be given to John Lee who has been sick for some time, to aid him in paying his passage to the old country.

A movement is on foot among the storekeepers of the town to close four evenings a week during the summer months.

Robert Langon has commenced duty as night policeman at East Milton.

Boston's New Daily.

The News, which made its bow as a morning daily on Monday, is a bright, newsy sheet. The boycott of the Hotel & Railroad News Co. gave it a good advertisement, and then its bond scheme is awakening an interest.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy."

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1891.

No Answer.

You tell me not, green multitude of leaves,
Mingling and whirling with the wilful breeze,
Nor you, bright grasses, trembling blade to blade,
What meaneth June, to hap us every year.

The spirit of the flowers is watching now,
As winking in the sun they suck the dew,
The thickets parley with the splendid fields—
What meaneth June, to hap us every year?

Up where the brook laps round the shining flags,
And tinkles foam bells past the weedy shore,
And where the willow swings above the trout—
What meaneth June, to hap us every year?

The clouds hold knowledge in their snowy peaks,
They hide it in their moving fleecy folds,
They share it with the sunset's golden isles—
What meaneth June, to hap us every year?

Fulness and sweetness, and the power of life,
Must I in ignorance remain alone,
And yield the quest of speech for certain proof?
What meaneth June, to hap us every year?

Sweetness and beauty, and the power of life,
It is creation's anthem—parts for all?
Is this the knowledge—will you answer me?
What meaneth June, to hap us every year?

Household Receipts.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE. To one quart of flour add two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of powdered sugar. Sift all together in a deep bowl and chop into it three ounces of butter. Beat one egg and add to it one large cupful of sweet milk. Stir this into the other ingredients as quickly and lightly as possible. Roll into two sheets, each about half an inch thick, and bake in well-greased pans. When done pull the cakes apart and spread with softened butter. Sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar and cover well with strawberries or raspberries, well sprinkled with sugar and slightly mashed. Put on the other half of the cake, crust side down, and pile berries and sugar on top; to be eaten hot with sugar and cream. This will make two cakes two layers each, or one with four layers.

CRULLERS. One cupful of sugar, a piece of butter the size of an egg rubbed well into the flour, two eggs beaten into the sugar and butter, one cup of milk, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder mixed into a cupful of flour. Add a little salt. Flavor with one and a half teaspoonfuls of lemon extract. Mix very soft.

LYONNAISE POTATOES. Twelve potatoes boiled until nearly done; when cold slice or cut into dice. Chop fine one onion. Put a tablespoonful of butter into the frying-pan, put in the onion, and let it fry two minutes; add the potato dice and fry five minutes, stirring constantly; then add butter, salt and pepper to taste.

PRUNE PUDDING. Make a small mould of lemon jelly. Boil large, selected prunes slowly till very tender, taking care to keep the skins unbroken. Drain and place in a glass dish. Break up the jelly all about them and pile whipped cream over all.

POTATO CAKES are extremely nice for breakfast. To make them, take one pint of mashed potatos, one pint of flour, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a little salt, milk sufficient to make a thick batter, and half a teacupful of fresh yeast. Mix the ingredients, and let the batter rise until it is light; then bake in muffin-tins or gem pans. Serve in a vegetable dish.

To clean a brown porcelain kettle boil peeled potatoes in it. The porcelain will be rendered nearly as white as new.

Rub your lamp chimneys after washing with dry salt and you will be delighted with the new brilliancy of your lights.

MONEY CAN'T BUY IT. Mrs. Bridget Sullivan has a little hut in the switch yards of the Louisville & Nashville railroad in Louisville, Ky., for which she has refused $10,000 and an annuity. She is completely hemmed in by tracks but clings to her humble home with a strong attachment.

—Fred Snow, a Wareham boy, has invented a machine which is very simply constructed which will automatically carve portraits from life in wood, marble or any carvable material as accurately as if executed by the hand of a sculptor. One machine does the work of twenty men, and one man can operate four at the same time and produce twenty-four subjects at once. The product of the machine is used largely for decorative and ornamental purposes.

—When the governor of Vermont made application on the treasury department at Washington the other day for the State's share of the direct tax fund, amounting to $100,000, he was confronted with a bill of $575,000 which the government claims to hold against Vermont for arms furnished the State at the time of the Fenian raid at St. Albans. Vermont very properly claims that she is under no more obligation than any other State to protect the frontier of the United States and that the general government is able and ought to be willing to protect its northern frontier at its own expense, and Vermont is about right.

"Well, Fred, how did your visit to Miss Holman's turn out?"

"Well, Bob, between you and I, there was a little too much turn out about it."

Clericus,—"Why don't you lay up your treasures where thieves do not break through nor steal?"

Cynicus,—"If some of the people get there who expect to I'd rather keep mine in my stocking."

"Do you quarrel with your neighbor yet about his hen coming over into your garden?"

"No; we're all over that now."

"Buried the hatchet?"

"No, better still; buried the hen."

CITY COUNCIL.

Streets said the committee favored leaving that discretionary with the Commissioner.

Councilman Moxon said he had previously misunderstood the order. Unless a plan for permanent improvement was laid out by the Council he should oppose it.

Councilman Fallon thought the whole street in need of repairs. Thought a commencement should be made near estate of the late Joseph W. Robertson, and work toward the Centre. Believed Council should know just what it was going to receive at the start.

Councilman Jones spoke of the worse spots and said he would have included them in the report had he thought they were needed.

The amendments of the Finance committee were adopted, and under a suspension of the rules the order was unanimously passed to be ordained.

Mt. Pleasant Street

The Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw on the petition of John W. Faircloth for the improvement of Mt. Pleasant street. Accepted.

Wire Pulling.

The Committee on Streets reported that the order granting Malnati Bros. permission to run wire guy across Liberty street, ought to pass and under suspension of rules the order was ordained.

New Brick Schoolhouse.

The joint Committee on Public Buildings and Finance reported in favor of the purchase of a school lot on Brooks avenue, and the erection of an eight-room brick building similar to the John Hancock. An order for $35,000 on seven notes was read once and ordered to second reading without objection.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported no further action necessary on the petition of Angus McNeal and others for a new schoolhouse. Report accepted.

Water Street.

The Committee on Streets offered a preamble and order for a public hearing on the widening and rebuilding of Water street.

The preamble set forth that it was the opinion of the Council that the street should be forty-five feet wide.

Councilman Bryant offered an amendment making it 40 feet.

Councilman Jones thought it might be better to fix the width after the hearing. That it was necessary to state some width, and while it might be laid out of less width, it could not be made wider.

Councilman Bryant believed if the street was to be paved from curb to curb that 40 feet would be sufficient. For quite a distance on Hancock street, only about thirty-three feet was in condition for travel yet it accommodated the immense traffic, much larger than Water street was expected to.

Councilman Warner wished it to stand forty-five feet in the order, and was of the opinion it should be laid out forty-five feet. Now the street was often blockaded near the car turnout, as the railway there took all the street. Thought it would not be long before Water street was double tracked.

Councilman Moxon was not clear that the street could be laid out 40 feet, if 45 stood in the order.

Councilman Jones had the opinion of Ex-Solicitor Pattee that the street might be laid out narrower but not wider. Favored 45 in the order. After the hearing it might be reduced if thought advisable. Personally he favored 45 feet, which was the width of Copeland street from Water to the Willard Schoolhouse. Did not think the Electric Freight Railway would relieve the street much of its travel.

Councilman Pratt favored 45 feet, but thought the Council could vote intelligently after the hearing, when it was ascertained what the extra five feet would cost.

Councilman Sherman said the Council must commit itself to some width.

Councilman Bryant thought it a serious question. Queried if the betterment act should not first be accepted. Believed the abutters would like to have the street 45 or even 60 feet if it did not interfere with their business, but it was not a question of what the abutters wanted, but of the needs of travel.

Councilman Moxon thought it unwise for the Council to commit itself previous to the hearing. Move to strike the width out of the preamble, and insert in the order.

Councilman Jones said it was a proposed width. Thought the abutters might be about equally divided in making it 45 feet. The Council was not liable until it made an appropriation. He would however accept the amendment of Councilman Moxon.

Councilman Warner thought some members were throwing cold water on the rebuilding. Thought it about time that Ward Three got some of the improvement. Presented some figures obtained at the Quincy Adams depot of the immense tonnage of stone shipped, most of which came over Water street.

Councilman Fallon thought forty feet a standard for side streets and that forty-five to sixty was none too wide for main thoroughfares.

Councilman Gray did not think the Council ready to commit to any width and moved to recommit for opinion.

Councilmen Pratt, Jones and Powers, opposed recommitment and it was voted down.

Councilman Holden seconded Councilman Moxon's amendment.

Councilman Duffield thought the objection was to the positive wording of the preamble, and thought it might be made conditional.

Councilman Moxon's amendment prevailed and the order was then adopted for a hearing June 22.

Garfield Street.

Upon motion of Councilman Warner the Garfield street order was taken from the table, and the question came on its final passage.

Councilman Warner had the rule suspended which prohibits debate, and then offered a substitute making the appropriation $1000 for a drain. It was adopted and passed to be ordained.

Street Sprinkling.

Councilman Duffield moved to take from the table the Mayor's communication relating to street sprinkling.

Councilman Sherman thought it too late to tackle that, and upon his motion the Council adjourned at 10.10.

W. K. Vanderbilt is going to have a henhouse 385 feet long to cost $15,000 at his Long Island country seat.

Farmer's Institute.

Many farmers in this and other towns, having expressed a desire to know more about the Massachusetts Agricultural College and Experiment Stations, at Amherst, the officers of the Bay State Agricultural Society, have arranged for an excursion, institute and field day at Amherst, Thursday and Friday, June 11, and 12. Reduced rates have been secured on the Boston and Maine, Fitchburg, Massachusetts Central and New London Northern Railroads, also reduced hotel rates. Those who attend will be given the fullest opportunity to inspect the work of the School and Stations. At various points of interest about the barns, fields, orchards, etc., there will be interesting familiar talks by the different Professors on fertilizers, cattle feeding, insecticides and other practical topics. We trust some farmers from this vicinity will find it convenient to attend.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH. For many years the firm of Masten & Wells, of Boston, have given special attention to the manufacture of reliable Fireworks. Towns and individuals should send for their catalogue, and see the economical manner in which they make up "Collections," by which purchasers can also save all express or freight charges. Every patriotic son of liberty wishes to honor the day, and no day's celebration is complete without winding up with Fireworks. For particulars, see advertisement in another column.

A DOUBLE GRAVE NEEDED. Mrs. Margaret Mulhaney, who weighed 650 pounds, was buried May 24th in New York city.

The coffin was a plain cloth-covered box, 37 inches wide and 20 inches high.

The corpse was carried from the house by twelve brawny men, and an undertaker's wagon bore it to the cemetery, no hearse being large or strong enough.

A double grave was needed and it required the strength of sixteen men to lower the body safely.

For protection against fire, the town of Stillwater, Kan., has a way that is quite a novel one. Every business man has a barrel of water in front of his store, which is so fixed that the bung can be easily knocked out, and in case of fire the barrels can soon be centered in one place. At a fire there last week they were successful in confining the fire to one place.

Among the arrivals at the barge office in New York recently was a little old woman of wood. It was an automaton figure of an old lady knitting, and the most curious part of it was that it was actually a knitting machine. It ran by clockwork, and, to all appearances, had every movement of life.

Public school teaching in Spain is not an attractive profession. One teacher, whose case was brought into notice recently, had not received his salary for 17 years. While this was an extreme case, it is true that the back pay of the teachers now reaches about $700,000.

A new sewing machine by a Welshman has no shuttle or bobbin. The thread is supplied directly from two ordinary spools, and sews through the assistance of a rotary looper. It is vastly more simple than any other sewing machine.

—The projectile fired by the new German army rifle will pass through five men at a distance of one thousand yards. The accounts describing this deadly missile says it is shaped like an ordinary cigarette, which accounts for its deadly nature.

—Lawn tennis will flourish in New York this summer. The authorities have laid out 129 courts in Central Park, for which regular permits are issued.

Transporting Liquor.

The Supreme court of this state gave an important decision recently, in relation to the transportation of liquor by express companies in no-license towns.

A driver of a wagon of the New England Despatch company was prosecuted for bringing into Lowell "intoxicating liquor, having reasonsble cause to believe that the same was intended to be sold in violation of law." He was convicted and appealed to the Superior court, where a verdict of guilty was returned against him and exceptions taken, which have been overruled by the Supreme court.

The gist of the decision is that, * * * "If he voluntarily went in and aided and encouraged a general business of transporting intoxicating liquors, then he is liable for specific act of the kind, because he aided and participated in the business which led to the taking of such goods. If he performed any necessary part of the machinery in carrying on this illegal business, then he became a participator in the business and would be liable for acts done in the usual and ordinary course."

CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Celling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

Poetry.

Never Give Up.

Never give up! it is wiser and better
Always to hope than once to despair;
Throw off the load of doubts cankering fetter,
And break the dark spell of tyrannical care.
Never give up! or the burthen may sink you,
Providence kindly has mingled the cup,
And in all trials or troubles bethink you,
The watchword of life should be—Never give up.

Never give up! there are chances and changes
Helping the hopeful a hundred to one,
And mid the chaos, high wisdom arranges
Ever success—if you'll only hope on.
Never give up! for the wisest is boldest,
Knowing that Providence mingles the cup,
And of all maxims the best as the oldest
Is the true watchword of—Never give up.

Never give up though the grape shot may rattle,
And the full thunder cloud over you burst,
Stand like a rock and the storm or the battle
Little can harm you, though doing their worst.
Never give up! if adversity presses
Providence wisely has mingled the cup,
And the best counsel in all your distresses
Is the stout watchword of—Never give up.

A RACE FOR A HOME.

A flock of mammoth white-winged birds, resting for a moment upon the crest of a billow of prairie—that was the picture presented by the new town of Leoti. It was but a few days old, and yet as its residents looked westward and saw the blue cloud-like form of Pike's Peak looming above the horizon, such was their faith in their venture that their own town appeared destined to be no less permanent than the great backbone of earth a hundred and fifty mile distant.

Willis Emmet rode his pony slowly as he came in view of the tented city. "Not much of a show for a fellow," he thought, and he compared the place with his native Eastern town, with its heavy brick and stone structures and its tree-lined streets.

But he had little reason or disposition to muse over the past. Family reverses had taken him from college just after his twenty-first birthday anniversary, and he had come West "to grow up with the country," with little to build upon but his native pluck, for his father's blessing was not very available as assets.

He had heard so much of this growing western Kansas town, that now he had reached it he was somewhat disappointed. It was so new and so tempory to his eyes. A close glance could only detect a few frame buildings, and they were small and unpainted.

Entering the place, he rode directly to the first "land office" sign and interviewed the agent regarding the possibility of finding a good claim, or one hundred and sixty acres of land, to preempt.

"Haven't a single quarter-section to show you nearer than six miles," replied that individual, rubbing his hands. "I control nearly all the business here, and I assure you that'll be the best you can do. I'll sell you—"

"No," interrupted the new comer, "I'm not ready to buy."

Indeed the few dollars his pocket contained would have gone but a short distance toward a purchase.

The agent was accommodating enough, however, to show him a tent where he could sleep for the night, and left him with the remark that they would "look around tomorrow."

Somewhat disappointed, Willis lay back on his canvas cot and watched the sun go down that evening. The light flooded the haze-rimmed circle of prairie and changed dark grasses to gold. The tent-tops rose and fell steadily in the breeze, a meadow lark balanced and trilled on tall sunflower near by, and the homesick adventurer was nodding with drowsiness, when a strange young man of about his own age appeared at the opening of the tent.

It was his room-mate, a young surveyor, who had been assisting in locating the line of the new railroad, which was to make Leoti great.

"Good evening," exclaimed Willis, for his experience with the West had taught him that good-natured boldness was the best policy, "I heard that you had room for another lodger in this hotel, so I made myself at home."

"Why, yes," was the reply. "I am 'baching,' you see, but I guess you can get in since everything else is full."

They introduced themselves with slight formality, and when they went to the shanty, called by courtsey a "hotel," for supper they were on the best of terms.

Returning, Willis threw himself upon the cot and gave his hat a careless toss upon the floor of the tent.

The young surveyor, entering, stumbled over it, picked it up, gazed curiously at the hat-band, and exclaimed:

"So you're one of us?"

"One of whom?"

"Of the Phi Kappa Psi's," and he pointed to the three Green letters of the stranger's college society, which were traced upon the band.

"Let's have the grip," said Willis laughing, "it will seem natural."

It was given heartily, and the two were as intimate in a short time as a year's ordinary acquaintance could have made them.

Their talk reverted to Western life and its opportunities, and Willis told of his dreams and his disappointments.

"I can help you, Mr. Emmet" said the other, starting up, his eyes fairly snapping in the darkness.

"How? Give me some work?"

"No, to get some land. I happen to know that there is a good quarter-section of government land on the other side of of the town on which no claim has been filed. It joins the town site and will be valuable."

"When the boom strikes us it can be laid out in lots, I suppose," suggested Willis.

"I wouldn't be surprised," said the surveyor eagerly. "The land agent has been keeping people off it by telling them it has been claimed. He has it marked so on his maps. He is holding it for his brother-in-law, whom he expects out from the East?"

"Why don't you take it?"

"I can't; I've a claim entered on another quarter-section already. I only found it out a few days ago and have said nothing about it."

"But your friends."

"I have no intimate friends near here. I expected some through soon and would have given them the chance, but I heard this morning that old Mosely, the teamster, had a bononza claim in view, and I know from certain actions of his that it is this one. I'd rather you'd get it. You will have to go to W—— to the United States Land Office to enter your application. It is sixty-five miles away, but if you are quick you can make it by tomorrow night."

Willis thanked his friend heartily, and began preparations for an early start, while the surveyor took a walk down the tent-lined street to look after Mosely.

In a few minutes he returned much excited.

"You must start immediately," he exclaimed. "Mosely left about noon. No one knows where he has gone, but I am certain he is on his way to W——. Is your pony fresh?"

"Yes, I only rod six miles today."

"Good! You had better get started right off. There's a settler's cabin fifteen miles from here, and you can put for a little rest. You will reach it before midnight."

Taking a description of the claim hastily penciled on a piece of paper and mounting his pony, the young home-seeker cantered away through the darkness.

Only the faintest semblance of a road showed itself, but he was used to the prairies, and with the deep blue sky above, lighted by diamond points that shine brighter through the rarified air of the prairies than near the sea, he guided his way by Polaris and made brisk time.

When he reached the cabin of which the surveyor had told him, he saw light streaming from the window, and looking in, there was a girl poring over a book by the illumination furnished by a cheap lamp. Hearing the knock, she came quickly to the door.

"Oh," said she, startled as she saw a stranger before her, "I thought it was brother Will, he went to town and has not returned. I am waiting for him."

"Can I stay here until morning?" was Willis's question.

"Why, yes, if you can sleep on the floor or in the chair; we have one lodger already."

This was news, and a description was eagerly asked for.

"An old man," she said, "very tall and stooped, with nose and chin that seemed to be approaching each other."

This tallied with the surveyor's word-picture of Mosely, and Willis was satisfied.

It was already midnight and after confiding part of his story to his hostess, the traveler proceeded to make the most of the room's resources as a lodging place. The brother did not return and the girl retired to rest in another part of the house, where her father and the other lodger were sleeping.

It was perhaps four o'clock when, as Willis was peacefully snoring in the big arm-chair, he was awakened to see his new acquaintance standing beside him.

"He has gone," she whispered.

"Who? Mosely?

"Yes."

"Without breakfast?"

"He said he had lunch with him in his wagon."

Willis was wide awake now to the necessity of quick action. Thanking the girl for her kindness and the lunch she had prepared, he brought his pony from the barn where it had made a good meal, and swinging into the saddle was again on his way.

Sunrise came and the soft-toned blue in the heavens, the deepening green of the prairie and the pink flush where they met made a picture such as only the plains of the West can furnish.

Soon, a long distance ahead, jogging along at a tolerably fast rate, he discerned the white mules and spring wagon of his rival. The sun was an hour high before he caught up with him, for Willis was too good a horseman to tire his steel at the beginning of a race.

"Hello!" he shouted, "where are you going?"

"Ter Wanda, air you?"

"Yes."

"Arter land like the rest of 'em, I 'spose?"

"They all seem to want land, that's a fact," was the evasive reply and during the remainder of the ride Willis kept the conversation chiefly on the subject of crops, weather and the like.

At last, after a mile of companionship he did not dare risk it longer and putting the spurs to his pony he left Mosely and his mules behind.

Forging on ahead he gained steadily all the forenoon and long before the horseman halted for noon-day rest, five miles from Wando, the old teamster had ceased to be within his range of vision.

After a brief stop Willis went on and in a short time was cantering down the streets of the land office town. He drew up at the office and was rejoiced to find the surveyor's words correct and the land unentered. He took it as a homestead, paid the fees, and had less than five dollars remaining in his pocket.

Going to the single hotel the place afforded the new landowner asked to be shown a room and ordered dinner sent here. He did not care to meet his rival if possible to avoid it.

In half an hour he saw the testy teamster come rattling along the street slashing the mules with a long snake-whip, and make for the land office. When after a moment he came out there was an expression on his face that boded no good to the person who had outgenerallled him. Then he came to the hotel.

Willis did not leave his room that afternoon or evening. He was not exactly afraid of Mosely, but thought it better to slip out quietly in the morning and return to Leoti.

But as he stepped out into the dingy hall of the hotel at dawn who should be the first man he met but the burley teamster!

"Say," was Mosely's first words, "you know that land I was goin' to claim?"

Willis was not supposed to know, as his questioner had told him nothing of it, but the old man was so full of his subject that the listener nodded his head affirmatively.

"Waal," Mosely went on, "some galoot got in ahead of me; claimed it yestiddy mornin', too. The villian's name was Em—by the way, what's yer name?"

He had not asked it the day before, and a shrewd suspicion seemed to have just entered his head.

Willis started to give a fictitious name, but he was never much of an actor, and his face betrayed him.

'Great scott! I b'lieve you're the fellow," exclaimed Mosely.

His suspicion was too strong to be overcome, and Willis pleaded guilty.

The old fellow was at first inclined to be angry, but when his successful rival had related his story he calmed down and apparently enjoyed the narration.

"Tell yer what I'll do," he offered when it was finished, "I'll gin yer three hundred dollars fer yer bargain."

The money was a temptation, and as the bills were counted down on a chair by the anxious teamster, the owner was almost induced to take it. But he did not, nor yet when the amount was raised to five hundred dollars.

So they patched up a piece and rode home to Leoti together.

The town of Leoti grew rapidly, and the tents were soon replaced with modern frame and brick and structures. Today it is one of the most thriving cities of the plains, and has around it a well formed country dotted with smaller villages.

The Girl on a Wheel.

Two conditions are needed for a girl's perfect bicycle costume, says the Ladies' Home Journal; looseness (to permit free action to the muscles), and a dark color. A plain skirt is a matter of course—no reeds or tournature being used. The under or foundation skirt should never be less than two and a half yards wide. An excellent plan is to face this skirt with velveteen. Also to cut from four to six slits, an eighth of a yard up, making what dressmakers term a "give," these preventing the dress from drawing around the feet. The front of the drop-skirt may be plaited, but do not use accordion plaits. The back should be shirred across the top very full. A blouse waist is not absolutely necessary; unless it is especially becoming, it looks mannish, or else slovenly on a rider when at full speed. Of course you ride in very loose corsets or a corset waist, which is better. Then make the body of your bicycle suit to conform to your figure, but just as easy-fitting as you can have it and yet fit well. Have very, very loose sleeves. Buy enough material for a second pair for they will go soon enough. A high collar is an abomination. So are linen cuffs. Have a rolling collar, use a natty silk tie under it, fasten the ends securely with a "stick pin," and leave all other jewelry at home. Saxe Biarritz gloves are best, and russet shoes are in place on a bicycle. The ventilated shoe with rubber soles in use in the ladies' gymnasiums has everything to recommend it to a girl rider. Many riders like, as an under-garment the divided skirt. Still others veto it. It is a matter of personal comfort or discomfort. Dress warmly and yet beware of getting overheated.

An Icicle 1,000 Feet Long.

A loud noise and slight shaking of the earth recently caused no little wonderment among the residents near the hills. Investigation proved the cause to be an ice slide. A small and innocent spring issues from the side of one of the mountains, its waters spreading and flowing over a steep incline of rock. During the past winter months ice formed against this wall of stone, increasing in size until one vast icicle, fully twenty feet in thickness and one thousand feet in length, projected into the valley below. From the warmth of the sun and its own weight it released its hold and thundered down the mountain side, carrying everything down before it, even trees three feet in diameter. Those who have visited the place say that the foot of the cliff presents a mass of broken ice, trees, limbs, and earth fifty feet in height. This is a repetition of occasional similar occurrences in previous years, but on a grander scale.—Seattle Telegraph.

How to Mount a Horse.

Any woman who lives in the country, and who is not too stout, should be able to mount a horse from the ground unaided, writes Carl A. Nyegaard in the Ladies' Home Journal. If she attains to be anything of an equestrienne she should require no more assistance than a man, though she is handicapped a little by reason of her skirt. She should lower the stirrup sufficiently to reach it with the left foot, then placing the right hand on the upper pommel and the left hand on the lower pommel, by a sideway motion, right shoulder forward, spring lightly from her right foot and swing herself into the saddle. Once there, she should take her foot out of the stirrup, place her right thigh in its proper position above the pommel, and adjust her dress. The stirrup is shortened from the right side by pulling up the strap again. A good dancer will soon learn to mount.

A Simple Case of Forgetfulness.

Some rather amusing instances of absense of mind come under the observation of ministers. A young man called upon a certain clergyman one Saturday evening, a short time ago, and engaged the services of the reverend gentleman to perform a marriage ceremony on the following Sunday evening. While on the street the next day the minister again met the young man. The latter rushed across the street and coming up to the minister exclaimed, "Look here, I can't be married until Monday night. I've got to go down on the Cape after the girl. I forgot all about her." At last accounts he had not got back from the Cape.—Brockton Gazette.

Improvement Societies.

In commending the work of town improvement societies, the Boston Journal cites the following as among the benefits to be derived from tree-planting, which is well-known to be an hygienic and an æsthetic measure:

"Trees along the highways have been found to prevent the evolution of noxious gasses and to minimize bacterial development. It has been noticed that while the air in the center of Paris contains, on an average, 3,910 bacteria to the cubic yard, the air in the parks of that city contains only 425 in the same space. Another value of trees along the highways is their use in purifying the air by intercepting in their foliage the particles of soot and street dust which are apt to load the air."

Another Trip—No 8.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

Thirty-seven long miles lay between us and Big Stone Gap, but the "Sailor" had said that we should take supper there that night if the writer "held out." A construction train of three or four freight cars and a locomotive was to leave in a few minutes for Big Bull tunnel, five miles below. We were thankful for this much. We entered the rear car which was profusely decorated with Winchester rifles, on the inside. The conductor carried an immense revolver in one of his hip pockets. The car was fitted up for a combination apartment, lodging-house, kitchen, dining-room and smoker. A short time beore, a big land slide had come down the mountain at the eastern end of the tunnel, blocking up the passage completely, but a large gang of men had been put to work clearing it out so that at this time a train could get through.

The train stopped just before entering the cut. The conductor very kindly loaned us the use of a boy and a lantern to assist us through the 1800 feet of blackness, water and mud. By the aid of the lantern we succeeded in getting through the tunnel without much difficulty. Out into daylight we adjusted our baggage in true tramp style, and started on our long walk. Footing it on a well ballasted track is not the easiest of work, but when one attempts to make a long journey on a Virginia rail road of this sort he had better provide himself with a good assortment of arnica and court plaster, and get his life well insured in the bargain.

The engineer who had left us so unceremoniously in the morning, came in for a share of our "bottled wrath," and the "Sailor" even went so far as to wish himself superintendent of that road for about five minutes. To be sure the track was dangerous to ride over, it being so crooked that a man would grow dizzy in looking at it, and some of the trestles were from 100 to 156 feet in height, but we were willing to take some risk rather than not enjoy the "benefits" of our "pass." We didn't care so very much for the walk, but it was those little, long black holes in the ground that made the three "imperial tramps" look at each other so direfully. We had gone but a short distance when we came to another tunnel some 700 feet in length; then another 1000 feet and a few miles further on to Little Tom, which was 2200 feet long.

At the entrance of this was a pond of no mean size, but the ties, and rail on top, made a bridge over which we walked by the aid of balancing poles. When we had gotten a little ways from the entrance it began to grow dark. The ties were anywhere from six inches to three feet apart and as we had to feel our way along step by step, our progress was anything but rapid. There was a cold, damp chill from which we could not escape. The water dripped from the rock overhead, not only making the ties slippery, but added to our discomfort as it trickled down our necks and faces.

All at once there was a crackling sound; a swash and groan combined; a muttering in the darkness, and a few common adjectives heard as poor "Buck" regained his lost footing. My umbrella, which I was counting on to shield me from the sun's hot rays, was a wreck and useless. "Buck" covered me all over with apologies for having been so careless and said he ought to have known better than to have used it for a cane. Thankful were we at last, to get out into the sunlight again even though it seemed like going into a furnace. For the first few miles the road was winding in and out among the mountains, the high bluffs giving us shelter from the scorching sun. Now and then a narrow strip of road-bed at the end of the ties, afforded us relief from the monotony of jumping from one tie to another. My tin dipper and the springs of water coming out from some sand-stone or lime-stone rock, were friends indeed. "Buck" had atoned for breaking my umbrella by taking a part of my baggage in addition to his own. Unfortunately, the wind was blowing in the same direction in which we were travelling, and at about the same speed—some four miles an hour—consequently we got little or no benefit from it.

The numerous tunnels through which we passed were not the most uncomfortable things we found, but the long, high trestles, some of them towering more than 150 feet in the air, only a few feet wide at the top, a mass of network underneath, with never a plank to walk on, were, as "Buck" said, "too scareful for anything."

"Whew, isn't this hot," said the "Sailor" as we crept into the shade of an old rail fence by the roadside. We had struck a sort of sandy desert between the mountains and the walk of eight miles had already made a deep impression on the three "imperial tramps." The sun burned away the clouds as fast as they appeared. The "tramps" were a sight to behold with their purpled faces and the sweat pouring from every pore, but Tacoma was yet four or five miles away and it was nearly dinner time. To add to our difficulties "Buck's" feet were beginning to hurt his boots, but he did not complain. It was at least twenty-four miles to Big Stone Gap, where we were to take supper, but we had a "pass" and the afternoon and night was before us, and besides all this we had plenty of courage. Tacoma was nearing us at every step, in fact it was already in sight. One look was enough, instead of stopping for dinner we concluded to buy a little hard tack at a store and push on to Norton, six miles below. What a sight to our eyes. Just ahead of us, say two or three hundred yards, was a freight train slowly creeping away from us. "Run right smart and may be ye can kotch it afore it gets frew de cut," said a son of Ham, and we ran. And how we made time. A six mile ride on anything would be preferable to walking, tired as we were. On we went, blowing like young cyclones, hats off, coats and baggage streaming in the wind. It was a narrow escape and we were all out of breath as the colored cook reached out a friendly hand and pulled the three "tramps" into the side door of an old freight car.

An Immense Clock.

The tower of a public building now in course of erection at Philadelphia is to be provided with a clock, which, for size alone, will be one of the marvels of the world. The centre of the dial (twenty-five feet in diameter) will be 351 feet above the street. The bell is to weigh between 20,000 and 25,000 pounds and its peal will be heard even to the most distant part of the city. Chimes will be used, ringing at the quarter, half, three-quarters and hour. The minute hand is to be twelve feet and the hour hand nine feet in length, while the Roman figures on the dial will measure two feet eight inches in length.

June Seventeenth.

This holiday will be observed in Quincy this year with more than usual earnestness. The PATRIOT office will be closed all day and the DAILY LEDGER will be omitted, but the issue the next day will be full of news.

The main attractions will be at Merry Mount Park, where an immense amount of work will be done, by the ladies and others interested in the City hospital, to make it well worth the attention of all our citizens. Not less than ten thousand should go, so as to encourage all who are laboring for our City Hospital.

We learn from Mr, Weeks superintendent of the Boston and Quincy street railway, that the very best of accommodations will be given on the Seventeenth. Cars will be run to Merry Mount Park every ten minutes if the demand requires it. The Hospital fete will be a grand affair, and all our citizens should take a ride on the street cars to the grounds, if they cannot stop more than thirty minutes.

Good Will Club.

The members of the Good Will Whist club of which Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Tilton are members, tendered them a house warming at their new residence on Merrymount road Thursday evening.

The guests arrived shortly after 8 o'clock and an hour was spent on the broad piazza in pleasant conversation inhailing the cool breezes which were very refreshing after an unusually warm day.

An adjournment was then made to the spacious parlors which were brilliantly illuminated where whist was played until nearly midnight, when another adjournment was made to the dining room where refreshments were served. It was while at this pleasing occupation that Mr. Friend Crane came forward and said:

"Mr. and Mrs. Tilton, in the unavoidable absence of the president, the pleasing duty has been devolved upon me to present to you in behalf of the Good Will Whist club, this picture, with which to adorn the walls of your beautiful new home which they trust you may live to enjoy for many happy years."

Mr. and Mrs. Tilton were completely taken by surprise, but thanked them one and all for their gift and hoped that they would take occasion to often visit them, where they would always be welcomed.

The picture was a beautiful landscape etching which was encased in a substantial frame.

The house-warmers left for their homes at a late hour and as they departed they were heard to say something about having to call again and hang the picture in a proper manner.

The Opening Regatta.

Decease of an Aged Citizen.

Mr. William Field an old and highly respected citizen of this city, died at his residence on Adams street, on Monday afternoon last.

Mr. Field was taken sick with pneumonia a year ago, from which he never fully recovered, although he has been able to be about. Three months ago he had an attack of heart failure and has had several attacks since that time, although he has not been confined to his room but a few days.

He has been very hopeful all through his illness and was ready to die, but desired to live for his wife and family, and during all his illness never wanted his aged partner in life to leave him. He was conscious up to the last moment when he called for his wife and then sank into a peaceful sleep.

He was a kind father, a loving husband, an honest and upright man, and his death will be lamented by all.

The funeral services of the late William Field, Thursday afternoon, was very largely attended, the granite business of the city being generally suspended. Rev. Edward Norton officiated, and the interment was in the family tomb in the old Hancock cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

School Census.

The census of the school children of the city between the ages of 5 and 15 years was taken in the month of May, and Mr. E. E. Fellows, the enumerator, favors the PATRIOT with the following statistics.

South district,	1158	children.
Centre "	522	"
Point "	337	"
West "	1,281	"
Wollaston, "	365	"
Atlantic, "	382	"
Total,	4,045

Following is a comparison for the past six years:

	1886.	1887.	1888.	1889.	1890.	1891.
South,	727	769	840	926	1,024	1,158
Centre,	461	461	480	481	485	522
Point,	376	380	368	353	325	337

	3,088	3,153	3,296	3,495	3,665	4,045

It will be noticed at the outset that there was a remarkable increase during the past year, from 3665 in 1890 to 4045 in 1891.

The South district again makes the largest increase, gaining 14 on the West. In five years the South has gained 89 on the West and is now but 123 behind.

All the districts show an increase over a year ago, varying from 12 at the Point to 134 in the West. It is the first year in the five that each of the districts have made an increase.

The Point district is the only one that is not larger than five years ago.

The largest percentage of gain in the five years was made in the Wollaston district—over 50 per cent.

The Centre district made a larger gain the past year than in the preceding four combined, and the Atlantic district made a larger gain the past year than it did in the last five.

The following table shows the increase in each district for one and five years:

	Increase.
	In One Year.	In Five Years.

The game of ball between Engine Co. No. 1 and Chemical No. 2 will be played on the Greenleaf-street grounds, instead of at Atlantic. The reason of the change is because Chief Ripley does not want his men too far away from the Centre. The game ought to be played in the park as it would be a drawing card for the Hospital fete. A horse and wagon could be there in readiness to take the men in case of an alarm.

The petition forwarded to Representative Quincy in opposition to the new water supply contained the names of several representative citizens, but there were but sixty-seven in all, including the superintendent of the work. Did such a petition justify Representative Quincy taking the course he did? We believe there were forwarded to the Legislature petitions in favor of a new system signed by a majority of the voters. Further, three successive City Councils expressed themselves by vote in favor of a new system. In face of such facts should Representative Quincy have been influenced against the majority of the people whom he is expected to represent in the Legislature?

School Committee Meeting.

The School Committee held an adjourned meeting Tuesday evening, all members of the board with the exception of Dr. Gordon, being present.

The special business of the meeting was the election of teachers, and in order that the public may better understand the method, it might be stated that teachers in the public schools are elected for one year, and for during the pleasure of the committee. The result was published in Wednesday's DAILY LEDGER.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to consider the matter of compensation of the assistant teachers, submitted the following report which was accepted and adopted:

The number of new pupils entering the schools at the beginning of the present term—largely in excess of the number counted upon by the committee, renders it absolutely necessary that more assistants should be employed in the rooms that are over crowded to help the regular teachers.

In making up the schedule of salaries for the present year the finance committee not foreseeing the very large increase in the number of primary pupils, set down the same amount for salaries of assistants as in the previous year. As affairs have turned out, this sum will not be sufficient, and the finance committee recommended that the chairman of the School Board, be instructed to appear before the City Council at its first regular meeting in September, and ask for a special appropriation of seven hundred (700) dollars for salaries of assistants.

In the matter of the increase of salaries for the regular corps of the teachers, your committee deem it inexpedient and unwise in the present condition of our finances to make any further changes during the present financial year, not contemplated and provided for at the beginning of said year.

The meeting then adjourned until the regular meeting in September, unless called together by the chairman.

The graduation exercises of the High school will probably be held at Faxon hall Wednesday, July 1st.

Landlord's Association.

Quite a number of citizens who own or have the care of houses, met at the office of George H. Brown & Co., in Adams block, Quincy, Monday evening, and organized by the election of the following officers for the ensuing year:

President,—Albert Keating.
Vice President,—Henry McGrath.
Secretary and Treasurer,—George H. Brown.
Executive Committee,—The President and Secretary ex officio, William Williams, F. C. Pope, G. W. Prescott.

Some thirty or more have joined this association, and it is expected that not less than seventy-five will become members during the next few months.

The object is simply to protect the members against those who are bound to beat the landlords out of the rent, if they can, by hook or crook. There are other tenants who abuse houses wretchedly. All such are reported to the secretary every month, and is known as the "black list" and is kept on file for the benefit of members.

It is an excellent association and one of great benefit to owners of property in this city, and will undoubtedly flourish as many similar associations have in other places, It is much the same as the grocers' association—simply a mutual protection against rascals who are bound not to pay a bill if they can get out of it in any way.

The Following Petition

Is being circulated today by Mr. Luther S. Anderson of this city:

We, the undersigned, residents of Quincy and regular patrons of the Old Colony Railroad Co., hereby enter our protest against the reduction in train service as proposed in the timetable to go into effect Monday, June 16.

We respectfully submit that it is a great injustice to reduce the number of outward bound trains from 28 to 22 and the number of inward bound trains from 31 to 21 at such a large and important centre as Quincy.

We hereby request that in addition to the trains scheduled in said timetable to stop at Quincy, the following trains shall be ordered to stop at Quincy as soon as possible:

Outward bound—12 M., 1.45, 3.15, 4.15, 4.45, 5.15, 6.15, 7.45 P. M.

Inward bound—7.31, 7.58 or 8.01, 8.31, 9.31 A. M., 12.31, 2.01, 3.31, 5.31, 6.31 P. M.

Other requests will be submitted by the committee appointed for that purpose.

Mr. Anderson's Plan

Coincide in many particulars with the proposition in Thursday's LEDGER and each were drawn up independently of the other. Thursday's plan proposed eight new inward and he has nine; four are the same; then Mr. Anderson suggests 7.58 in place of 8.01 A. M., 9.31 in place of 9.37, 12.31 in place of 12.56, 2.01 additional, and 6.31 in place of 6.42. The number of new outward trains in Thursday's plan was seven. Mr. Anderson proposes eight, four of which agree; he drops the 9 A. M., put 1.45 P. M. in place of 1, 3.15 in place of 3.10, and adds 5.45 and 7.45.

In both plans it will not be necessary to run additional trains, but merely to stop trains which it is contemplated to run express through Quincy.

Mr. Anderson's trains are inserted in boldface in the table below in their proper places in the new timetable:

Debt Limit of Quincy.

Considerable is heard of late about reaching the debt limit of the city, and it will be of interest to the PATRIOT readers to learn just what the situation is today.

With this object in view a representative of the PATRIOT has interviewed City Treasurer Adams, from whom the following figures are obtained:

The city debt of Jan. 1, 1891 plus the sum contracted since,	$235,930.46
Debt paid in 1891,	9,400.00
Debt today,	$226,530.46

The total amount falling due in 1891 is $33,835.39 but until this is paid it is a debt, and must be so considered. The next payment will be on July 1, $9,600.

Principal Assessor Pope was next seen, who furnished the following statistics:

Valuation for 1888,	$9,757,960.00
Valuation for 1889,	12,319,245.00
Valuation for 1890,	13,677,410.00
Total for three years,	$35,754,615.00
Abatements for three years,	363,702.00
Total with abatement,	$35,390,913.00
Average valuation,	11,796,971.00
Amount that can be raised,	141,563,652.10
Limit of City debt,	294,924.27

If we deduct from the debt limit, $294,924.27, the debt of today, $226,530.40, there appears a leeway of $67,393.87. This amount will be increased by $9600 on July 1, when a debt payment is made, making the borrowing capacity then $76,993.87.

There are now before the council several scheme including one of $35,000 for a new brick schoolhouse. Should this pass it would leave but about $40,000 for Water street, a new engine house, etc., etc.

Query: Where is the city coming to?

Regattas and Hops.

Opening race of the Quincy Club this Saturday.

The Hull Club will have a race for all boats under twenty-one feet on June 17 for cash prizes.

The 135th race of the Massachusetts club will be sailed off the club's house, Dorchester, Saturday, June 13, at 3 P. M., between the sixth and seventh classes. Catboats in the sixth class must measure between 18 and 21 feet, and in the seventh class less than 18 feet. Prizes, $10 and $5.

The house committee notice issued by the Hull Yacht Club contains much interesting data. The hops this season will be given on the evenings of regatta days, dates of which are as follows: July 11 and 18, Aug. 1, 8 and 29; Aug. 15, ladies' race; Aug. 19, ladies' day. In July and August the committee hope to be able to arrange for afternoon band concerts.

Water Petition.

The following petition will probably explain the action of Representative Quincy on the water question in the Legislature:

QUINCY, May 28, 1891.

JOSIAH QUINCY, ESQ., Representative,

DEAR SIR: The undersigned, having as they believe the welfare of the city of Quincy at heart, wish to express to you and through you to the Legislature of Massachusetts their opinion, that the construction of another system of water works in this city, by the city, would be very unwise, and would in no way be for the interests of the community:—

Theophilus King, thoroughly opposed to present plan proposed by the city.

Odd Fellows' Memorial.

Tuesday was observed by Odd Fellows as Memorial day, and at the meeting of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No.80, Tuesday evening, there was an appropriate address by Past Grand Jacobs in memory of Bros. William T. Curtis and John L. Esau, who during the year passed to a higher life. The death rate of this lodge during its existence of over seven years has been unmistakably small, only seven. Notice was also taken of the death of William Field, one of the few members of the original Mt. Wollaston Lodge which was organized in 1845.

Knights of Honor Districts.

Grand Dictator Richards has divided the State into 29 Knights of Honor districts where there were 72 previously. The Quincy and Wollaston lodges are placed in No. 7, with Pilgrim of East Weymouth, Nantasket of Cohasset, Braintree of Braintree and John A. Andrew of Hingham, with Willard L. Small as District Deputy.

E. E. Williamson of Wollaston, has been commissioned over No. 3 which includes: Randolph lodge, Randolph; Massasoit lodge, Whitman; Hatherly lodge, Rockland; Plymouth Bay lodge, Plymouth, and Sachem's Rock lodge, East Bridgewater.

Walter L. Main's circus will visit Quincy on Thursday, June 18, and exhibit on grounds at South Quincy. The Ashatabula News says: "Walter L. Main's circus drew a big crowd last Thursday afternoon and evening, about every seat in the mammoth tent being filled. The circus performance was superior to any show ever here. The managerie though not large, ontained some very fine animals. The objectionable features too often found with shows of this kind are carefully excluded by Mr. Main, who evidently take pride in giving the people a clean, first class entertainment, and to this may be attributed his wonderful success."

Drowning Accident.

Early Sunday afternoon three Italians were bathing in the old unused quarry of Frederick & Field on Quarry street when one of the number disappeared in the water and his body was not recovered until Monday noon.

All Sunday afternoon until dark attempts were made to get the body both by grappling and the use of dynamite but without satisfactory results.

About 7.10 Frederick & Field's whistle sounded Box 42 which summoned the Fire Department, and a crowd. There was no need of the former and the latter did not render much assistance.

The unfortunate man was Domenico Romeri, an unmarried Italian, aged about 23 years. He was a stone polisher by trade, at one time worked for Councilman W. F. Powers, but for some time passed he has been in business for himself with Franklin Lancisi, off Willard street, West Quincy. He has no relatives in this country but a brother and sister in the old country.

Charles Casna, who was one of the two men with Romeri at the time, tells the following story of the accident:

"I had been in bathing and wanted Romeri to come in also but he at first refused, saying that the place was too public and wanted to go somewhere else. Finaly, just as I was coming out, he undressed and came in. He dove off the rocks and swam around the pond several times, when all of a sudden he sank. I dove for him and caught hold of his hair when he caught me by the right leg and was pulling me down when I managed to pull my leg away. He then grabbed my left leg, which with some difficulty I managed to get away and swam to the shore, where the other man who was with us had come with a plank. This we pushed towards him in hopes that he would take hold of it, so we could pull him in. This he tried to do but failed to catch it and sank. We made several other efforts to get the body but were unsuccessful."

Officer Hunt and a crowd of willing workers were at work on a raft with long poles with hooks in the end, all the morning fishing for the body.

The body of Romeri was recovered shortly before noon and given in charge of Undertaker Hall. His Italian friends in the city assumed charge of his funeral which was held Tuesday morning from St. Mary's church. A procession was formed at Hall's undertaking rooms and followed by a large number of Italians proceeded to St. John's church where mass was celebrated by Rev. F. A. Frigugliettii, after which the remains were interred in the Catholic cemetery at West Quincy.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Dr. J. A. Gordon addressed the men's meeting Sunday afternoon on "Healthy Homes," giving many and valuable hints as to the way a house should be built to secure the most favorable conditions for the health of the occupants.

For the Death of Beven.

A verdict of $250 was given the plaintiff Saturday in the case of George Esson, administrator of estate of Alexander Beven vs. Andrew Milne of Quincy tried in the Superior Court at Dedham.

It was an action of tort to recover $4000 damages for personal injuries, which caused the death of plaintiff's intestate, received while working in the defendant's stone yard at Quincy in April, 1889.

For the Patriot.

From the State House.

BOSTON, June 10, 1891.

The warm contest in the House over the bill to regulate mercantile agencies has been settled by the defeat of the bill by 72 yeas to 95 nays on ordering it to a third reading. The chief speakers for the bill were Messrs. Miller of Worcester and Howard of North Brookfield. Considerable evidence was introduced to show that mercantile agencies injure the reputation of business men by false statements and no attempt was made to deny this, but the answer was that these agencies do much good. Mr. Kimball of Fitchburg read a letter from one of their chief business men saying that he could not do business without the agencies and there was much argument to the same effect. The purpose of the bill was that the statements of agencies shall not be privileged communications, but that agencies shall be responsible in court for the injury they do. The answer was that such a law would drive the agencies out of business and so the bill was killed.

The Senate has gone on record in favor of the bill for the taxation of collateral inheritances, but it has been amended in several particulars, especially by providing that the law shall not apply to educational, charitable and religious institutions. There was opposition to the bill as unjust, unconstitutional and partial in its application to property, but the reply was that they would risk its constitutionality and that it was a sure and easy way to raise money for public use to the relief of farmers and other small taxpayers.

Thursday's all-engrossing event was the contest in the House over the congressional redistricting bill and the former attempt was renewed to refer it to the next Legislature. The motion was made by Mr. Murray of Fitchburg and the contest raged all day long between the members of the Republican party. It was an effort to bring over to the majority of the party the little knot who were standing with the Democrats in favor of the committee's bill. It was a hard contest, exciting and even fierce. Mr. Murray was especially vehement in his denunciation of Mr. Bennett of Everett, one of the recalcitrant Republican, and Messrs. Wardwell of Haverhill and Wilson of Boston were very vehement in their use of party arguments. Great pressure had been put upon the few Republicans and three men changed sides to the majority of their party—Messrs. Brooks of West Springfield, Hunting of East Bridgewater and Kimball of Fitchburg. One changed the other way—Mr. Emery of Taunton, the only minister in the House. By 101 yeas to 120 nays and five pairs, the House defeated Mr. Murray's motion to refer to the next Legislature. The House then voted down all of the amendments which had been offered and by 130 to 84 passed the bill to be engrossed. Only two Democrats were absent from the roll call Thursday and they had previously voted not to postpone, so the party vote was unanimous in favor of the bill. Speaker Barrett was pressed to take the floor against the bill, but he refused to do so, though he worked against it diligently among the members. The Senate engrossed the bill unchanged.

This week sees the last of the Legislature. It has been three weeks shorter than the long session of last year and of about the average length in recent years. Though the parties have been divided equally in the Senate, yet there has not been the friction or obstruction which might have been expected from that fact. On some matters there has been a division on party lines, but there has not been any bitterness to regret at the close of the session, nor any partisan demonstration to tarnish the reputation of the Senators as gentlemen. It is a very unusual experience, that of having a tie, and the absence of great trouble has been due to the absence of a matter on which to divide sharply. Suppose anything had come up on which filibustering had occurred, then would have been seen a stubborn contest. But it did not occur and the State may be thankful.

The legislation this year has been important in the fact that it has involved immense financial interests, though the measures effected have not always become laws. Mere mention will prove this. There has been the selling of new railroad stock at public auction, the Boston & Maine consolidation, the grade crossing amendment bill, the municipal gas and electric lighting bill, the taxation of corporations which have street franchises, the doomage taxation bill, the bill relating to the hours of labor of women and minors in mechanical and manufacturing establishments, the dairy bureau and oleo bill, the tax on collateral inheritances, the exposure of the ownership of stock in foreign corporations, the regulation of mercantile agencies, the assessment endowment and bond investment bills, the Cape Cod canal bill, the monthly putting on interest of savings banks deposits, and so on. The list is long and the financial aggregate involved is incalculable. In this point of view the session has been of high importance.

The law against the lobby has done some good. I know of cases in which it has about strangled the business of some men. They cannot live in the lobby another year under the conditions of this year. The corporations which have hitherto employed them have not set them to work. Some men have defied the law. Others have nominally complied, but have really evaded it. Others have tried honestly to observe it. But the law has a very weak point. No one is responsible for its enforcement. Unless this defect is remedied, the law must be a dead letter soon. If the right course is taken, permanent good will result.

There has been less talk of corruption than there was last year, yet reports come to me of disgraceful venality on the part of some members. It is said that an officer in a bond investment company wrote a $100 bond and presented it to a member and I have no doubt the story is true. Rumors are current which are probably well founded that some corrupt legislators have practically levied blackmail upon some of the bond investment and assessment endowment companies. The new lobby registration law enables such members to go direct to the corporation and seek to make terms for themselves. But I do not believe there has been as much corruption as last year and it is clear that the lobby law has done good. RULE.

Epworth League Concert.

One of the most pleasing of the many entertainments given under the auspices of the Epworth League, connected with the West Quincy Methodist church, was held Wednesday evening in the church proper.

There was a large audience present who thoroughly enjoyed the lengthy programme which had been provided.

The entertainment opened with a piano solo by Mr. Frank Gilbert, which he rendered in his usual masterly manner.

Mrs. L. Doremus followed with a soprano solo entitled "I Love Thee," and although encored could not be prevailed upon to respond.

Miss May Reynolds, a talented elocutionist, gave a reading entitled "The Pilot's Story," and for an encore gave "The Likeness."

A quartette composed of Messrs. Nye, Miller, Jones, and Gardner gave a selection entitled "Swanee River," which was followed by a song by Miss Addie Miller with violin obligato by Mr. George Monk.

The next number was a selection by the Quincy Banjo Mandolin and Guitar Club, Messrs. Ford, Penniman, White and Fuller, who sustained their well known reputation and received a loud encore, especially from the bevy of young ladies in the lower left hand corner.

Miss Abbie Fuller gave a pleasing solo and in response to the wishes gave an encore.

Part two opened with another piano solo by Mr. Gilbert, who was followed by Mr. Harvey Page in a baritone solo that at once captivated the audience and he was obliged to respond.

Miss Reynolds again appeared and gave a semi-humorous selection entitled "A Bag of Beans."

Miss Miller followed with another solo, with violin obligato by Mr. Monk.

The next number was a duet by Mr. Nye and Mr. Page who rendered the present popular air, "Waiting for Katie," which received such ovation that they responded with "Down on the Farm."

The male quartette sang "Come Away," and Mrs. Doremus gave two selections entitled: "It was not just to be" and "Dreams."

The entertainment closed with a selection by the Banjo, Guitar and Mandolin Club.

At the close of the programme ice cream was served in the lower room.

Testimonial to Miss Coffey.

Miss Ellenore Carroll, (E. C. Coffey), and Mr. John W. Rose were given a testimonial at Robertson hall, Thursday evening, when "Little Lord Fauntleroy" was presented by the H. M. Pitts' comedy company with Miss Coffey as Minna; Mr. Pitts as the Earl and little Olive Homans as the Lord, which was witnessed by a large, select and appreciative audience.

By the many boquets of choice cut flowers passed over the footlights it was evident that there were many favorites in the cast. Miss Coffey, Miss Homans, Mr. Pitts and Mr. Rose receiving more than their share. One of those presented to Miss Coffey was a handsome basket of roses from the St. John's C. L. & A. A., under whose management she made her first appearance as an amateur.

The other characters in the play which were taken by Mr. G. F. Farren, Mr. Elmer W. Rae, Mr. Carl Scranton, Mr. C. F. Bates, Mr. E. Powers, Miss Margaret B. Dodge, Miss Annie Athey, Miss Emily Bramhall, and Miss Eva Turner were all good.

At the close of the performance those who took part partook of refreshments.

Vtsit to Athol.

The Suburban Press Association received an invitation through their secretary, R. William Waterman, Esq., from the citizens and Board of Trade of Athol to visit that beautiful town and enjoy the hospitality which they so generously extended. A large party of over 100 ladies and gentlemen accepted the invitation and left Boston on Saturday morning last via Fitchburg railroad and after a pleasant ride arrived in Athol about 11 o'clock and were cordially received at the depot by the president of the Board of Trade and members of the reception committee. The excursionists were divided into parties and dispatched to the three fine hotels, Commercial, Pequoig and Summit House, where bountiful dinners were provided by the landlords of these excellent hotels.

After enjoying a short rest, carriages were generously furnished by the citizens who drove the party through the beautiful town, which is certainly famous for its fine drives through a very picturesque country and the scenery from all sides was perfectly grand and lovely. Having enjoyed this fine drive for some hours we were driven to the pier, where boats were waiting to take the party to Camp Florence on Lake Ellis, the summer home of Mr. Waterman. Here the tourists were received and made welcome by the host and his excellent wife. A generous supper was partaken of and the invigorating air of the beautiful island seemed to infuse new strength and vigor which was truly refreshing, and we do not wonder at the spiciness of Brother Waterman's paper when he inhales so much balmy and refreshing air.

The party having enjoyed a very delightful outing returned to their labors on Monday greatly refreshed and with many pleasant memories of the beautiful town of Athol and its noble-hearted citizens, their kind-hearted brother of the quill and his family, who so pleasantly entertained them, Mrs. Winsor, who catered for them and all others who contributed to their comfort and pleasure.

The Early Fly.

It is in the morning early,
When we're sometimes cross and surly
And we feel that we must sleep a trifle more,
That the worst of all annoyers,
The great prince of rest destroyers,
The pesky fly begins his gay and festive soar.

We pretend we do not hear him,
That it's not worth while to fear him,
And we try to make ourselves believe we sleep.
Then he lights on arm or shoulder,
But he very soon grows bolder,
And directly for our ears begins to creep.

Then it is we give up dreaming,
When our brain with wild thoughts teeming
We proceed to kill him with a fearful slap.
With a slam we spread our fingers
All about the spot he lingers,
But the fly escapes, we've nothing but the slap.

This performance oft repeated
Gets our patience overheated,
And we swear the house of flies shall now be shorn.
Then we presently forget it,
But we'll grievously regret it
When we try to sleep tomorrow morn.

Household Receipts.

MUTTON CROQUETTES. One-half cupful of chopped mutton, one teacupful of boiled rice, two eggs, salt and pepper, roll in cracker crumbs and fry.

BAKED OMELET. One cupful of boiling milk; beat the yolks of four eggs, and add hot milk and a teaspoonful of melted butter; wet three teaspoonfuls of flour in a little cold milk, add the beaten whites, and beat all; salt and pepper well; bake twenty minutes. It is very appetizing.

VEAL LOAF. One teacupful of chopped veal, one cupful of mashed potatoes, two eggs, one-half cupful of sweet milk, little cold gravy improves it, salt and pepper, roll bread or cracker crumbs in it to make a loaf, lay in a pie pan, fill it half full of boiling water, lay pieces of butter on the top, let cook until dry, slice when cold for supper.

LYONNAISE POTATOES. Cut some cold boiled potatoes into small square blocks; shred an onion finely; drop potatoes and onion into boiling lard and fry a light brown; drain on paper and serve in a very hot dish. Dust with powdered parsley before serving.

LOAF CAKE. Five cupfuls of light dough, four and a half cupfuls of sugar, two and a half cupfuls of butter and four eggs. Cream the butter and sugar together and add the eggs, then mix with the dough; add any kind of spices and fruit to taste; put in a mold and set to rise for a short time and then bake like bread.

SUGARED ORANGE. Select the lightest colored oranges for this purpose, as they are more acid than the dark. Peel off the rind and slice them, latitudinally or crosswise, about the eighth of a inch in thickness. Strew over them some powdered white sugar, in the proportion of a teaspoonful of sugar to each slice. Let them stand fifteen minutes. They are very palatable in fevers, as they serve to cleanse the mouth and keep it cool.

Rhubarb stewed without peeling is of a most attractive pink tint. Pound for pound of sugar and rhubarb, with just enough water to dissolve the sugar, is a good rule, and it should be cooked only till the rhubarb is tender.

The United States Government is about to go into the business of raising reindeer, which will afterwards be sent to Alaska for use by the Esquimaux in place of dogs in drawing sledges. The experiment will not be costly, and may be of great benefit. With Alaska stocked with reindeer, the natives would not only have an excellent draught animal, but, in case of necessity, a food supply of value.

Judgment has been rendered in court in Raleigh, North Carolina, in favor of James A. Bryan, plaintiff, for the recovery of James City, a village of 1000 negroes, across the Trent river from Newberne. The negroes were settled on Bryan's land by Federal authority in 1862, and have held possession ever since. The suit has been pending ten years. It is said Bryan will offer terms of amicable settlement and let the present population continue their occupation.

STOLE LOCOMOTIVES. Peter A. Short, who is in jail in Sacramento, Cal., has a record as a man with a mania for stealing locomotives. About two years ago he stole an engine out of the Portland (Ore.) yard, and ran it to Oregon city before he was captured. The track was kept clear by telegraph. He escaped, and next appeared at Sacramento, where he indulged in a precisely similar break. Last December there was a bad wreck at Fresno, which cost two lives. It was traced to a runaway engine, and Short was the man in charge. A reward of $2000 was offered for him by the railroad people, who propose to put him in State prison.

Anecdotes.

"What did you say this was?" he asked as he dallied with his dessert.

"It is angel cake, dear," replied his wife; "but I'm afraid it is just a trifle heavy."

"It occurred to me while I was eating it," he responded, "that it might not have been greatly out of the way to call it 'fallen angel' cake."

"Mamma, what's twins?" asked the smallest child.

"I know," replied an older one before the mother could answer. "Twins is two babies just the same age; three babies are triplets, four are quadrupeds, and five are centipedes.

Mrs. Lushley: "And there you were when the policeman found you at three in the morning hugging a cigar sign. Oh, it's just awful."

Mr. Lushley: "My dear, it surely is not possible that you are jealous of a cigar sign."

Conductor (to Murphy, who is on top of the wall.)—"Phawt do ye be doin', Murphy?"

Murphy—"Oi do be layin' bricks, o' course."

"Be bivins, you do be still enough to be layin' eggs.

Father—"James, why did you eat all the candy in the box I gave you? I said that you could only have three pieces."

James—"Well, I know, father; but I couldn't help it. I've been making believe there was another little boy spending the day with me."

Hearn-Connor.

Mr. Charles C. Hearn, West Quincy's well known druggist, and Miss Sarah M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Connor, were united in marriage Tuesday afternoon at the Gate of Heaven church, South Boston. Rev. W. J. Merrick performing the ceremony.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gray travelling dress, with pearl passementerie, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. Miss Frances and Mr. Robert Hearn, sister and brother of the groom were bridesmaid and groomsman.

A reception was held in the evening at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 60 Thomas park. The rooms were tastefully trimmed with potted plants and cut flowers. The ushers were Mr. Maurice D. and Mr. Daniel F. Connor, Mr. Joseph J. Devereux, Mr. Daniel Noonan, Mr. Alexander J. Barrett and Mr. J. F. Conran.

Among the many beautiful and costly presents was an oak sideboard and a silver tea service from the West Qunicy friends of Mr. Hearn, among whom there were present Chief Engineer Walter H. Ripley, Councilmen Fallon, Powers and Hammond, ex-Councilman W. T. Shea, Representative James F. Burke, T. L. Williams, Stephen Little and others.

The bride presented her husband with a gold watch and she was the recipient of a handsome diamond brooch from her husband.

During the evening a choice musical programme was rendered by Mullaly's orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Hearn left on a late train for New York and after a brief trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls they will return to West Quincy to reside.

Rev. John Ramsey Called.

A meeting of the congregation was held in the Presbyterian church, South Quincy, Tuesday evening, for the purpose of electing a minister; the Rev. Mr. Gunn of Boston acting as moderator.

There were seven candidates and on the first ballot it was found that the Rev. John Ramsey, M. A., had an overwhelming majority, all voting for him except thirty-five. On the suggestion of the moderator the minority acquiesced and cordially agreed to give Mr. Ramsey a unanimous call.

Discharged.

In 1849, Robert Lane took a mortgage upon a piece of real estate in Quincy, and the mortgage is on record in the Registry of Deeds at Dedham. Lane went to California to make his fortune in gold digging, and has never been seen in this city since. The principal and interest on the mortgage has remained unpaid since 1849. The owners of the property desiring to dispose of it applied to Judge Lathrop of the Supreme Court to have the mortgage discharged, so that a clear title of the property could be given. The Judge has ordered a decree in favor of the petitioner.

The rights to use additional streets for the extension of tracks was also granted. Permission was subsequently granted the Fall River Electric Freight Railway to use the highways for tracks and curves, for transporting coal, cloth, cotton, etc., by electric power.

REMARKABLE APPLE TREES. Connecticut, so it was claimed by Mr. Hale of Glastonbury at the meeting of the apple growers at Springfield, Mass., the other day, has the honor of having the oldest apple tree and the largest apple tree in the country. The oldest tree in question is in Wethersfield, on the Standish place, and was planted in 1638 or 1640, and is still in good bearing condition. It is an English pearmain. The largest apple tree is on the Delos Hotchkiss place in Cheshire, although Mr. Hale didn't give its dimensions. It still bears profusely, although known to be 125 years old.

Teachings of Science.

The term inebreity, or dipsomania, is applied to a condition in which the subject of it is supposed to be incapable of self-control, and is given up to periodical or constant drunkenness. There has been much discussion of the question as to whether this state should be considered a disease or a vice. That it is a disease or a morbid state of the nervous system, there can be no reasonable doubt, but it is a disease produced by alcoholic indulgence, and that indulgence, while controllable and in view of its probable effects, must be considered as a vice. Theologians generally consider drunkenness in all its forms, as a vice, and there seems ground for this opinion in the Scriptural declaration, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of Heaven." But in the case of the confirmed dipsomaniac the sin, if sin there be, was committed before disease had rendered the person irresponsible—before the brain became so diseased as to deprive the victim of self-control. But whether it should be called a disease or a vice, it is the effect of alcohol upon the nervous system; the tendency to the condition often being hereditary—generally from alcoholic indulgence in parents—but developed into the actually morbid state by the indulgence of the individual. Whether a disease or a vice, it is very difficult of cure, and if temporarily relieved, either by physical or moral means, it is exceedingly liable to return, and result in moral and physical death.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Right Again.

Congressman Morse is out with an open letter to Mr. Tobey of Wareham, which shows him to have correctly represented the tariff on boiler shearing on the stump. He writes:

"I desire through your columns, to recur to the correspondence between Mr. Toby of Wareham and myself upon the subject of the duty on boiler shearings, in which he charged me with falsehood and misrepresentations, in that I insisted that the McKinley bill fixed the duty on boiler shearings at three-tenths of one cent per pound, a reduction of fifteen per cent. upon the former duty.

"I desire now to call his attention to the fact that the board of appraisers at New York has now rendered a decision fixing the duty upon boiler shearings at three-tenths of one cent per pound, just as I understood the McKinley bill when it passed, as Senator Hoar and Senator Aldrich understood the bill, and as I represented it on the stump during the last campaign.

"Your readers will bear in mind that he charged me with wilfully and intentionally misrepresenting the McKinley bill as applied to the tack maker's raw material. If he has a spark of manhood or honor about him it will now be in order for him to retract those charges and to say that I was correct and correctly represented the tariff bill, as applied to boiler shearings.

"I am aware that it is still a possibility, but not a probability, that the collector of the port of Boston may appeal to the court from the appraiser's decision. Collector Beard's sympathies with the manufacturers of New England are well known, so that campaign lie No. 1 is undoubtedly hung up and will not serve Mr. Tobey again in the next campaign, and I was correct in my statement, and Mr. Tobey was false and incorrect, and did me, the Republican party and the McKinley bill a great wrong and injustice."

The Only Great Powers of the world that have reduced their national debts in the last decades are the United Sates and England. The debt of the United States in 1890 was $1,006,555,252 less than in 1880 when its total was $1,922,517,364. England in the same time paid off $229,000,000 of its debt. The fact that neither of these debt-reducing countries is burdened with militarism is more than a coincidence.

Hale, on Life in the Boston of today, under the title of "The New Harry and Lucy," will commence June 13th in the Boston Commonwealth. This story takes its data from our immediate life here in Boston, from our local institutions, from our commercial and industrial pursuits, and from society the highest and the lowest. It discusses the moral and social condition of affairs and things in the city. With Peterkin wit we are shown how and why we do some things in our Boston, and our great wisdom in so doing.

A Postal Curiosity.

A curiously addressed letter passed lately through the post-office of Madrid, which was deciphered and correctly delivered, notwithstanding all difficulties. The address was a perfect rebus. At the left hand side was the figure of a lady; it was clear therefore to which sex the recipient should belong. Over the lady's head the sun was rising; hence her name was inferred to be Aurora. For her surname stood a hill, with a castle at its foot, which gives us "Montes y Castillo." Next comes the town, for which the plan of a city was drawn, on which the name Alhambra was legible. This indicated Granada, but in order to leave no doubt possible a pomegranate was drawn beside the plan.

To complete the address, a number was indicated in one of the streets of the city plan. The postal authorities took three days to study this curiosity, and then triumphantly delivered the letter to "Senorita Aurora Montes y Castillo, Azacayas No. 20, Granada," and, so far from censuring the sender, they had the envelope photographed, and a copy printed in the Madrid papers as a proof of the intelligence of the department.—Manchester (England) Times.

CARD.
THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.
We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.
In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.
We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.
Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.
We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.
Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.
Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,
F. T. APPLETON.

The Quincy Patriot
PUBLISHED
Saturday Mornings,
BY GREEN & PRESCOTT
Editors and Proprietors.

THE PATRIOT is published in the only city in Norfolk County, and is one of the oldest newspapers in the State, being established in 1837. Its average circulation is over 2200 copies weekly.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION,
No. 115 HANCOCK STREET, QUINCY.

TERMS:—$2.50 per year in advance. $3.00 if not paid before the close of the year.
M. ELIZABETH GREEN. GEO. W. PRESCOTT.

Poetry.

A Memory.

A wail of a child at midnight,
The chime of a minster bell,
The sorrowful moan of a sorrowing soul
And the sound of a passing knell.

An old worn book on a corner shelf
And a spray of faded yew,
A locket with hair all golden and fair
And a ribbon of faded blue.

A needle case, both empty and old,
And a case with hidden spring,
Wherein two golden watch keys lie,
A heart—and a wedding ring.

I take the book from the corner shelf,
And the ribbon of faded blue;
And before me stands the form I loved,
With hair of a golden hue.

And I gaze so long in those earnest eyes
That my soul grows weak with pain;
Then she fades away—and I gently lay
The old book down again.

Every Other Saturday.

Miscellany.

"A LITTLE CHILD."

BY HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

It was a cheerless September afternoon, the gray sky hanging close to the salt marshes, that seemed to close up the horizon, and tall reeds swaying in the moaning wind.

A single sailing boat was heading for the open sea, and Miss Nancy Dearborn, resolutely digging for clams on the beach, looked out toward the dull, flat landscape with a shudder.

Her niece, Fannie Sweet, was with her. Both were dressed in strict accordance with their employment, in calico gowns, with knit worsted jackets, and scarlet shawls tied over their heads.

Miss Nancy was tall and gaunt. Fanny Sweet—"Sweet Fanny," as the girls of the neighborhood jokingly called her—was small, and round and rosy.

The wind, which turned Miss Nancy's nose to a fine purple, only added a fresher glow to Fanny's peach-like cheeks, so unevenly does Dame Nature dole out her gifts.

And as the two women dug diligently in the wet sand, and piled their dripping treasure-trove into the splint basket beside them, a brisk dialogue went on.

"I, for one, shan't consent to it," said Miss Nancy. "It's bad enough for you to marry a fellow like Asa Litchfield, with nothin' but a mortgaged farm and his own two hands, when you might have Hebe Holt, with the whole rubber factory at his back."

Fanny's cheeks were real peony color now.

"I wouldn't have Hebe Holt," she cried—"not if he had all the money in the—"

"That'll do!" curtly observed Aunt Nancy. "I heerd all that afore—no need to repeat it. It's bad enough, I'm sayin', for you to make such a choice as that, anyhow; but when Asa had the impudence to ask you to take them two orphan young 'uns of his sister's to bring up into the bargain, I say that's the last straw on the camel's back!"

"I like children, Aunt Nancy!"

"Get out!" sharply retorted the old woman. "Children! meddlin', tormentin' little things! I don't b'lieve there's a creeter livin' that really likes children! If Asa was to bring you a pair o' young rattlesnakes or a pair o' catamount kits in a basket, you'd say you liked 'em!"

"But, Aunt Nancy—"

"Will you let me get a word in edgeways?" peremptorily demanded Miss Nancy. "I never see such a one as you be to talk. What I want you distinctly to understand is that I draw the line at them young 'uns, and I refuse to give my consent!"

"They have got to be provided for, Aunt Nancy."

"Well, where's the poorhouse and all the asylums we're taxed to pay for?"

"Asa never would allow—"

"Neither will I," said Miss Dearborn, unearthing a whole colony of different sized clams. "A I won't hear another word! I'm sick o' the whole business."

A brief silence ensued, during which Miss Nancy dug assiduously on, and Fanny followed suit as well as she could, stopping ever and anon to brush away the tears that blinded her vision.

"We don't seem to hev much luck, today," observed Miss Nancy. "Needle Beach ain't what it used to be for clams. I'd like to get enough for supper tonight and a br'ilin' for breakfast tomorrow mornin', and a mess to send to Widow Clements, and— My laws! what a gust o' wind that 'ere was! I guess Fanny, we'd better strike work if its blowin' up from the east like that! There goes my head-shawl! Quick—help me hoist the basket outer the way o' that big tidal wave! I an't made no mistake in the almanac, hev —I don't understand this."

Fanny Sweet abandoned the basket of clams to its fate and clung to her aunt, while at the same time she tried to drag her shoreward.

"Aunt Nancy," she shouted in the old woman's ear, "it's a squall! I knew there was a black cloud coming up, but I didn't think it would reach us so soon. Let us run—let us make haste to the Smuggler's Hole! Quick, Aunt Nancy! Never mind the clams and the spades. It's beginning to rain so terribly!"

Miss Nancy Dearborn was a woman of genuine courage and spirit, but the black sky, the rising surf and the howling of the wind terrified her into rapid retreat.

"Oh, why didn't we keep a watch on the clouds?" she bewailed herself, holding desperately to Fanny's arm, while her gray hair streamed wildly from her uncovered head, and every step in the wet sand was taken with greater difficulty. "What's goin' to become of us? The last equinoctial they had on Needle Beach lasted three days—"

"This won't last three days, Aunt Nancy," said Fanny cheerily, as she dragged the old woman under the shelter of a ruinous log hut built up against a beetling rock, where, according to the voice of popular rumor, smugglers had once made merry rendezvous, and where the black mouth of a cave was said to lead to the bones of drowned people innumerable. "But I shan't at all wonder if we had to stay here until the tide made it unsafe to go back home tonight. Don't fret. I've got some ginger cookies in my pocket, and there's always dry wood up against the rock. And besides," she added with a laugh, "I know where Asa Litchfield's fishing friends keep their matches in a little cubbyhole in the rock. We can make a fire and eat our cookies, and—. Why, Aunt Nancy, what's the matter? Why do you scream so?"

For even as the two women pushed their way into the hut, a little child, with long yellow locks floating around her like a sea-sprite, came running to them.

"Does it rain?" said she. "But it's nice and dry here. And Johnny is coming back when he's caught some fish. And I've got a basket of lunch here—see?"

"Mercy on us, child! who be you?" said Miss Dearborn, staring in amazement.

"I'm Daisy!" musically answered the sprite.

"Daisy who?"

"Johnny's Daisy!" laughed the child, a chubby four-year-old tot. "Johnny left me here. He's catching fish. He'll be back soon."

"I hope to goodness nothin' happened to him!" said Aunt Nancy with a groan.

"What's his other name, child?"

"Just Johnny," said Daisy, with a puzzled lifting of her eyebrows.

"Is he your brother?"

Daisy nodded.

"I'm his little sissy," said she, contentedly.

"And where do you live?"

"In the city, to-be-sure."

"What city?"

Daisy stamped her small foot.

"The city," said she. "Don't you know? The city, where every one else lives."

And then she snugged up to Fanny and laughed aloud to see the flames burning upward through the network of driftwood which the girl had artistically built up on the smoke blackened hearth.

"Is the creeter' a fool?" observed Miss Nancy.

"I can say 'Mary had a little lamb,'" said the child, suddenly, smiling up into Miss Nancy's perplexed face, "and 'Twinkle, twinkle, little star.'"

"Oh, yes, I dare say!" said the ancient spinster, irritably rubbing the side of her nose. "But where's the use o' teaching a child such jingle-jangles as that, when she can't tell her own name, nor where she lives? I've no patience with folks.

Fanny, that fire's blazin' up real good now. Put the little mite in front on't. She's fairly blue with cold; and I'll open the basket and see what there is for her to eat."

But the child offered her poor remnants of dry sandwiches and baker's cake to the two women.

"I—I'm not hungry!" said she, with a quivering lip. "I wish Johnny would come back."

Fanny and her aunt exchanged pitying glances, and the latter cuddled little Daisy close to her in the cheerful fireshine.

"Don't be afraid, Daisy," said she. "We'll stay here with you. It'll be fair weather pretty soon, and then we'll all go home."

The storm raged pitilessly until sunset. Black waves roared, hoarse winds whistled and sheets of spray came flying up the beach like spectres.

Asa Litcfield, in his stout-covered wagon, came for the two women as soon as the tempest had abated sufficiently for a horse to make any headway against it.

"I reckoned likely you'd take shelter here,"—said he. "I am awfully worried about you."

He looked down at the child who lay sleeping in Aunt Nancy's lap.

"And what are we to do about the little 'un?" said he. "Where does she belong?"

"Why, nowhere!" said Fanny.

And she told the strange history of the little waif.

Asa whistled under his breath.

"There's been two wrecks below," said he. "One was an orange-boat from Florida. Cut to splinters on the rocks; but the cappen an' the crew managed to get ashore all right. T'other was a little sail-boat flung up on Rossiter's Reefs like a sheet o' paper, with a yellow-haired young chap all tangled up in the riggin."

Miss Nancy mechanically stroked Daisy's flaxen locks.

"Dead?" whispered she.

"Dead!" nodded Asa Litchfield.

"It must be Johnny," said Miss Dearborn, her old lip quivering. Don't let her know."

Asa turned away, with a lump in his throat.

"The wagon's ready," said he. "And we calculate to get ahead of the tide we'd better be startin' pretty lively."

"Aunt Nancy, let me take her," said Fanny.

The old woman drew back.

"No one shan't touch her but me," she muttered, almost angrily.

And Fanny said no more.

Little Daisy slept that night in a trundle-bed which had been Miss Nancy's as a child and Fanny Sweet's afterward.

And as the old woman sat reading her "chapter" by the fire, and heard the wind shriek down the chimney and the waves thunder along the beach, she whispered many a secret prayer.

And toward daybreak, when the gale shook the loosely-fitting front door like touch of a human hand, she got up, and creeping out into the hall, softly opened it.

"Ef that's you, Johnny," said she, "you needn't worry no more. She shall be took care of!"

And after that, strange to say, the wind suddenly went down, and the door shook and trembled no more.

With sunrise the great storm—as it was afterward known along the coast—seemed to abate its rigor a little.

Aunt Nancy was up bright and early, cooking ham and eggs and frying fritters for breakfast. The fragrance of the coffee already filled the room when Fanny Sweet came in.

"Yes, I know," said Aunt Nancy, as she saw her niece's eyes turn toward the open bedroom door beyond—"I know jest exactly what you're thinking of, and you may as well know what I've made up my mind to do, I'm going to keep that pretty little girl and adopt her for my own."

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Fanny, bursting into tears—she scarcely knew why.

"Yes, I be," said Aunt Nancy, flourishing the tin skimmer. "I never had no one—not even you, Fanny, when you was a little chick and your mother died—take holt o' my heart as she's done. I know I'm an old fool, and I know folks'll laugh at me, but I don't care two pence for that. I mean to keep her. And, Fanny—"

"Yes, Aunt Nancy!"

"I was sort o' thinkin' when you're married to Asa Litchfield, and have them two little gals come to live with you, they'll be lots o' company for Daisy.

Fanny's eyes sparkled.

"Yes," said she, "they will."

"And, Fanny—"

"Yes, Aunt Nancy!"

"Why couldn't they come here right away," rather sheepishly questioned Aunt Nancy, "and stay a spell with me. Daisy'll be' lonely jest at first."

Fanny threw both her arms around Miss Dearborn.

"You are the dearest aunty in the world," said she. "Now I feel free to tell you that Asa wants me to be married right away—and Kitty and Rosy shall come here while we are gone to Bridgeport for our wedding trip."

So the arrangement was made. They never knew what Daisy's other name was, nor whether the fair-haired boy who perished in the great storm was in reality any relation of hers. But at all events she was never claimed, and her little life brightened into a sunshine that cast equal light on Aunt Nancy's fading down hill of existence.

"I always knew there was a warm corner in Aunt Nancy's heart," said Fanny. "But I never could tell quite how to reach it."

"I guess the Lord understood human nature better'n we do," said Asa Litchfield, in his slow way, "when 'He took a little child and set him in the midst of them.'"—Saturday Night.

The Wizard's Latest.

Thomas A. Edison, the famous electrician and inventor, is preparing to astonish the world by the exhibit he will make at the World's Fair in 1893. "I shall have two or three things to show," said he recently, "which I think will both surprise and please the visitors to the electrical department of the exposition, which by the way, I am fully convinced, will be a great success. Two of these inventions are not yet ready to be described, or even characterized. The third, however, is so nearly perfected, that I do not hesitate to say something about it. I hope to be able by the invention to throw upon a canvas a perfect picture of any body, and reproduce his words. Thus should Patti be singing somewhere, this invention will put her full length picture upon the canvas so perfectly as to enable one to distinguish every feature and expression of her face, see all her actions and listen to the entrancing melody of her peerless voice. The invention will do for the eye what the phonograph has done for the voice, and reproduce the voice as well, in fact more clearly. I have already perfected the invention so far as to be able to picture a prize fight—the two men, the ring, the intensely interested faces of those surrounding it—and you can hear the sound of the blows, the cheers of encouragement and the yells of disappointment. And when this invention shall have been perfected," said Mr. Edison, with a trace of enthusiasm's glow on his face, "a man will be able to sit in his library at home, and, having electrical connection with the theatre, see reproduced on his wall or a piece of canvas, the actors, and hear anything they say. I can place one so that it will command a street corner and after letting it register the passing sights for a time, I can have it cast them on a canvas so that every feature and motion of the passers, even to the twiching of the face, can be seen, and if a friend passed during the time you may know it. This invention will be called the Kinetograph." The first half of the word signifies 'motion,' and the last 'write,' and both together mean the portrayal of motion.

The invention combines photography and phonography." Mr. Edison occupied nearly an acre with his exhibit at the Paris Exposition. As he wishes to show at Chicago all that he exhibited at Paris, and numerous other things besides, he is desirous of being accorded a greater space in 1893. The electrical exhibit is expected to be the wonder of the Exposition.

Bank of England.

You never see a soiled Bank of England note. They are always white, new and crisp, for the reason that a note is never issued from the bank a second time. When they find their way into the bank, new notes of the same number and the same denomination, of course, are issued in their stead. They are made from new white linen cuttings, never from anything that has been worn. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. They are made at Laverstroke, on the river Whit, in Hampshire, by a family named Portel, descending from a French Huguenot refugee, and have been made by the same family for more than 150 years. They are printed within the building, there being elaborate arrangements for making them, so that each note of the same denomination shall differ in some particular from the other.

Pat's Deception.

An inside carful of travellers was toiling up one of the long hills in the county Wicklow. The driver leaped down from his seat in front and walked by the side of the horse. The poor beast toiled slowly and wearily, but the six inside were too busily engaged in conversation to notice how slowly the car progressed.

Presently the driver opened the door at the rear of the car and slammed it to again. The passengers started, but thought the driver was only assuring himself the door was securely closed. Again the fellow opened the door and slammed it to again. The travelers turned around angrily, and asked why he disturbed them in that manner.

"Whist," whispered the fellow; "don't spake so loud—she'll over hear us."

"Who is she?"

"The mare. Spake low," he continued, putting his hand over his nose and mouth. "Sure I'm desavin' the crayture! Every time she hears tne door slammin' that way she thinks one of yez is gettin' down to walk up the hill, and that raises her sperrits."

The insiders took the hint.—Tid-Bits.

The run from Baltimore to Philadelphia of the Royal Blue line express is made behind what is said to be the largest engine in this country. It weighs 187,000 pounds and runs on four driving wheels, six feet six inches in diameter. It is black, without a particle of bright color about it.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council had few spectators at the regular meeting on Monday, and at the roll call but thirteen members responded. This number was afterward increased, so that the only absentees were: Councilman Drake, Duffield, Holden, Morton and Rinn.

A Town Claim.

The Mayor forwarded a claim of John W. Hall for services as Chief Engineer and use of horse under the town government, $100. Referred to Committee on Claims.

The Mayor forwarded a communication of the Commissioner of Public Works, recommending that the track of the Quincy Street Railway on Saville avenue be ordered up. To Committee on Streets.

Adams Street Loan Vetoed.

The Mayor returned order 47 authorizing $3000 for Adams street claiming that as it was not for specific repairs it was in excess of the authority of the Council and illegal.

A motion to lay the order on the table was defeated and the veto sustained 4 to 9, viz:

YEAS,—Bass, Hammond, Jones and Pope—4.

NAYS,—Bryant, Gray, Hayward, Little, Moxon, Newcomb, Pratt, Thompson and Warner—9.

A communication of the Mayor enclosed one of Commissioner Ewell's stating that some specific repairs were necessary on Adams street. Laid on the table.

Councilman Bryant subsequently offered an order for $2500 for specific repairs on Adams street. To Committee on Finance.

Applications for licenses were received as follows, and referred to the committee on licenses:

As common victuallers, E. G. Sanborn, George Hatch and Mrs. H. H. Connor.

Billiard and innholders, S. A. Merrill.

To sell fireworks, Abbie J. Higgins, T. H. Conlon.

Hackney carriage, Albert O'Neil.

Applications for State Aid were received from Joseph O'Grady, Mrs. T. F. Chubbuck, John V. Hunt and Michael Early, and referred to committee on State Aid.

Water Street Set Back.

Councilman Jones said the order passed at the last meeting for a hearing on Water street had been declared null and void as the Council had not adopted a width. The order was rescinded and one for an informal hearing June 22 adopted.

Resolutions Against Timetable.

Councilman Gray offered the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, The management of the Old Colony Railroad has made great changes in the railroad facilities heretofore enjoyed by the citizens of Quincy and

WHEREAS, Said changes have deprived the patrons of said railroad not only of a large number of trains but of the means of reaching other cities and towns except by unusual and disagreeable delays and change of cars, it is hereby

Resolved, By the City Council of Quincy, that the new timetable of June 15, 1891, is unjust and injurious to the business interests of the central station, unfair to the local patrons of the road and inequitable in most of its provisions; and it is further

Resolved, That a committee of five members of this body (one of whom shall be the President) be appointed by the presiding officer, and that His Honor, the Mayor, be also invited to co-operate with the committee of citizens already selected in endeavoring to secure to the city of Quincy the railroad facilities of which it has so summarily been deprived.

Councilman Sherman thought the resolutions too sweeping as Wards Five and Six, and perhaps others had no grievance.

Ex-President Federhen was invited to address the Council. He understood that the central station was now the only one that had a grievance, but the whole city should be interested in securing the Centre better service. All it now asked was that some of the express trains should stop at Quincy. There was no desire to take any trains away from other Quincy stations.

Councilman Sherman intimated that Quincy had secured more than its share in the past, and did not think the Old Colony was discriminating against it now.

Councilman Moxon hoped the Atlantic service would not be interfered with.

Councilman Pratt thought resolutions too sweeping, but hoped to see more trains at the Centre.

Councilman Gray hoped the resolutions would pass unanimously.

Councilman Powers thought West Quincy might lose if Quincy was benefitted.

Councilman Wilde did not wish to antagonize Centre but favored an amendment.

Councilman Fallon wanted better facilities at the Centre, believing the action had depreciated property there.

Councilman Newcomb thought Councilmen from out-lying wards narrow-minded in opposing the desires of the Centre.

Councilman Moxon believed resolutions should apply to Centre station only. Councilman Gray so amended the resolutions.

Upon motion of Councilman Hammond the committee was increased to five that each station might be represented.

A motion of Councilman Pratt to drop the first section of the resolutions was lost, and the resolutions adopted.

The President appointed Councilman Gray, Hammond and Moxon; the Mayor and the President making the five.

Licenses.

Councilman Sherman offered an order granting the following licenses, which was adopted:

Common victuallers—Alexander E. Nash, W. H. Ferris, Jr., Stanley Mears, Joshua Wales, J. L. Harvey & Co., and Angie L. Macombie.

Indications for Saturday: Fair and warmer.
H. H. CLAYTON, Observer.

The Seventeenth.

The early morning of the Seventeenth was as hot and sweltering as the two preceding days, and the sea turn about 8 A. M. was very welcome. But it grew colder and colder and more and more threatening.

The arrangements for the Hospital fete at Merry Mount park progressed. At the entrance a pretty arch of green was erected with the city seal, appropriate inscriptions and flag decorations. The part of the grounds to have been used was the level, open tract near the water, quite a little distance from Hancock street. Here a large, attractive, rustic summer house was erected for the dancing. Then the several wards of the city, either separately or jointly, had erected tents for the sale of refreshments, confectionery, fancy articles, toys, etc.

But it began to rain about the time the grounds were to be opened, and of course the fete had to be abandoned. It was impossible to postpone it, because of the perishable nature of the ice cream, cake, confectionery, etc.

Mrs. W. S. Williams, Mrs. Frank Mitchell, Mrs. George McFarlane and Mrs. Charles Field, the Ward Three committee of the Hospital Aid Society wish to acknowledge the receipt of the following sums:

From Thomas & Miller and employes, $15.80.
Employes of McGilvray & Jones, $6.25.
Employes of E. C. Willison, $3.25.
Employes of Craig & Richards, $14.75.
Employes of A. M. Deane, $2.50.

The other stone sheds at South Quincy have not as yet been visited for lack of time, but will be soon.

The ladies also feel indebted to Messrs. Rogers Bros. and Messrs. Pratt & Curtis, who volunteered the use of their teams in carrying the cake and articles from the Park, also to Messrs. Pratt & Curtis for the use of one of their large show windows where the cake has been placed on sale.

Choate and Kendrick.

Boston dailies print the following statements of Old Colony officials:

President Choate of the Old Colony says regarding the change of time of running the trains on the Central and Cape Cod divisions: "It is our endeavor to separate the through from the local traffic as much as possible, to run all our trains going beyond South Braintree express to that point and to accommodate our patrons this side of South Braintree with a surburban service. We think this will be accomplished satisfactorily to all concerned. We have no desire to contract our service in any way; on the contrary, we are endeavoring to increase its efficiency. Under the old arrangement local passengers crowded the trains to the discomfort of long distance passengers, and when the suburban people got out we were obliged to haul the empty cars."

General Manager Kendrick says: "The delay Monday was caused by the breaking down of a locomotive in the yard at three o'clock, just our busiest time. This, of course disarranged our time table, and would have any time table. When you delay the starting of one train so seriously, you delay them all; it is like starting a row of bricks. Aside from the complaints from Quincy, we have had no criticism on the new time table. In fact, many of our patrons are pleased with it. We shall probably have it running all right in a day or two, and after it is given a fair trial I have no doubt it will be liked. We have more interest in Quincy than anybody living in that town, and so far from curtailing accommodations, we wish to develop its traffic. If, after a fair trial, the Quincy people are not satisfied, we shall do all in our power to make them so. The statement that the nine o'clock train did not leave until 11 is untrue."

Officers Elected.

At the regular meeting of Maple Lodge, No. 113, Knights and Ladies of Honor, held Wednesday evening, these officers were elected:

A Quincy Job.

The soldiers' monument for Salisbury, Conn., recently completed by Frederick & Field, of dark blue Quincy granite, was unveiled June 17.

The first base is 7 feet 6 inches square, 2 feet high; the second base 5 feet square, 2 feet 6 inches high, quarry faced in two courses, each 1 foot, 3 inches high, the first course in two pieces, breaking joint over the centre of the first base. The second course is one piece, with embrasures cut on each side flush with the piece above it. The granite work is by Frederick & Field, of Quincy, Mass. Cost, $4,100.

An Excellent Circus.

Main's circus which exhibited in this city Thursday, drew a very large audience. notwithstanding it rained most of the time. All who went, seemed to be greatly pleased. The acts and feats performed were something wonderful; and the dogs and other animals were well trained.

George S. Cole, the manager, is a gentleman whom everybody likes to shake by the hand. He seems to be the very man desired for the place, as he makes friends wherever he goes; and the circus leaves a good name behind it.

Quarrymen on a Strike.

An Augusta, Me., dispatch to the Journal says: "A serious strike is in progress at the quarries of the Hallowell Granite Quarry at Granite hill. An engineer employed at the quarry is a non-union man and refused to join the union. The quarrymen, who are union men, demanded that he be discharged, which the company refused to do. Accordingly the men, about eighty-five of them, refused to work. Six men on another quarry near Granite hill, operated by Cox & Larry of New York, struck because they only received part of their wages on pay day, and have been discharged."

The Manet Land Company is booming Houghs Neck and with good success too, but they should get Supt. Morton to cooperate with them by reducing the fare on the railroad to five cents.

A banana pedler was baiting his horse on Chestnut street Monday when the horse ran away. When rounding the corner into Canal street he fell and slid fully thirty feet, without injury to animal or wagon.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. B. Porterfield is quite sick. Her friend, Mrs. Winslow Burrell, had her removed to her home on Canal street, where, under her watchful care it is hoped that she will soon be restored to health.

Warren W. Adams, Esq., has our thanks for a neat souvenir picture of the gentlemen who were postmasters of Quincy, beginning with Richard Cranch, he being the first to receive the commission in 1795, down to the present incumbent, twelve in all.

Brown, the paper bag man, attempted to back up to the door of Furnald's store on Hancock street, Tuesday, when the transom bolt slipped out and the body of the wagon went over backwards. The steamer horses returning from the blacksmith's shop hitched on to the wagon and righted it.

Commodore Shaw's new boat, the Mab, outsailed her only competitor, the Cricket, in the Hull race the seventeenth, over seven minutes. Not only was the Mab first, but by corrected time she outsailed all but one of the boats in the other classes which sailed the same course. In addition to the first prize of $10, she was awarded under Corinthian rules $5 extra, being sailed by owner.

The annual floral festival of the First Church Sunday School was held last Sunday morning. Three children, Ruth Bass, Edwin Anderson Bennett and Charlotte Isabel Claflin were baptized. The late Carrie Elizabeth Faxon was remembered in the memoriam service. Appropriate addresses were made by Mr. Henry Stone and the pastor. There were pretty floral decorations.

We are requested to announce that a silk umbrella and a large collection of dishes which were left at the park by the ladies of Ward One, can be found at the residence of Mrs. E. W. Henry Bass, on Granite street.

A pretty programme was carried out at the Congregational church Sunday, which was observed as children's day. There were exercises, recitations and songs, address by pastor, etc. The floral decorations were elaborate.

The game at West Quincy between the St. Marys and Mill Streams of Chelsea and later with the Emmets of Brighton, announced for Wednesday morning did not come off, the visitors failing to appear.

Sunday will be observed as Children's day at the M. E. church, West Quincy. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Humphrey, will preach to the children at 10.30 A. M., and at 6 P. M. there will be a Sabbath school concert. All are cordially invited.

An Unkind Act.

It will be seen by a letter from Dr. Brooks that the item given to our reporter at West Quincy last week was far from the truth, and was not pleasing to those interested. In a flourishing village like West Quincy it is too bad for any one to try to slander his neighbor. It is our wish and desire that all who are so kind as to give items, especially of a personal nature, would try to furnish nothing that will injure the feelings of their neighbors or friends.

HOUGHS NECK.

The Manet Company's land sale will be continued Saturday afternoon.

The first hop of the Quincy Yacht Club will be held next Monday evening in the club house. Electric cars leave Quincy at 7.15 and 8.15 returning at 10 and 11 P. M.

The Quincy Yacht Club will have its next race, the first championship, June 27, a week from today.

The new cars of the Manet street railway are painted "Houghs Neck and Manet Beach."

J. D. Taber let his cat-boat, the Linden, to a young man and lady on Sunday, and has obtained no intelligence from boat or occupants since. It is a red boat with the name on the stern in metal letters.

On Wednesday morning, about 8 o'clock, Mr. Charles Cummings, of Quincy, saved William Sherman of Water street, and Robert Foley, of School street, from being drowned. They were fishing near Wreck buoy, when accidently their skiff tipped over; fortunately Mr. Cummings who was nearly half a mile away saw the mishap and hastened to them. They succeeded in clinging to their boat until he rowed to them, then he fastened to their skiff and pulled it to Nut Island. Although they were as wet as drowned rats, they felt pleased to think it was no worse.

Sale of Beach Lots,

The large sale of lots on Wednesday was interfered with by the storm. There was a large gathering present and some forty lots were sold before dinner. Prices ranging from four to eight cents per square foot.

The first two lots Nos. 58 and 59 directly opposite the old Littlefield house on Sea street were bid off by Mr. P. Gavin, for his two daughters, Mary L. and Alice G. Gavin at 7¼ cents per foot. Mr. Willie O. Lang got the next lot No. 56 for 6¼ cents.

Most all the lots that were sold before the chowder was eaten were nearly in front of the old house near the road leading to Rock Island, and brought fair prices; some were, however, resold by the purchasers at advanced prices before the sale was over.

Soon after 12 o'clock, A. E. Nash of Quincy, the veteran caterer, announced that the clambake, chowder, etc., were ready, and some 600 rushed for the tables which had been erected in a large tent close by. The crowd was so large, and the waiters so few, that all did not get served readily, although there was an abundance, and of excellent quality.

Before the dinner was finished it began to rain, and it was decided to continue the sale under the tent during the afternoon, and quite a number of lots were sold. Many, we learn who did not get lots, are anxious for another sale.

The Land Company, however, concluded to postpone the sale until this Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will give at that time to purchasers of lots the same liberal terms.

The free passes on the Electric road for two years which the Land Company gives away to each purchaser of a lot, must be of especial advantage to persons now living at Houghs Neck, as well as to those who are thinking of building there.

A Rather Severe Accident.

Alton Oliver of South Braintree, hired as a cook with Main's circus which was in Quincy, Thursday, and gave an exhibition. After the performance the tents were struck and preparations made to move to Abington, the next objective point. In going thither the circus people used their own cars for the transportation of their chattles, hitched to a locomotive. During the night or early this morning while in transit to Abington, Oliver, who possibly was asleep, rolled off the car he was riding on, to the ground and sustained severe injuries on his head.

He was picked up and conveyed to Abington, where he had his wounds dressed, after which he was brought back to South Braintree, and taken to the residence of Mr. W. A. Keene, where he lies in rather a precarious condition. Dr. Bridgham was called, but the doctor declines to say anything about the accident, at least for the present.

EXECUTOR'S SALE. We would call the attention of readers to the large sale of personal property at Houghs Neck, belonging to the estate of the late Capt. Croucher, on Thursday next. Most any thing that anyone may want at the seashore will be found at this sale.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

SOUTH QUINCY.

Miss Nellie McCarty, of South Quincy, was overcome with the heat while at church Sunday, and fainted.

One of the electric cars were obliged to wait for four express trains to pass at the Water street crossings Monday morning before they could pass.

John Tucker, an aged resident of Jackson place, while riding on Water street Saturday evening, was run into by an electric car and knocked out of his carriage, and more or less injured.

An officer was on duty at South Quincy Saturday, between the hours of 6.30 A. M. and 6 P. M., taking the traffic over Water street. The result was as follows: Foot passengers, 1627; teams, 702; electric cars, 39; passengers in electric cars, 473.

Mrs. Frank Flowers has gone to Halifax on a three months' visit.

Mrs. William Clements has gone to Charlottetown, P. E. I., for three months.

Miss Annie McDonnell left Tuesday morning for a short visit to Charlottetown P. E. I.

Monday afternoon William J., a nine year old son of William T. Spargo, in company with a number of other boys of the same age was playing tag on Water street, near the street railway tracks, and so interested were they that they did not hear the approaching electric car, and just as the car was about to pass them the Spargo boy jumped one side and struck the car, cutting his head and leg but inflicting no serious injury.

The employes of the Quincy and Boston Street Railway were given new rules Monday for their government, one of which is that all cars shall slow up at cross streets, and shall come to a dead stop one hundred feet from the tracks of the Old Colony at South Quincy, while the conductor goes ahead to see that the road is clear. These are good rules and will perhaps sometime avert a serious accident. Superintendent Weeks is getting the road down to a system which can not help being profitable to the road as well as its patrons.

William H. Williams left Tuesday, for Liverpool, England. He sailed from New York on the Majestic, of the White Star Line.

The members of Hose Company No. 1 held a shirt and pants party at Hancock hall, Tuesday evening, which was largely attended. The floor was in charge of Capts. P. S. Morris, John P. Duffy and George White, assisted by the members of the company. The Manet Orchestra furnished music.

ATLANTIC.

The condition of Capt. Charles B. Newton is reported as a little better.

The stores at Atlantic will close Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Frank Jenkins is quite sick with scarlet fever.

Mr. Willett is to build a new house on Walker street.

Atlantic beach presented a lively appearance Sunday, being visited by scores of people.

Thomas Clare has bought a new yacht which has the reputation of being a fast sailer.

Mr. Stephenson of Wollaston has moved into his new house on Newbury avenue near the Quincy school building.

Mr. Sanford Small, of the firm of Timberlake & Small has a new safety and is becoming quite an expert.

Walter Burrell has brought his yacht from Onset Bay and moored her off Atlantic. She is a nineteen foot cat-rigged boat, and is reported to be a racer.

The statement made that Mr. Edward Price, of Atlantic, raised his flag at half mast the seventeenth is denied. It is said the flag was raised as stated, but by his little daughter who was not old enough to know the right way it should be raised.

The ladies of Ward Six comprising the Hospital fete committee desire to express their thanks to the Atlantic Social Club, who so kindly came to the rescue and tendered the use of Music hall free of charge; also to Mr. Frank Farrell, the expressman, and Richard Wilder, each of whom did good work in transporting tables, chairs and all kinds of articles to and from the grounds. They also wish to thank all others who took hold and rendered aid in different ways. In spite of the weather the sale at the hall enables Ward Six to make a very nice showing.

That's Right, Atlantic.

It is rumored that a large depot will at once be built at Atlantic. Since the new time table has been in vogue a very large number of passengers are obliged to change there from the express to the local trains, and the station is wholly inadequate to accommodate them. Crowds were obliged to stand in pelting rain Wednesday and complaints were loud and strong. A new baggage room must also be provided. It would seem as though a new station was a necessity if the present schedule is to be kept up.

MILTON.

A quiet wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. Julia E. West, last Tuesday afternoon, at which time Mr. Henry W. Nye was united in marriage to Miss Mabel F. West. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Nathan Hunt of the East Milton Baptist church, where Miss West has been engaged for the last two years as organist. After the ceremony a reception was held at the conclusion of which the bride and groom departed for Chicopee, where they are to reside.

Rev. F. P. Chapin and Rev. J. H. Humphrey will exchange pulpits Sunday.

East Milton people are more than pleased with the new Old Colony time table, and well they may for they are having better service than ever before.

Henry Gallagher has returned from Lynn where he has been visiting.

The foundation for the addition to the hook and ladder house at Milton Centre is nearly completed.

Isaac Choate is quite sick with la grippe.

Pierce's store at East Milton will close hereafter Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 o'clock.

The King's Daughters held a daisy festival at Washington hall last Friday evening. A pleasing entertainment was given by the Peak sisters and ice cream and cake was served. The sale netted a good sum.

WOLLASTON.

The new time table on the Old Colony is anything but agreeable to the many persons who for years have been in the habit of using the South Boston station to and from places on the road south of Atlantic. There is not a single train from Wollaston and beyond, that stops at that station between six o'clock in the morning and 8 o'clock at night. By the old arrangement there were eighteen trains out and fourteen in between these hours. Atlantic, only one mile nearer the city, has twenty-one trains each way which stop at the South Boston depot. Why this discrimination?

It will be the Children's Floral tomorrow in the new Unitarian church Sunday, at 10.45 A. M. There will be a pretty display of flowers, and sweet singing birds; a troop of babies to be baptized, bright singing, an address by the pastor and a hearty welcome to all into the pretty new place of worship which was so appropriately dedicated last Monday evening.

Rev. Luther Freeman, pastor of the M. E. church, Wollaston, will preach at 10.45 A. M. and at 7 o'clock in the evening, after the praise service. Subject for the evening, "Conscience." Sunday school at 12 o'clock. Epworth League meeting at 6 o'clock, Mrs. Andrew S. Stiggins, leader. Sunday.

The Children's Day services held in the M. E. church, Wollaston, last Sunday, were exceedingly interesting. At the morning service there was special music, recitations by the children; remarks by Rev. Luther Freeman, pastor, and Mr. Walter C. Sanders, superintendent of the Sunday school. The pleasantest part of the exercises was the baptism of eight little children by the pastor. The house was finely docorated by a committee from the Sunday School, with potted plants and flowers. In the evening the children gave their annual concert to a crowded house, and was one of the best ever given in this church.

The collections were for the Board of Education and the Education Society, and amounted to nearly thirty dollars.

Floral Sunday was observed Sunday at the Wollaston Congregational church.

The pulpit was elaborately decorated with flowers. The rite of baptism was administered to Marjorie Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Thompson; May Ethel Robertson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roberston; and Harold Wesley Nash, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Nash.

A Wood Fire.

The alarm on the Wollaston whistle at 11.35 Tuesday, was for a fire in the woods between the electric car house and railroad track, caused by a spark from a passing engine. The fire was creeping toward the car house and it was thought best to ring the alarm. Box 51 was pulled, but failed to work, and the central station was reached by telephone.

At the Wollaston tennis tournament at Merry Mount Park, Wednesday morning, in the preliminaries Swift beat Sprague, and Battison beat Fenton.

In first round Osborne beat McClintock, Emery beat Badger, Sanborn beat Battison, Price beat Swift. In the second round Emery beat Sanborn, Price beat Osborne, and in the final, Emery beat Price, 6—2, 6—4.

This gives Emery a leg in the bowl contest.

High School Notes.

Through the efforts of Miss Souther, assistant teacher at the High School, the class in physiology has this week received two practical talks from physicians of the city. On Monday Dr. Sheahan invited them to his office and proceeded to dissect a rabbit, opening up the abdomen and thorax showing the digestive and circulatory organs. At the close the doctor kindly remembered each of the young ladies of the class with some choice roses.

Tuesday, Dr. Hunting went to the school building and gave an instructive and interesting talk on "Emergencies, and what to do." He treated cases of drowning, burns and scalds, sprains, etc., and closed by showing by microscope the tubercle bacilli, or germs of consumption.

Another practical talk is promised at an early date.

The class of '91 is putting in considerable work for the approaching graduation. All the parts will be original and committed to memory.

That Quincy is adding very fast to its school population is shown in comparison with a large city like Fall River. That city made a gain of but 471 against 380 for Quincy. It has 14,906 of school age against 4,045 for this city. A percentage of increase of 3 per cent. against 10 for his city.

QUINCY POINT.

Master Harry E. Sherburne is sojourning at Bournedale, Mass., visiting his aunt Miss Anna S. Starbuck.

Master Fred Newcomb, younger son of Mr. Maurice Newcomb, fell from a high tree on Thursday and was badly injured. No bones were broken, and it is hoped that he will soon be about again.

Mr. William F. Brown as a member of the orchestra from Hotel Flower, Boston, has gone to Maine for a ten days' sojourn. The orchestra will fill several engagements in Bangor and other adjacent places.

Mr. H. P. Kittredge arrived home Sunday morning from his semi-annual southern trip.

Miss Mabel Curtis of Curtisville, Mass., is the guest of Miss Lillian A. Carter.

Mr. Charles F. Wrisley returned Saturday from his extended business trip in the West in the interest of the Plymouth Rock Shoe Company.

Edgar Tilden of Marshfield has leased the Pine Point Hotel and will run it this season as an experiment.

There is a rumor that the free delivery system will go into effect in the Point district, July 1.

Children's day will be observed Sunday, at the Washington Street Congregational church. In the morning Mr. Benedict will preach a sermon appropriate to the day, from the subject, "The firmness and gentleness of Christ."

A Sunday school concert will be given in the evening, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

The committee in charge of the entertainment, given on Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Washington street Congregational church is receiving congratulations. The programme was an excellent one and the entertainment successful in all but a financial point. The small attendance was due to a number of reasons, not the least of which was the oppressive heat. The programme:

The Hospital Fete.

To the Editors of the Patriot:

I venture to say that I voice the sentiment of everyone in Quincy, when I express my regret at the utter failure of the elaborate preparations for the annual fete in behalf of the Hospital, consequent upon the bad weather which set in on Wednesday. It was a source of unmitigated disappointment to all, for all are in sympathy with our hospital and the noble humanitarian work it is accomplishing. But most of all must it have been a cruel disappointment to those who had worked so zealously to ensure its success—the members of the Hospital Aid Association, and the young folk who were to assist, and the result was so different from what was anticipated; for instead of a substantial amount being realized a heavy pecuniary loss must have been incurred by the absolutely necessary preliminary expenses.

So our noble hospital, instead of being profitted as was anticipated, is actually at a loss. This may mean a curtailing of the usefulness of the hospital for the coming year, or at any rate, inability on the part of tho board of management to more completely equip the institution and place it in a position to deal successfully with any emergency. Either alternation is greatly to be deplored, though I for one, do not feel that the hospital ought to be allowed to suffer because of the apparent conspiracy of the elements to prevent the fete.

"It's an ill wind which blows no good," hence I am prompted to reiterate a suggestion I ventured to make through your columns some months ago, that an annual Hospital Saturday collection be established, believing that in view of the unlooked denouement to the fete, an unanimous and substantial response would be made and a sum be realized equal to or nearly so, what was anticipated from Wednesday's celebration. This would cheer the hearts of the association, every member of which is keenly disappointed.

If this reiterated suggestion presents itself favorably to others, then I would urge that there is no more favorable time for initiating the movement than now when everyone's sympathy has been aroused. I am assured that such an undertaking would be a success for the reason that already the workmen in many of the quarries have "caught on" to the idea and made collections among themselves with very satisfactory results.

Should any of your numerous readers endorse my suggestion and feel like taking hold right away to give it a fair trial I shall be pleased to give them the benefit of my own personal experience in organizing the movement.

Very truly yours,
ROSE KEY.

First Yacht Race.

The Quincy Yacht Club held its first race of the season Saturday, off Houghs Neck, and a pretty race it was. There was a cash prize of $10 and $5 in each class and in the first and third classes the Sanborn cups were sailed for.

The result of the race was that the White Fawn and Erin in first, Madge and Mabel in the second, and the Rocket and Flora Lee in the third class, took the cash prizes; and the White Fawn and Rocket each secured a leg in the trophies.

What Makes Beef so High?

QUINCY, June 17, 1891.

This is the question that seems to occupy the attention of most of the people of New England at the present time. Why is it that our cattle are sent to England and the choice cuts sold for ten cents a pound lower than they are in this country? The reason is simply this: Necks, flanks, shins, etc., especially plate beef bring as much per pound in Liverpool today as rump and sirloin. The American people are wasting enough beef to supply another nation as large as this. Every man, no matter what his circumstances are, must have sirloin steak, first cut of rib, and fancy brisket corned beef. Now in this article I simply want to mention corned beef. Buy a narrow end of the brisket, and boil it two hours longer than any other piece. Let it cool in the water in which it is boiled, and you have for seven cents a pound, the choicest cut in the ox.

It also cuts a streak of fat and lean, a thing so much desired by every one. Or buy a nice flank for five cents a pound, boil and press it. No better piece grows. Beef is cheaper in this country than any other place in the world. The only trouble is, we don't try to see how we can economize on our beef purchases.

See the next issue of this paper for what to roast and how to roast it. By a wholesale butcher, and one who knows what the best cuts are. BUTCHER.

The Postponed Wedding.

To the Editors of the Quincy Patriot:

In your article in last week's PATRIOT, in regard to a postponed wedding, a lady's feelings and the reputation of her family were very much injured by a completely false statement, and I feel that a very great injustice has been done to me, as I am a single man with a perfect legal right to marry; and I am requested by her family to ask you to refute your incorrect statement in your valuable paper of this week's issue, as I know you will be pleased to do. Although no names were mentioned everybody knows who were meant and it is very mortifying to a highly respected West Quincy family.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE F. BROOKS, M. D.,
18 Temple place.

Trotting at Weymouth.

Interesting Figures.

The LEDGER has at considerable pains ascertained the number of trains which each station within about 20 miles of Boston on the Old Colony central division now has, and what they had before Monday's change, both to and from Boston. All stations whether on the main line or branches are included. A summary of the inward trains is first given:

Inward, Northbound.

It will be noticed that such minor stations as Field's Corner, Mayflower Park and North Stoughton have an increase of over 100 per cent. That Atlantic is very nearly 100. That Braintree, South Braintree, East Milton, West Quincy, South Weymouth, North Abington, Abington and Whitman about 50 per cent., while nearly all the station show substantial gains, and only four a loss, viz: Quincy, Crescent avenue, Savin Hill and Wollaston.

Service in the Past.

A review of the summer timetables for several years shows the following figures for the Quincy and Boston service:

Year.	Inward.	Outward.	Total.
1891	21	22	43
1890	32	30	62
1889	32	29	61
1888	32	29	61
1887	30	26	56
1886	31	23	54
1885	27	23	50
1884	26	24	50

The comparison might be carried back many more years before the number of trains was as small as that given Quincy since last Sunday, but the writer has not the timetables at hand.

Good for Quincy Adams.

A delegation of citizens from South Quincy, headed by Mayor Fairbanks, called on General Manager Kendrick of the Old Colony Railroad on Monday on business in relation to the new timetable, etc. Mr. Kendrick promised the Mayor, and those present that he would give Quincy Adams the same train service that Quincy now has by the new time table.

Indignation Meeting.

Seldom has there been such a spirited meeting of Quincy citizens as the one held on Saturday evening at Hancock hall, relative to the new Old Colony timetable. All, however, with one possible exception thought they had been shabbily treated by the railroad. At least 300 were present, and they included a large number of representative citizens.

Ex-Councilman Federhen called the meeting to order, and organization was effected by the choice of ex-Councilman Slade as chairman and Warren Rideout as secretary.

Mr. Federhen reviewed the situation briefly, quoting facts and figures from the DAILY LEDGER, and offered the following resolutions:

Whereas, The management of the Old Colony Railroad has announced a change of trains between Quincy and Boston and return, and

Whereas, Said change deprive citizens of Quincy of many train privileges they have heretofore enjoyed both by decreasing the number of trains and not running at many important and necessary hours, it is hereby

Resolved, By the citizens of Quincy, in public meeting assembled, that the change of trains as announced will be of great inconvenience to the inhabitants of this city, and of great detriment to its prevailing growth and prosperity. That the business and social interests of Quincy demand increased and not decreased railroad facilities in a northerly and southerly direction. That the first is a necessity and the last an injustice and that this meeting enters and proclaims its unqualified protest against the proposed change, and requests additional accommodations and service, and it is further

Resolved, That a committee of five citizens be appointed by the chairman of this meeting to wait upon the management of the Old Colony Railroad and endeavor to remedy the injustices herein complained of and also ascertain what action the corporation intends to take in relation to a petition already submitted for a "Workingmen's train" as provided in section 183 of Chapter 112 of the Public Statutes, the committee to report to the citizens of Quincy in the local papers or at a meeting to be called by them at a later date.

Emery L. Crane moved to couple Quincy Adams with Quincy in the resolutions, but withdrew the motion when

Mayor Fairbanks

read a letter he had received from Superintendent Allen:

BOSTON, June 13, 1891.
Hon. H. O. Fairbanks,
Mayor, Quincy, Mass.

DEAR SIR: Referring to our conversation of this afternoon, with reference to increased train facilities for Quincy Adams, will say that we will arrange to stop at that station the 6.35 and 7.35 A. M. trains from South Braintree due in Boston at 7 and 8 A. M. respectively, and the 5 and 6 P. M. trains from Boston, upon your request as the representative of the people of your city; further, regarding more train accommodations for Quincy proper: if it is found, after a fair trial of the new time table, more trains are necessary, we will be very glad to confer with you with a view of adding a few more "Quincy expresses."

Yours truly,
E. G. ALLEN,
Superintendent.

Mr. Federhen continued to quote from the DAILY LEDGER giving the tables printed Saturday relative to loss and gains at various stations. He believed it was not only a matter of injustice but

Beyond the Law and Illegal,

And quoted from the Public Statutes in support thereof.

Chapter 112, section 156 of the Public Statutes:

"A railroad corporation which has established and maintained throughout the year for five consecutive years a passenger station at a point on its road, shall not abandon such station nor substantially diminish the accomodation furnished by the stopping of trains thereat, as compared with that furnished at other stations on the same road. And in case of a violation of the provisions this section the Attorney General at the relation of ten legal voters of the city or town in which said station is located shall proceed in equity by information to enjoin the corporations from further violation thereof."

The matter of a workingmen's train was inserted at the request of Rev. A. F. Roche who some time ago forwarded the Old Colony a petition of 700 names for such a train. One of Quincy's attractions of late has been the large numbers of trains, but now we are to lose these.

L. S. Anderson gave figures for Newton, Winchester, Waltham, Hyde Park, Melrose and other suburban towns. Many through trains which had never stopped at Braintree were now scheduled to stop there, and it looked like an attempt to boom one town at the expense of another. Did not think it impossible to stop some of the through trains, but then he said Quincy would not object to new trains. Believed the committee would get satisfaction from Supt. Kendrick; if not it could go to the Railroad Commissioners.

Dr. Everett thought Quincy couldn't spare a train; believed all were well patronized. It was outrageous that Quincy could not communicate directly on any train with stations north of Neponset river or south of the Braintrees.

B. F. Curtis said he had made Plymouth trains a study and found that it would be necessary to make

Waits of From 12 to 50

minutes at Braintree.

Dr. Everett spoke of other nuisances of the Old Colony—the whistling between 2 and 3 A. M., the poor station, etc. Pupils to the Adams Academy from the South would be greatly inconvenienced. More and better trains were needed.

Mr. Anderson said he has drawn up a petition which he hopes would also be generally signed at the close; it reads:

We, the undersigned, residents of Quincy and regular patrons of the Old Colony Railroad Co., hereby enter our protest against the reduction in train service as proposed in the timetable to go into effect Monday, June 16.

We respectfully submit that it is a great injustice to reduce the number of outward bound trains from 28 to 22 and the number of inward bound trains from 31 to 21 at such a large and important centre as Quincy.

We hereby request that in addition to the trains scheduled in said timetable to stop at Quincy, the following trains shall be ordered to stop at Quincy as soon as possible:

Outward bound—12 M., 1.45, 3.15, 4.15, 4.45, 5.15, 6.15, 7.45 P. M.

Inward bound—7.31, 7.58 or 8.01, 8.31, 9.31 A. M., 12.31, 2.01, 3.31, 5.31, 6.31 P. M.

Other requests will be submitted by the committee appointed for that purpose.

Ex-Mayor Porter said he had appointed himself a committee of one and interviewed Supt. Kendrick, informing him that the new schedule was noticeable for its omissions, and had side tracked Quincy. The entire tributary to Atlantic was not equal to the Quincy station yet it had twice as many trains. Thought there were

3,000 Passengers Daily

from Quincy. Believed Supt. Kendrick would meet the committee courteously and give them what they want. The change had been made through pressure from stations south which complained that Quincy filled the cars.

F. A. Claflin protested against the new scheme as an injury to Quincy. The Old Colony had no right to play fast and loose with Quincy. Favored legal steps for redress. The more the timetable was scanned the bad points came out. It was such actions that turned the people against railroads and monopolies.

The resolutions were amended by inserting the clause, "both in a northerly and southerly direction."

In response to an inquiry of H. H. Faxon, Mr. Federhen quoted the law relative to workingmen's trains, which provides that they must be established under Chap. 112.

Section 183:

"Every Railroad corporation whose railroad runs out from Boston shall furnish on each week day a morning train in, and an evening train out for distances not exceeding fifteen miles, or suitable cars attached to other trains and reaching and leaving Boston at about six o,clock in the forenoon and afternoon, or at such hours as may be fixed by the Board.

"And for such trains shall furnish yearly season tickets at a rate not exceeding three dollars per mile per year, good once a day each way for six days in a week. And quarterly tickets not exceeding one dollar per quarter per mile, provided that two hundred or more persons make application therefore."

Edward Southworth had called on Supt. Allen and told him how many teachers who went to Dorchester were inconvenienced and day lengthened, but could not get satisfaction.

The resolutions were adopted by unanimous vote.

The chair appointed as the committee:

H. M. FEDERHEN, ESQ.
DR. WILLIAM EVERETT.
W. B. RICE.
L. S. ANDERSON.
HON. WILLIAM A. HODGES.

B. F. Curtis hoped the petition drawn would not be construed as meeting all the demands.

Rev. H. E. Cotton hoped protest would be entered against the antediluvian cars. [Applause].

D. V. Pierce hoped the committee would be instructed to get all it could.

H. H. Faxon thought Quincy would get all it deserved from the Old Colony. Believed credit should be given it for favors in the past. [Hisses]. Many here tonight did not know where they stood. He could keep cool when boiling over, which was more than his neighbors (Dr. Everett and Mr. Claflin) could do.

The meeting dissolved, but everyone came forward and signed the petitions.

The Committee.

The committee of the City Council and the committee appointed at the indignation meeting of last Saturday evening to secure if possible better train accommodations for Quincy, held a joint meeting at City Hall Thursday evening. H. M. Federhen, Esq., was chosen chairman, and Councilman Gray secretary.

The plan of Mr. L. S. Anderson asking that certain through trains, which now pass the Quincy station, should stop, was fully considered and with one addition—the 7.45 A. M. out—seemed to meet with the general demand. It will be better understood by publishing the present timetable and trains asked, side by side.

Quincy for Boston.—4.36, 6.13, 6.44, 7.13, 7.44, 8.13, 8.44, 9.13, 10.13, 11.13 A. M. 12.13, 1.13, 2.13, 3.13, 4.13, 5.13, 6.13, 7.13, 8.16, 9.16, 10.36 P. M. Sunday—9.21, 9.31 A. M. 1.46, 5.53, 6.01, 6.15, 8.14, 9.05, 9.16, 10.20, 11.01 P.M.

Extras Wanted.—7.31, 8.01, 8.31, 9.31, A. M., 12.31, 2.01, 2.31, 5.31 and 6.31 P. M.—9 in all.

Boston for Quincy—5.45, 6.30, 7.30, 8.30, 9.30, 10.30, 11.30 A. M. 12.30, 1.30, 2.30, 3.30, 4.00, 4.30, 5.00, 5.30, 6.00, 6.30, 7.30, 8.20, 9.20, 10.20, 11.19 P. M. Sunday—7.30, 8.30, 9.15, 9.30 A. M. 12.45, 1.30, 5.00, 5.45, 7.05, 10.00 P. M.

Extras Wanted.—7.45 A. M., 12 M., 1.45, 3.15, 4.15, 5.15, 5.45, 6.15 and 7.45—9 in all.

Wollaston has two or three requests also, which will be presented. It wants a train between 7.17 and 7.45 to Boston in the morning; that the 12 M. outward should stop there, and that the inward trains at 6.17 and 7.17 A. M. and the outward at 5.30, 6 and 6.30 P. M. should stop at South Boston.

Quincy and Quincy Adams also unite in asking that the same trains shall stop at South Boston, as many Quincy people work in the vicinity of the South Boston depot and desire to take and leave the trains there, which cannot be done now without a change at Atlantic.

The committee was to have had an interview Friday morning at 9 o'clock with General Manager Kendrick, but as he had an engagement in New York the interview was postponed until the same hour Saturday morning. The DAILY LEDGER of that date is in hopes to report that the requests will be granted.

Unitarian Church Dedication.

The Wollaston Unitarian church was dedicated on Monday evening. Notwithstanding the intense heat a very large congregation was present at the exercises, which began at 7 o'clock. The floral decorations were few and simple, and consisted of several large bouquets of flowers arranged around the pulpit. The addresses were all of an informal nature.

The church, which was begun about a year and a half ago, is situated at the corner of Beale and Farrington streets. The edifice is of the old English style of church architecture, and is built of rough-face granite up to the springing of the roof trusses, and will cost upwards of $10,000. The effect is striking and unique. It is a style of architecture which is comparatively foreign to this country.

The auditorium is 36 x 45 feet, and will seat 300 people. The pews are of antique oak, as is also the high wainscoting, the pulpit, the panelling and the doors.

The gas fixtures, which were designed especially for this church by one of its members, Mr. E. Walter Arnold, of the McKinney & Waterbury Company, are of wrought iron, and with the great open roof, finished in the natural wood, the stained glass windows and the dark ingrain carpet, gives the whole interior a warm, rich tone, reminding one of some old English church.

The pulpit is on the westerly side of the church, and leading directly from it is the pastor's study. Opposite is the organ alcove and choir gallery.

In the basement are the Sunday school room, the library, kitchen and toilet rooms and ladies' parlor. The parlor is raised above the level of the Sunday school room, so that, if need be, it can be used as a stage.

Rev. W. S. Key of Boston, England, was settled as pastor over this church in 1888. Under his ministration the church has increased rapidly in membership.

The church was organized in January, 1888, by the Rev. D. M. Wilson of Quincy. The first meetings were held in Wollaston hall, and later in the Wollaston schoolhouse.

Another Trip—No. 9.

BY CHAS. W. JOHNSON.

A broad grin illuminated the face of the colored cook who had so kindly lent a hand in assisting us from the ground up into the car, a distance of some four or five feet. He placed at our disposal an old chair and a couple of boxes. We accepted the invitation to "sit." It took us at least five minutes to regain our lost breath. Pocket handkerchiefs were freely used to mop the flow of perspiration from our lobster red, and sunburned faces. We didn't mind the appearance we had made in our successful race to beat the train; we had accomplished it and were happy.

In one end of the car was a bundle of old clothes on which was a man taking a nap; in the other end was an ancient stove and the paraphernalia for cooking the meals for the men. The car must have been built since the "flood" for it had never been washed out. The only civilized thing about the whole affair was a large box at one side of the car labelled "American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia, Pa." This was used for a sort of table and general receptacle for dishes, flour and bacon.

The cook was getting dinner. You ought to have seen him make biscuit, the sight was so full of delicious delicacy as the dough squashed through the fingers of his black hands, the kneading being done on a board which was in keeping with the general appearance of the interior of the cook room. After the biscuit were made he took a large strip of dirty bacon from the floor, soused it into a pail of what looked like much used dish water, gave it a vigorous scrubbing with a rag, then sliced it ready for cooking. The aroma of the ever suspicious coffee was too much for the nerves of the trampers, and with one consent, they positively refused to accept the invitation to dinner.

The train was loaded with railroad ties which were being thrown off by a large gang of men while the train was slowly moving down the road. We passed the scene of an accident that happened a day or two before. Part of the wreck being on one side of the track, while on the other was a car suspended from the abutment of a bridge, ready to topple over into the river.

Only one man was injured but it was a narrow escape for all on board. It was nearly one o'clock when we reached Norton. This is a town in the woods where the Louisville & Nashville road is to connect with the Norfolk & Western, thus forming a through line when the two roads are completed. Norton occupies on the map a larger space than London or New York, yet it has but a few houses and its streets are only in process of construction. Its future however is hopeful and bright. A half mile walk from the end of the track over the unfinished roadbed, brought us to this sign, "All kinds of liquors down across the dump." We were both hungry and thirsty but we did not follow the direction of the hand on the sign—to the rum shop—but to the hotel where we were to take dinner. We rested for an hour, drank water from a mineral spring coming out of a bank of coal (but the water was clear as crystal) and wondered if we should really "take supper at Big Stone Gap" that night. The ride of eleven miles in the old freight cars, and the long walk of twelve miles in the hot sun, had not added anything to the anticipated pleasure of the fourteen miles between us and our desired haven. We still had some faint hopes of finding some engine or hand car that would help us on our weary way after we reached the point where the L. & N. were track-laying, several miles down the road. Before we reached this town we had heard that Big Stone Gap was "quarantined," on account of the small pox raging there, and that no strangers were allowed to enter the place. The prospect was anything but cheerful.

Our Water Supply.

What was proven at the hearings on the petition of the city for a new water system:

That the plant of the Water Company is a good one, well constructed, of first-rate material, and ample to supply those parts of the city where mains are laid and to carry the extensions required.

That the lay out of the mains has been such as to properly allow for extensions without taking up any main now down. That the water shed above the reservoirs is large enough to supply 30,000 people with 50 gallons of water daily, if sufficient storage basins are made. That the water shed is a remarkably good one and that the few "outs" about it can be easily and cheaply remedied.

That the water now furnished by the Quincy Water Company is better than that furnished to many of the towns in the state by public system.

That the typhoid fever of Quincy comes from the wells and not from the water furnished by the Quincy Water Company, there being only about one case in fifteen from houses using the Quincy water, and those not attributable to the water.

That the total amount of impurities is only about four grains per gallon, most of that too, being entirely harmless. That the water is steadily improving. That the Company went about its business in a purely business manner, and as a permanent thing.

That when more than a million and a half gallons of water are needed daily, the water from Blue Hill river can be brought into Town brook by cutting a channel that will cost not over $1500, and that the surveys to determine the connecting of the two sources of supply had been made three years ago by the Quincy Water Company. That the organization of the Water Company was open to the public, and that for nearly three months the public was invited to become stockholders.

Base Ball.

The East Weymouths were the opponents of the St. Marys on the Hall place grounds on Saturday, and they put up such a poor game, that it was too one-sided to be interesting. Reardon and Gallagher alternated as pitchers for the home nine and both were effective, striking out several and permitting but five safe hits, all singles but one. Slattery twirled the sphere for the visitors, and the St. Marys had no difficulty in placing the ball safely. The battery also made numerous errors, wild pitches and passed balls, and succeeded in throwing out but one man at second.

District Court, Quincy.

Charles Brady of Quincy, disturbing the peace, $8.

Charles Arbuckle for defrauding John Harris of West Quincy out of a board bill of $30 in 1888 was fined $30; committed.

Clarence Stetson of Braintree, for the larceny of a rooster from Austin Ryan of Randolph, $10.

Charles Arbuckle, for the larceny of a watch from Margaret Middlemarch of Milton in 1888, was sent to the house of correction at Dedham for three months.

Charles R. Saunders of Weymouth, assault on Henry R. Gusley, $12.

William H. Lurey and Robert Brooks were arraigned for cruelly driving a horse at Weymouth Sunday. Case continued until Thursday morning.

Richard Shea, of Quincy, drunk, $9.

Frank Kennedy, of Milton, drunk, $9.

Patrick Londergan of Weymouth, for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell was fined $70. Appealed.

Charles H. Fraser of Dorchester was arraigned Wednesday morning for being drunk and the case continued to Thursday, when it was further continued until next Tuesday. Fraser, if his story is true, received hard usage at the hands of John W. Broderick, a carriage driver at Atlantic. Fraser says he left Boston for Dorchester Tuesday night, but by mistake boarded a train which was express to Atlantic. Arriving there, he started for Dorchester over Hancock street. He had gone but a short distance when he was overtaken by Broderick and a companion, who were driving. Broderick gave him an invitation to ride, which he accepted; first taking a seat outside, and later, upon Broderick's invitation, a seat on the inside of the carriage. After riding for some time Fraser concluded to walk, and asked to leave the carriage. When he tried to get out, he claims Broderick gave him a beating with a club; finally giving him into the custody of the police, lodging a complaint of drunkenness. Fraser has lodged a complaint against Broderick for assault.

The continued case of William H. Lowery and Robert Brooks, for overdriving a horse at North Weymouth, came up for hearing Thursday morning, and the defendants were fined $40 each.

Annual Memorial Day.

The veterans at the National Home for disabled soldiers at Togus, Me., held their annual memorial services on Wednesday afternoon and strewed the graves of their comrades with flowers.

The procession was a magnificent sight and the weather was cool and refreshing as the 1200 old battle-scarred veterans marched to the last resting places of their comrades.

It was headed by the home band, followed by Cutler Post, G. A. R., T. Goodwin, commander. Then came the officers of the home, headed by Gen. Stephenson, governor of the home, and invited guests, followed by the veterans in full uniform and white gloves, and then the fire department. Rev. W. A. Griffin of Augusta acted as chaplain, and Col. Henry Walker of Massachusetts delivered the oration, which was an eloquent tribute to the old veterans and their departed comrades.

A Fishermaid's Song.

The poplars tall kissed the cold gray sky,
And in front was the hungry sea,
And the river swept dark and drearily by,
While the wind sighed mournfully;
Away in the west the low sun died,
The amethyst banks between;
And amid the reeds the plover cried,
As I gazed on that well-known scene.

And the fishermen's boats were far away
On the ocean's heaving breast;
And the red lights gleamed wide over the bay
From the high hill's windy crest;
And I saw again my lover's boat,
With her white sails all outspread,
Like a joyous bird o'er the waters float
When the evening skies were red.

Tomorrow the sun in the east will rise,
And the fishing fleet come home,
To gladden the weary, waiting eyes,
Wet with more than the salt sea foam;
But, ah me! for the boat that left the shore
That eve when the skies were red,
For the fisher lad I shall see no more
Till the sea gives up its dead.

Household Receipts.

RICE GRIDDLE CAKES. Cook the rice so soft it can be mashed until the grains are broken. To each cupful of the mashed rice add two teacupfuls milk, two eggs, a teaspoonful salt, two teaspoonfuls baking powder and flour to make a thin batter.

LAYER CAKE. One-half cup butter, two cups sugar, three of flour, one-fourth cup milk, five eggs, two teaspoons of baking powder.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE. Make a dough as for cream of tartar biscuit, rubbing into the quart of flour a teaspoonful of butter and using rich milk for wetting the flour. Roll out two round cakes about a quarter of an inch in thickness, lay one on a buttered pan; dot with bits of butter and lay the other on top. Bake in a moderate oven and when done spread both sections liberally with butter; cover the lower half with ripe berries which have been lightly mashed with a silver spoon and well sweetened; put on the buttered circle, cover with berries, dust with sugar and pour cream over each piece as you serve it.

SPONGE CREAM. This furnishes a delicate and easily made dessert. The ingredients are: One pint of sweet milk, three tablespoonfuls of gelatine, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and three eggs. Put the gelatine into cold milk, let it stand a short time, then bring it to the boiling point. Add the sugar and yolks of eggs, which must first be well beaten together. Remove from the fire and stir in the whites which have been previously beaten stiff. Add a little salt, and flavor to suit, lemon or vanilla. Wet the moulds so the cream will turn out easily when cold and pour in the mixture. Serve when cold.—New England Farmer.

A REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM. General Lew Wallace, of "Ben Hur" fame, has the following remedy for rheumatism: "Apply a full strength mustard poultice, containing a little garlic, to the hollows of both feet, and then cover up in bed. Place sufficient bedding under you to take up the perspiration. Remain still from three to four hours, then remove the mustard and wet bedding, but do not remove any clothing from the body for fear of taking cold; let it dry on you. The mustard will not blister your feet, but will drive the disease from the system."

LEMON SHERBET. Juice of two lemons, thoroughly mixed with one pint of sugar. Add one quart of milk and a teaspoonful of Foss lemon extract. Good, try it.

Major Stott and Depew's Pie.

One of Lowell's brightest citizens, says the Boston Record, appeard at Parker's the other night in Major C. A. Stott. He is somewhat new in the ranks of after-dinner speakers in this city, but an accomplished ease in telling a story marks the rotund woolen manufacturer as a veteran diner-out. One of his hits at the wool men's dinner, had C. M. Depew as a central figure. It seems the witty Chauncy was speaking at a dinner in London a short time ago, and told a pie story. He claimed to have entered a Western hotel and asked what they had to eat. The answer was, "Apple pie, squash pie, cranberry pie, mince pie, and custard pie." Chauncy said he would have a little of apple, squash, cranberry and mince pie. Whereupon the landlord asked with some astonishment, "What's the matter with the custard?"

Later on in the evening the Britisher who presided at the foregoing dinner took occasion to thank Chauncy for his effort, complimenting him especially on the valuable pie story, regretting, however, that the distinguished New Yorker had left it incomplete. He continued, "It's ah mawst intwesting stawey, Mr. Depew: but—aw—pardon me the question, what was the matter with the custard?" Chauncy fainted.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe passed her eightieth birthday, Saturday. Her mind fails, but her physical faculties are remarkably well preserved. This veteran authoress was the recipient of a large and elegant boquet from Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston.

Anecdotes.

Young Wife—"John, mother says she wants to be cremated."

Young Husband—"Tell her if she'll put on her things I'll take her down this morning."

"What are these knobs on the floor, my dear?" asked Mr. Nopop.

"Those are buttons," returned Mrs. Nopop. "I had them put down this morning, so that I could button the baby's dress to the floor while I was fixing up the house.

He—"May I see you home?"

She—No, but you may watch me start."

Maud—"Oh, I'm invited to the Wayups' ball; but I don't know what in the world to wear. What would you wear if you had my complexion?"

Milicent—"A thick veil."

Newly Made Widow—"He is a fashionable undertaker, but even his charges are far below what I can afford, and I want to give my husband the most expensive funeral I can, you know."

Friend—"Why don't you get a plumber to bury him then?"

"That was a sympathatic audience I had," said the lecturer.

"Yes. I thought they all seemed sorry for each other," said his bosom friend.

passed to be ordained; also one relating to the collection of taxes.

Wood vs. Brick.

The order for $35,000 for a brick schoolhouse was laid on the table that plans might first be prepared.

An order calling for plans for a building similar to the John Hancock brought out some objection by members who favored a wooden building.

Councilman Moxon presented architect's figures estimating the cost of wood at $21,000 and of brick at $26,000.

E. L. Crane of the School Committee said either wood or brick would be satisfactory, but there should be no delay.

Order passed to second reading.

Street Sprinkling.

The Mayor's communication relative to street sprinkling was taken from the table and after debate was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Adjourned at 10.15 for one week.

A quiet church wedding was solemnized at St. John's church Tuesday, by Rev. F. A. Friguglietti, the contracting parties being Miss R. A. Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pierce, and Mr. Simon Little of West Quincy. Miss Marcella L. Pierce a sister of the bride was bridesmaid and Representative James F. Burke groomsman.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at 10 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 9 Elm street; after which the wedding party left for a short trip, after which they will reside on South street.

Farrington Has It.

Wilbur Farrington, the winner of the Memorial Day tournament of the Wollaston Tennis Club, played Sprague, the holder of the silver punch bowl, on Saturday, and succeeded in snatching it away, best three in five: 6-2, 3-6, 6-2, and 6-1.

It must be held three times before it becomes the property of the holder.

Is it a Ghost!

That part of South street, near Sumner street, is becoming notorious as the habitation of a "spook," who, according to several persons who claim to have come in contact with it, emerges from the dark woods on the side of the road robed in white, much to the discomfort and annoyance of the passers by and especially of the fair sex. Several parties are on the watch for it and they declare that if they catch it up to its favorite antics it will not be easily dealt with.

London proposes to build a structure that will throw the Eiffel tower in the shade.

Portsmouth, N. H., with a population of less than 10,000, is the home of nearly 800 horses belonging to private individuals.

Probably the rarest stamp in existence has just been sold in London for £250. It is an American five-cent stamp issued at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1840.

The largest forest fires in Michigan have occurred a decade apart—in 1871, 1881 and 1891.

John London Macadam, the inventor of the road that bears his name, labored for years to perfect his ideas, and, although the English Parliament voted him $30,000 it hardly covered his outlay. "His monument is the roads of England."

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes believes that body and mind are both affected by the character of food consumed. "An exclusively pork diet gives a bristly character to the beard and hair," and too much food from the sea gives the shine and motions of a fish.

Egg Tim Leary Swallowed.

McGinty certainly filled a yearning gap in every yearning breast. Every man has known McGinty; most men have been McGinty at some stage of their lives. McGinty is thoroughly Irish, but the most thoroughly Irish Irishman is one whom little Marshall P. Wilder told a Post reporter about. Finucane called in on Mike Leary's oldest boy, Tim, one day, and found that fine broth of a boy pale about the gills, losing flesh and the picture of despair.

"Howly Moses, Tim, it's murtherin' ill ye're lukin! Fawt in the name av th' kraken's the matter?"

"Finucane," yis.

"Yis."

"Ye know that blatherin' spalpeen av a Widdy Costigan's second husband's stepson, Jamie?"

"That I do."

"He bet me a dollar to a pint I couldn't schwally an igg widout br'akin' th' shell av it."

"Naw!"

"Did ye do ut?"

"I did."

"Thin fwat's ailin' ye?"

"It's doon there. If I joomp about I'll br'ake ut an' cut me stummick wid th' shell. If I kape quiet the dom thing'll hatch oot, an' I'll have a shanghai rooster a clawin' me insides."—Washington Post.

Two Kinds of Censuses.

A census of the United States differs in its very conception from a European census. Once in ten years, as with us, the English government makes an enumeration of the inhabitants of the kingdom. The time chosen is the night of the second of April. On or before that day the enumerator must leave at each house within his district a family schedule, which calls for the name and personal characteristics—age, sex, color, occupation, etc.,—of each person who on that night shall sleep in that house. If a man be travelling on that night, he is to be reported at the hotel or private house at which he arrives in the morning.

A census of the United States is a very different thing. As in England, the census is supposed to be taken on a certain day—with us the first of June—but the question regarding each and every man is not where he was on that day, but where on that day he had "his usual place of abode."—Gen. Francis A. Walker in Forum.

Uses of Hot Water.

Hot water is one of the best among simple remedies, says the Ladies' Home Journal. For instance, headache almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

A towel folded several times and dipped in hot water, and quickly wurng out and applied over the toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief.

A strip of flannel, or napkin folded lengthwise, and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied round the neck of a child that has the croup, will sometimes bring relief in ten minutes.

Hot water taken freely half an hour before bed time is helpful in the case of constipation and has a most soothing effect upon the stomach.

A goblet of hot water taken just after rising, before breakfast, has cured thousands of indigestion, and no simple remedy is more widely recommended by physicians to dyspeptics.

A Worthy Charity.

Miss Octavia Hill, a wealthy lady, has done for London what some American heiress might emulate with profit and distinction. Miss Hill's plan is to buy up a lot of shanties every year, renovate, repair and improve them and rent them through an agent to poor but industrious families. It is understood that no man or woman addicted to drink can become a tenant of Miss Hill. In other words, she picks her tenants, and this being understood, there is much rivalry on the part of certain families to be invited to move into a Hill house. The walls are neatly papered, the floors are painted, ranges and stationary tubs are built in the kitchen, every room is light, and in many instances can be found furnace heat window seats and a bit of a garden at one end of the house. The civilizing influence of this interest in the home life of the masses has no comparison in religious teaching, church work or political or moral reform. It is philanthrophy practically applied, such as a Peabody might have originated.—New York World.

The Brevity of Life.

Life appears to me too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrongs. We are and must be, one and all, burdened with faults in this world, but the time will come when, I trust, we shall put them off in putting off our corruptible bodies; when debasement and sin will fall from us with this cumbrous frame of flesh and only the spark will remain—the impalpable principle of life and thought, pure as when it left the creator to inspire the creature; whence it came it will return, perhaps to pass through graduations of glory. It is a creed in which I delight, to which I cling. It makes eternity a rest, a mighty home, not a terror and abyss. Then revenge never worries my heart, degradation never too deeply disgusts me, injustice never crushes me too low; I live in calm, looking to the end.—Charlotte Bronte.

The Emperor and Bismarck.

The Forum for July will contain a review of the policy and an estimate of the character of the young Emperor of Germany, by F. Heinrich Geffcken, imperial privy councilor, who explains in detail the dismissal of Bismarck and the relations between the Emperor and the ex-chancellor. This article is one of the most important ever contributed to an American review.

The largest manufacturing company in England is that of Bolckow, Vaughn & Co. Their chief products for the last year amounted to 1,877,694 tons of coal, 597,056 tons of coke, 1,877,694 tons of iron ore, 478,749 tons of pig iron and 194,077 tons of finished steel. The company employes a force of 13,075 workmen, and their annual pay-roll shows the figures $4,500,000.

Teachings of Science.

Space fails, and the object of this work does not require that all the diseases which alcohol is capable of inflicting should be even mentioned, much less dwelt upon. But, after all, it should be understood that by far the most frequent evil effects of alcohol do not consist in the production of special diseases peculiar to itself, but in a general perversion and lowering of vitality which renders one more subject to diseases of various kinds, and causes diseases and accidents to be more fatal. In all reports of the causes of deaths, the different diseases and accidents are named, but the alcoholism which rendered them fatal is not mentioned; and even when the disease and death are caused by the alcoholism alone, the truth and the warning example are sacrificed to what are regarded as the proprieties of the occasion—a sentiment of respect for the dead and the feelings of friends. In public reports alcohol and alcoholism do not receive a tithe of credit or responsibility for the evils they accomplish. But as the last subject of these articles on the action of alcohol on the brain and nervous system, I shall endeavor to notice some of the effects of its shorter, more moderate use upon the mind and body.

Who Can Tell.

I wonder, said sweet Marjory,
To the robin on the wall;
I wonder why the flowers are short,
And why the trees are tall?

I wonder why the grass is green,
And why the sky is blue?
I wonder, Robin, why I'm I,
Instead of being you.

I wonder why you birds can fly,
When I can only walk?
I wonder why you only sing,
While I can sing, and talk?

Oh, I wonder, I so wonder
Why the river hurries by!
I think you ought to know, Robin,
I would, if I could fly;

I wonder, said sweet Marjory,
With a puzzled little frown,
I wonder why the moon won't shine
Until the sun goes down?

I wonder where the stars all go
When they're not in the sky?
I most believe you know, Robin,
For all you look so shy!

I wonder why the snow comes,
And why the flowers die?
I wonder where the summer lives
When the wintry winds blow high!

I wonder, said sweet Marjory,
With her plump chin in her hand,
I wonder, Robin, if we two
Shall ever understand?

Miscellany.

Summer at the Sea-shore.

Three girls were talking together as they walked home from the High School.

"What are you going to do this vacation, Alice?" asked her friend Ruth.

"Oh! make the best use of my time I can. I have a great deal of studying to do to make up my conditions."

"Ah, yes, you poor thing, sick so long last winter."

"And a wonderful story of patience to cultivate for waiting on my cross old aunt."

"Patience will come for the asking, dear. What are you planning, Ruth?" inquired Eleanor Grey a tall, fine looking girl, looking affectionately at her two friends.

"Oh! nothing more than the same old thing. Always plenty to do at home; children to train and sew for, one stupid girl to look after, mother to pet and nurse. I sometimes get tired of the same old groove," she closed, with a weary little sigh.

"I know what it is," said Eleanor pressing her hand, "I've had plenty of it, too. Only, there isn't any girl at all to look after, for mother and I do the work. But we are going to have a delightful change this summer—yes, indeed, girls, I am going to be giddy for once in my life. Mother has a sister who has taken a cottage at the sea-shore. Not one of the fine resorts, of course, but a place where moderate people like ourselves go and have a little subdued gaiety—"

"Dear me, how delightful," exclaimed Ruth.

"Waves sighing, and surf breaking, and ocean breezes fanning you," said Alice.

"Yes; don't I wish you were all going?" said Eleanor, fervently. "Well, girls, wherever we are we may still claim our royal lineage."

"Yes, yes," responded the others in earnest tones.

"And the daughters of the King can never find work too humble or too tiresome for them."

"I'm going to look out for grand work this summer," said Eleanor, her eyes lighting with enthusiastic resolve. "I have never before had a chance of getting out of my 'groove,' as you call it, Ruth, and it will be strange if I can't find something far beyond the ordinary either to learn for myself with a view to mere usefulness, or to do for some one else."

"What stories you'll have to tell of your adventures by the salt sea," laughed Alice.

"Possibly," said Eleanor. "But whatever else we do, we shall remember each other night and morning, and hope to meet here again when the leaves begin to turn."

Eleanor and Alice lived at some distance from the town in which they had been boarding and attending school. A few days after their little talk the three girls bade each other an affectionate farewell, and turned their faces toward their respective homes.

"Home again," said Eleanor, as she met her mother. "Oh, mother, how good it is to be home, no matter how plain things are, But we're going very soon, aren't we? How soon? It seems as though I couldn't wait a day, I am so crazy to get a sight of blue water. Nothing has happened to change our plans, hey, mother?"

"Nothing at all," said her mother, smiling with pleasure at seeing that the hard study had not subdued the bright girl's flow of spirits. "I suppose you will need a little while for sewing, won't you?"

"No; not a day here. The few new things I can have, and the old things to turn, twixt, clean, trim, by way of trying to hoax people into thinking they are new, I can do all after we are settled in our summer house. And you wrote me that Robbie is all fixed. What a dear, industrious old mother you are. And how Robbie will enjoy the sea-shore, with a sand-bucket and shovel."

With a kiss to her mother, and a pat on the head of her small brother, Eleanor ran to pick up the threads of some small household duties.

"I'll attend to things in the kitchen, mother, but I must take a run into the garden. I'm fairly aching for a bunch of the dear old pansies on the supper table. Of course they're thriving as they always do."

Who would have thought a walk in the garden would have such lasting results. Eleanor secured the panies, selecting with a beaming smile the kind which from a child she had sought out, those with markings which she declared showed a face looking into her own. Then she gave a little exclamation of pleasure as her eye caught sight of a bright cluster above her head.

"A bunch of apple blossoms so late in the season! I must take them to mother."

Apple-blossoms they surely were, thanks to a backward spring, and the fact of a tree having been overshadowed and dwarfed by a rapidly growing box-alder. Eleanor stepped upon an inverted flower pot, then to the low stone wall which surrounded the garden.

But a stone slipped and she missed her footing and came near falling. Grasping a limb of the tree she tried to regain her balance, but was obliged to take a quick step back upon the flower pot. And then a sharp pain shot through her foot as it seemed to twist under her weight, and she sank down upon the ground.

"What is it Eleanor?" asked her mother, hurrying out at sound of her call.

"I've hurt my foot a little, mother. If you'll just help me I'll get back to the house and rest it for a few minutes. It hurts me to step on it."

Mother examined the foot with a look of dismay which she hid as well as she could from Eleanor.

"Lie still," she said, after binding a cold compress upon it.

"But I wanted to get tea," said Eleanor; "I meant to begin helping you the first moment I could get to you."

Mrs. Grey shook her head when out of reach of Eleanor's eyes. The young girl fretted restlessly for a few moments, after which the pain in her foot caused her to forget her anxiety to move about.

"How long will it be, mother?" she asked in a low voice, the next morning as mother without her daughter's help, went about the household work.

The hours of suffering through the night, and the sight of the swollen foot had prepared Eleanor to some extent for the discouraging answer.

"Three weeks at least, my dearie," replied mother, with a smile of good cheer.

"All our plans spoiled!"

"No, daughter, only deferred for a little while. And we may be sure it is for some good reason."

"Yes, of course. But!—"

Mother could guess how much of suppressed impatience, of disappointment, of a brave attempt at submission were contained in the conjunction as Eleanor turned away to hide her tears.

"How will Robbie feel?" she asked, later.

Robbie, however, behaved like a little man, as he was.

"It has been best, you see, said mother a few days after the accident, reading a letter from her sister. "Scarlet fever has broken out in the cottage adjoining Margaret's. They are going to take the child away as soon as he is better. We could not have dared remain there with Robbie if we had gone at the time expected. We should have been at all the expense and annoyance of coming back."

"Everything is for the best," said Eleanor with a bright smile. She could not anticipate how far her faith was to be tested.

A week later the scarlet fever scare was announced by Aunt Margaret to be over, Eleanor's foot was declared well enough to go with care on a short journey, and all preparations were made.

"It is so good to have been able to rent the house while we are gone," said mother on the evening before they were to leave. "It will be a real help on such small expense as we shall have to meet."

"And we should not have had that opportunity if we had not been delayed. Everything fits in just right."

Mother went to the back of the house to attend to some small matter leaving Eleanor who had wearied her ailing foot, resting on a lounge near the door of the sitting-room.

"Who can that be?" she said to herself as through the deepning twilight she saw the one old omnibus belonging in the small village drawing up at the gate. "Somebody's getting out. There's some mistake. They ought to be told. Mother!"

Mother did not hear her call, and within the next minute two children had followed the woman who alighted from the omnibus.

"And two old trunks," exclaimed Eleanor, rising in a little excitement and hobbling to the door. "It won't do to let them make such a mistake. And there's the omnibus driving away."

As well as she could she hurried out on the walk to be met by a thin-faced, unattractive woman, and the two children.

"I think you have made some mistake," said Eleanor hastily. "Hadn't I better call the man back?"

"I don't believe its a mistake," said the woman. "Isn't this Mr. Grey's house?"

"Yes," said Eleanor, with a sinking at her heart as the woman followed her into the house. Mrs. Grey met them in the sitting-room.

"Mrs. Grey?" asked the new-comer.

"Yes," was the answer.

"I am the widow of Harvey Grey, your half-brother, wasn't he?"

"Yes," repeated Mrs. Grey, avoiding the look of dismayed inquiry with which Eleanor sought to meet her eye.

"I suppose you know something of what his life was. I married him supposing him to be a good man. He spoiled my life, did me all the harm a man can do a woman. He used up my property and his own, and then died. I have these children to support and I can do it, but I want a little help first, not much. I have secured a situation in the orphan asylum in the city, where I can earn enough to keep them and myself. But I cannot go there until September."

"Sit down," said Mrs. Grey, who in her surprise had forgotten that all were standing.

"I don't know where we are to stay until then," went on the woman in the same, dull, hard voice, without noticing Mrs. Grey's invitation. I have borne all there was to be borne from your brother. It wasn't my fault that he was what he was, it was the fault of some one else. But it has all been visited on me, and now I am come to see if some of his kindred will take me and his children in until my place is open for me. It isn't much to ask considering all."

A host of sad and bitter memories crowded upon Mrs. Grey of the wilful, wayward younger brother who, having given his parents trouble and anxiety without limit, had at length run away from home—a good riddance, so all the neighbors said. His family had heard of his death, a year or two before, and that was all until this.

"Of course you can stay," said Mrs. Grey, quietly. "Come into this room and take off your things.'

She led them to her own room, quickly deciding to share Eleanor's much smaller one; then hurried to the kitchen, where Eleanor met her with a despairing face.

"Mother, is it so? Must it be so?"

"What can we do my daughter?"

"Give up all our plans for the summer? Stay at home when we are all ready to go, and wanted to go so much?"

"We couldn't say no, Eleanor."

"And for that dreadful woman, who looks as if she thought we were all her worst enemies. O mother, how can we bear it?"

"It must be for the best, dear."

"Best—best. Yes, yes, but how can it be? Was this the best for which we have been kept waiting all this time?"

How hard to trample down the rebellious feeling which would arise in her heart! How intolerable to think of exchanging the sight of the blue sea for the continual sight of that stranger's cold, accusing eyes, the sound of the murmer of the waves for that harsh voice!

She reached her room before her mother's newly imposed duties allowed her to, and, throwing herself upon the bed, sobbed out her sorrow and disappointment. It was the first chance of a real outing which had ever come into her life, cast into such quiet ways.

She gave full vent to her tears, then, after lying still awhile, arose and looked into the mirror. Some of the old determination had come back to her eyes.

"Well, Eleanor Grey," she said, looking sharply into the intelligent face which answered her gaze, "so you are ready to lay down your arms and desert your colors are you? You are ready to give up the fight for what? Just because your captain hasn't consulted you as to what line you prefer to fight on. Oh, yes, you're a brave girl, Eleanor, you're a worthy follower of the Master, a worthy daughter of the King. You seem to have forgotten that a daughter accepts in meekness and love the commands of her father—"

Another burst of tears, this time flowing with a mingling of repentance with the bitter struggle to give up her own will; and when mother at length joined her, with a burden of dread at her heart in the fear of Eleanor's taking it hard, added to her own disappointment for herself and her children, she was most gratefully cheered by finding that the young girl had quietly accepted the burden she could not shake off.

"Perhaps we can do her some good," said mother, after sitting in thought for a while.

"She doesn't look as if she wanted good of us," sighed Eleanor. "She looks as if all she asked was a room and something to eat. But the children can surely take in some good."

Mrs. Harvey Grey met her in the morning with a half defiant expression, which partly wore away as she perceived that those upon whom she had cast herself for help over a dark place regarded her with a kindly spirit.

"But she never lets up at all," said Eleanor dolefully, a few weeks later. "If I could only feel that she regarded us as friends, who desire only to be kind to her, it would be so much easier."

"Now tell us about your summer, Eleanor," said Alice, as at opening of school in autumn, the three friends again met for another year of industrious, enjoyable study.

"What about yours?" asked Eleanor.

"Oh, very much about what I thought," said Alice. "Only my aunt was not so cross as I feared she would be, and the crossness did not seem so hard to bear because of the strength you spoke of, Eleanor, which came for the asking. And I have done my duty and did not break down at it, as Aunt Abby was always predicting, and as I, in my ugly moments, do. But I think I at last contrived to reach into the poor old soul's heart, and we parted the best of friends."

"And you Ruth?" asked Eleanor.

"Well, not exactly what I anticipated. Harder in some ways. Mother was sick and had to go away from home, which made it doleful for me and the tribe of little ones."

"What a chance for work every hour."

"Yes," said Ruth slowly, but with a light in her eyes. "No end of chances for patient bearing of small worries and doing of small duties. But I loved them all so much it made it easy unless the hateful part of me came uppermost. But I had a delightful resting time afterwards. Mother came home well, and sent me off for two weeks to some friends in the mountains, who petted and made much of me as if I had been a queen."

"Or a princess—as you are," said Alice, pressing her hand. "Now, Eleanor, you wrote me of a great disappointment, and after that you said next to nothing about yourself."

"Indeed I hadn't much to say," said Eleanor, "for I was too busy to write."

She gave a half comical, half-serious account of the inopportune arrival of Mrs. Harvey Grey, continuing the story of the summer's duties and other outcome, of illnesses through which the children had passed, of times when their mother had found it hard to meet the expenses of the additional family.

"And do you mean that that woman never warmed up to you to the very end?" asked Ruth, when she had finished.

"Never," said Eleanor. "She seemed to regard her husband's relations as her natural enemies, and I can't say I blamed her much for it, poor thing."

"That's all nonsense," said Alice impatiently. "I don't see how any one could have withstood your kindness, Eleanor."

"Well, she did, but I made my way with the children. Robbie behaved like an angel, never making a bit of fuss in his pleasure at having some playmates. We all grew fond of the children."

"And wasn't there any story-book let-up to it?" went on Alice. "No reward at the last? No finding a wealthy friend of that woman who lavished his gratitude on you for all you had done? No good time for you before you came back to school?"

"Not a bit," said Eleanor laughing.

"She didn't need it," said Ruth with a sober glance into Eleanor's face. "O Eleanor we are all of us looking for some kind of a little trumpery toy of a reward as we go along. You haven't had it dear. It has been simply loving faithful duty in you. There hasn't been a bit of artificial light to stand between you and the light of his countenance—nothing to spoil the fullness and sweetness of your perfect service."

—The longest board fence in New Jersey, and possibly in the country, is just being completed at Tranquility. It encloses J. O. Stuyvesant's new deer park, and will be twelve miles long. The track is 2000 acres. The fence is ten feet high, and is made of hemlock boards 1 1-2 inches thick. The saw-mill at Allamuchy has been running constantly for a year cutting lumber for this one fence. It will cost $20,000.

It is now intended that the Miles Standish monument, Duxbury, shall be dedicated about August 1.

Another Trip—No. 10.

BY CHARLES W. JOHNSON.

It was well along into the afternoon when we left Norton. "Buck" was getting pretty completely used up if his locomotion was any criterion. The "Sailor" as usual at the start, led the way.

For several miles the roadway was made, but the track was not laid; this made it much better walking and we fairly smiled, and told some humorous stories. Every once in a while we would come across a gang of men at work completing some unfinished section. At one place we watched with much interest the explosion of a dynamite charge which removed several tons of earth from the top of a high bank down into the cut below. Two sons of sunny Italy were resting by the wayside. One of them motioned for the loan of a match; a "Portland Star" was given him; he took it, looked it over suspiciously, elevated his eyes and grinned, looked at it some more, smelled of it awhile and then lighted it, but there was fire in his eye when he inhaled a good whiff of its strong fumes, and for a moment I did not know but that there might be trouble between the two countries.

A little ways ahead of us we can hear the whistle of a locomotive, and that gives us a faint gleam of hope for we know that it has come up over the road and must sometime go back. At the end of the deep "fill" we come to an uncompleted trestle over which the track is being laid, but there is a space of a dozen feet between the two. A winding plank is the bridge over which we walk to make the connection; it is accomplished with much difficulty, the trestle is crossed and we again become "track walkers." We are told by the foreman of the gang that an engine went down the road a few moments before and likewise a hand car, but that there would be nothing more that afternoon.

There was one consolation; if we could not ride, there was no law to prevent our walking. The several trains we met were only an aggravation, but there was no help for it.

A long train is standing on a side track; it is not a passenger train, neither is it a regular freight, but a sort of half and half, that is, half freight and half cattle car arrangement. These cars are the boarding and lodging-houses for the men employed in building the road; but what a place for mortals to dwell in. The general appearance from a distance is anything but good, while an intimate acquaintance is repulsive. The smell suggests all sorts of filthy diseases and we almost wonder if that is not the headquarters for the reported "small pox" at Big Stone Gap.

Ahead of us is another "tramp" plodding along in regular clock-work order. His form is like a half moon on legs. He sticks to the ties, while we avoid them as often as we have opportunity. We pass him, but in a few minutes he passes us and this is repeated several times during the next few miles. His gait is regular while ours is uncertain; we walk faster by spells, but he will cover more miles in a day than we. He is evidently a veteran in the service; we may be sometime, but we fervently hope not.

"Big Stone Gap or no Big Stone Gap," said "Buck," "I shall stop at the first place I come to, for my feet are all covered with blisters, it's no use." We were then in sight of the big gap in the mountains from which the town derived its name, but the town itself was yet several miles from us. We rested a little and "Buck" said he would try once more. All of us were putting forth extra efforts to appear better than we really were, but as there was no wayside inn to take us in we pushed ahead as best we could. We pass through two small tunnels in the gap, leave the L. & N., climb a steep bank up onto the S. A. & O. R. R. and go down, our last three miles, toward the place where we shall "take supper." A mile from the hotel we leave the track, go down a hillside which makes each of us groan at every step, cross a plain, go another half mile and we are at Big Stone Gap and a three dollar a day hotel. Our long walk of twenty-six miles was completed and we had not been "quarantined."

The next morning after breakfast we mounted horses for a nearly twenty-mile ride down the Powell river. There were four of us this time, the addition being a Mr. B. who knew everybody and who everybody knew. We went up through Cedar gap, Love Lady gap and on to Pennsylvania gap, fording a number of bridgeless streams. We were jogging rapidly along on our way back to the hotel, when all at once the order came to "halt," from one of two men whose horses were tied to small saplings by the roadside, in the woods. We were not told to hold up our hands but we halted. "Can't let ye pass this way," said the spokesman, "they've got the small-pox on yon side of the river and this road is quarantined."

As good luck would have it Mr. B. knew the sheriff of the county (the spokesman) and after much parleying we were allowed to proceed. The cases of that dread disease were on the other side of the river, and as the wind was blowing from the other direction we felt no fear. The horseback riding took the stiffness out of us a good deal and by the time we arrived back to the hotel we were in quite respectable trim. On the morrow we were to separate. "Buck" was to start back over the long route to St. Paul.

The "Sailor" was to stay a day or two longer when he was to take the same undesirable tramp, and I was going down into Tennessee. The contemplated trip to the "devil's half acre" was given up. I did, however, the next morning pass the "devil's race path" and go through "frog level," a suburb of Clinchport, not far from "Wild Cat valley." I was more than satisfied. On the S. A. & O. R. R. there is one of the most interesting views in America — a natural bridge and tunnel. It was a most magnificent sight. Desiring to obtain the best view possible, I meandered through the dirtiest passenger car I ever saw, back into the baggage apartment. This interesting sign stared me in the face; I quote it verbatim:

"No admittance in baggage car, so if you don't want to be asked out please don't come in." But we went and enjoyed the natural beauty of the scene immensely. From Bristol we came up through that perfect "Eden," the lovely Shenandoah valley, to Harrisburg, Pa., and home by the way of Philadelphia and New York, wiser if not better than when we left two weeks before.

[THE END.]

The governor general of India and viceroy receives a salary of $250,000 a year, with allowances that include a gorgeous palace at Calcutta and a summer residence, all making his position worth $500,000.

—The city of Taunton has advertised for proposals for a loan of $60,000 for paving.

CITY COUNCIL.

Twenty members answered to the roll call at the adjourned meeting of the City Council Monday evening, the absentees being Councilmen Duffield, Holden and Morton. For over three hours and a half city matters were discussed and acted upon.

Electric Freight Railway.

A petition for location was received from the Quincy Electric Freight Railway for a location from Quincy Point through South Quincy to West Quincy, and from West Quincy through Quarry street to South Quincy. The streets and street crossings are named in the petition, and are the samed as outlined in the DAILY LEDGER some weeks ago. The petitioners are: Messrs. Charles H. Porter, C. S. Tuckerman, John R. Graham, Philip L. Saltonstall, George E. Armstrong, H. C. Spaulding and William G. A. Pattee.

Applications for Licenses

Were received from Peter Dixon to renew common victuallers' license, and William Corcoran as a common victualler, and referred to the Committee on Licenses.

Water Street Hearing.

The informal hearing on the widening of Water street was opened at 8 o'clock. For some minutes it looked as if no one was ready to speak in the affirmative.

George Cahill set the ball in motion. It was of the utmost importance that the thoroughfare should be widened. Was surprised that more interest was not taken by granite men. Street ought to be made fifty feet wide. Traffic will in a short time be doubled. The Old Colony freight figures had been quoted at a previous meeting. These showed a large number of tons shipped but did not represent half that went over Water street. In reply to Councilman Bryant he said the number of teams per day over the street might average 1400.

A recess of ten minutes was taken to examine plans, which were explained by Engineer Whitman.

Peter McConarty thought there was no question but the street was too narrow and should be widened.

Ex-Councilman Whitman thought all were agreed that the street should be widened but the question was to what extent, whether it should be paved, and when the work should be done. The land damage to widen to forty feet would be much less than forty-five feet; it would increase quite materially for a greater width than forty. A forty foot paved street would accommodate a very large traffic. Hoped Council would make an appropriation this year to take land and make fills, and leave the rebuilding until next year. The land damage ought not to be excessive; say ten cents per foot for the land, and some extra for the damage to the estates. Did not wish to give an off-hand estimate of the damage. Damage would increase rapidly each year the work was delayed.

John Q. A. Field, ex-County Commissioner, favored widening; believed forty feet would be wide enough if it was to be paved and curbed. Favored putting the work through this year, and could see no objection to doing it. Twenty-six feet for travel would accommodate four teams abreast.

Peter Dackers said there was not five or ten minutes during the day but there was a heavy team on the street, and there would be more were the street in good condition. Now is the time to widen. It was one of the crying evil, a bog in winter and dust mill in summer. Favored paving.

Mr. Trepanier did not think there was another street with as heavy travel. He favored widening on the South side.

William Glennon had a word about construction.

Ex-Councilman Shea would like to see the street 45 feet wide and thought the Council would be practicing false economy to widen to a less width.

Ex-Selectman G. H. Field said it was not now a safe street, and there would be considerable more travel over it if it was.

Ex-Road Commissioner Cashman said when two cars were passing, a team could not get through.

Thomas W. Smith thought the street ought to be 45 feet, although it would discommode him considerable.

W. G. A. Pattee, Esq., appeared in behalf of the Old Colony Railroad to oppose any widening on the South side so as to encroach on its property.

W. H. H. Rideout hoped the street would be widened on the north side rather than upon his property.

The hearing closed at 9.25, and Councilman Jones moved that the City Council

Proceed to Select Plan,

And that the 45-foot one be accepted.

Councilman Bryant moved the 40-foot one as an amendment. The testimony was that 40 feet would be wide enough and the cost much less. Devonshire street in Boston was but 40 feet yet by actual count for a week, the average number of teams per hour was 487. Street should be paved and curbed.

Councilman Jones supported his motion. The T rail of the street railway was an obstruction. Electric cars often blockaded the street. Then Copeland street which led into it was forty-five feet.

Councilman Moxon would like an estimate of the cost of both widths. Thought there would be very few obstructions on a forty foot street.

Councilman Warner thought all streets should be laid out forty feet, and the main thoroughfares a greater width. The committee had estimated that the forty foot street would cost $25,000 to build and the forty-five foot road $30,000. That the difference in cost of the two widths, including damages, would be $8000.

Councilman Fallon favored the 45 foot street, and believed it economy to build that width.

Councilman Moxon hoped widening would be done under betterment act.

Councilman Bryant thought the estimate of $3,000 for the extra five feet of land and the damages was small.

Councilman Powers argued in favor of 45 feet, and also Councilman Pratt.

Councilman Sherman thought Council should view the street.

Councilman Jones thought Councilmen who had not viewed the street during the three years it had been under discussion were direlect of their duty.

The amendment to accept the 40 foot plan was adopted by vote of 11 to 8.

Adams Street.

The Committee on Streets made a slight amendment to the Adams street order and the question came on engrossment.

Councilman Powers opposed the order as it was endorsing the action of the Mayor in vetoing the previous order on a quibble.

Councilman Bryant said the Mayor had acted right as the other order had been termed illegal.

The order passed and under a suspension

Friday, June 26, 2 P. M.
Indications for Saturday: Fair weather; slight change in temperature.

Friday Morning's Fire.

About 11.15 Friday morning the firemen were called to the residence of ex-Road Commissioner Gordon McKenzie on Quincy avenue, his stable being on fire. The electric light station is opposite and the whistle was pulled by hand and afterwards Box 37, at the corner of School and Hancock streets.

The fire department responded very promptly and quickly laid three lines of hose from the two hydrants near by. There was not much in the barn, no live stock or carriages, and very little hay, but it had made considerable headway. The building however is standing and the house connected therewith was not scorched.

The barn was valued at $1000 and was damaged perhaps $600 to $700. The estate is owned by Mr. Joseph F. Berry and is insured for $1500.

The fire was caused by a son of Mr. McKenzie playing in the barn with matches. He told his mother, who alarmed the electric light people.

Smoke and Cinders.

The bell at the Centre did not strike.

Some of the firemen got pretty well watered.

Gordon McKenzie was absent at the time of the alarm and the fire was under control when he made his appearance.

The whistle was cut out of the fire alarm because of sickness in the neighborhood, and was pulled by hand.

Trial by Jury.

There was a fair audience at Faxon hall Wednesday evening, at the first production of Gilbert & Sullivan's amusing operetta, "Trial by Jury." It was a burlesque on a jury trial where a woman is plaintiff in a breach of promise case. It was probably overdone, but it showed how the jury and even the judge and court officials are captivated by the fair sex; how all the young ladies of the place side with the defendant, and the climax is reached when the judge himself marries the plaintiff.

The parts were taken by local talent, except Mr. W. H. Dodd, the defendant, as follows:

Judge,	W. W. Osborne
Associate,	W. L. Griffin.
Plaintiff,	Miss May V. Hastings
Defendant,	W. H. Dodd
Counsel for Plaintiff,	W. T. Isaac
Usher,	Walter Hersey
Foreman of Jury,	C. F. Brown
First Bridesmaid,	Miss Martha Brooks

The chorus of bridesmaids and ladies in court were Misses Carrie Baker, Ethel Burke, Helen Black, Fanny Duffield, Mary Frye, Mamie Gardner, Lizzie Gould, Edith Gray, Lizzie Jones, Lulu Jones, Mabel Oxford, Eva Miller, Grace Pettingill, Lizzie Shepherd, Jessie Smith, Lillian Taylor, Addie L. Tupper, Mrs. Blanche Lillicrap.

The chorus of barristers, jurymen, etc., Messrs. Walter E. Burke, Wm. T. Chubbuck, Henry W. French, Frank C. Gilbert, Fred E. Jones, Geo. W. Holden, Robert S. McClean, W. S. Osborne, Walter E. Simmons, Jr., Howard Spear.

The jurymen were got up very cleverly, and as a chorus were strong. The bridesmaids and court ladies made it a picturesque scene, and sang well. Mr. Dodd, the defendant added much to the mirth of the occasion, but all seemed imbued with this spirit, and the curtain dropped at 9.30 all too soon.

Part one of the programme included piano solos by Prof. Frank C. Gilbert, vocal numbers by Master George McDonald and Mr. W. H. Dodd, and a quartette of male voices. The numbers of Master McDonald, who came from the church of the Messiah, were enthusiastically encored, and deserved it all; he has a lady's voice of wide range.

A much larger audience assembled at Faxon hall Thursday evening, when Trial by Jury was repeated with greater success than on the first evening.

Part one was lengthened out by readings by Miss Marshall of Boston and Miss Litchfield of Quincy, and baritone solo by George W. Holden. Miss Minerva T. Fuller gave two piano solos, and Mr. Dodd two vocal numbers. Master McDonald again captured the house with his soprano solos.

There were several additions and improvements to the operetta, making it a very enjoyable entertainment. Dancing closed the evening's enjoyment.

Superintendent Allen in Quincy.

Superintendent Allen of the Old Colony Railroad met Mayor Fairbanks at City Hall Thursday afternoon, to further consider the needs of Quincy as to railroad accommodations, and also to listen to a suggestion from his Honor for sidewalks and stone crossings between the depot and Hancock street.

Each of the trains asked for in the citizens petition were considered separately and Supt. Allen showed a disposition to accommodate Quincy as far as possible. As a result of the conference he promised the Mayor that the following through trains should be stopped at Quincy:

TO BOSTON.	FROM BOSTON.
7.58 A. M.	9.15 A. M.
9.31 "	12.15 P. M.
12.31 P. M.	3.15 "
3.31 "	4.48 "

The Mayor submitted convincing argument that an inward train at 7.31 A. M. would be more popular than any which the Old Colony could add; that now the 7.13 got them in too early while the 7.44 was a few minutes too late for Quincy men to get to business at 8 o'clock. Previous to June 15 the Quincy station had three trains between 7.13 and 7.44 and all popular ones. It had four trains between 7 and 8, where now there were but two, and three between 8 and 9 where now it has but two. Five or ten minute service was not expected during these hours, but fifteen minute service was needed and would be appreciated. Supt. Allen said at the outset that the 7.31 could not be stopped, but he admitted that good reasons had been shown for a train at about that time, and promised to further consider that train in particular. His objection to stopping it was that the trains were run so close at that hour that those following it would be delayed.

The Mayor will use further arguments to have the 12 M. outward train instead of the 12.15.

The 6.13 A. M. inward and the 6.30 P. M. outward which are also Wollaston and Quincy Adams trains, will stop at South Boston.

The Depot Approach.

The "depot yard" has long been an eye sore to the people of Quincy, and Mayor Fairbanks set about immediately after his inauguration to improve it, and now there is a prospect of its being accomplished. The Mayor submitted to Supt. Allen a plan for a seven foot sidewalk of brick or asphalt abutting on the boarding house property from Hancock street to the back line, and a stone crossing from there to the depot platform. Another stone crossing to run across the private way nearly on a line of the rear wall of City Hall.

The plan was favorably considered and the Mayor was asked to furnish an estimate of the cost of the improvement.

The sewer act should be put to vote as soon as possible. If adopted construction cannot be begun before next spring, but the commissioner will need all the time intervening to adopt plans.

The borrowing capacity of the city July 1, will be less than $75,000. With $35,000 proposed for a new brick schoolhouse, $40,000 for Water street, and perhaps $20,000 for a new engine house, it looks as if the surplus was threatened.

The unfortunate man was taken to the eye and ear infirmary in Boston, where it was found necessary to remove the injured member.

Bicycle riders between Quincy and Milton go out of their way over the Wollaston hills rather than use Adams street. Newport avenue and Beale street are in very good condition, but Adams street which does not get much heavy travel and is a thoroughfare at that, is in a wretched condition. The appropriation of $2500 should make some improvements but will not do the work as thoroughly as one would be pleased to see it.

The St. Paul's church was crowded Saturday evening when there was a pleasing entertainment and strawberry festival. The programme included poem or recitation by Oscar Frist, Olof Petterson, W. Glotte and Mangus Petterson; a reading by Miss Emma Gustafson, solo by Hannah Ericson, and vocal and instrumental music, and address by Rev. C. Paulson, the pastor. Then came the strawberries. The gross receipts were nearly $50.

A probation officer has been appointed for Salem under the new law, yet Judge Humphrey of the Quincy court is of the opinion that he cannot make the appointment for this district before July 1, the time the law goes into effect. The appointment should go to a Quincy man if any one in the city desires it, as it is the seat of the court, larger than any two towns in the district, and is not now well represented in the court. Weymouth has the judge and the active associate, and Milton the clerk.

The action of the City Council on street sprinkling will not give us much relief from the dust. When the Mayor recommended the action taken, which was some months ago, little of the highway appropriation had been spent, but the situation is different now, a greater part of it has been spent and there is none too much with which to squeeze through the year. The Council by its adoption of the section of the new law, is however in a position to order a street sprinkled and to levy the whole or a part of the cost on abutters.

Miss Minnie Litchfield of this city, read at a recital of Prof. Jonson's pupils at Brockton Saturday evening. The Despatch says: Miss Litchfield is above the medium height, with expressive eyes and figure. Her costume was made of batiste cloth trimmed with white lace. Her second number was the "Lover's Knot," followed by the "Maiden's Prayer." Miss Litchfield well deserved the applause which followed her work.

Children's Day.

The observance of Children's day at the Washington-street Congregational church was a pleasant occasion. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Benedict, delivered an address to the children in the morning. The rite of baptism was administered to the younger daughter, Cora Frances, of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Webb. A Sunday school concert formed the evening programme. The subject of the concert was, "Room for the Children." The recitations, dialogues, and singing by a host of little people did credit to each and every one that took part. The platform was decorated with cut flowers which made a very pretty display.

Sullivan—Hayes.

St. Mary's church, West Quincy, was the scene of a brilliant wedding, Thursday at 8 o'clock, the contracting parties being Mr. John E. Sullivan of Vinal Haven, and Miss Mary B., second daughter of Mr. Daniel Hayes, the well known stone contractor. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. F. A. Friguglietti, in presence of a large gathering of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

Mr. Thomas Sullivan, a brother of the groom was best man and Miss Mary F. McGilvary was bridesmaid.

The bride was becomingly attired in a costume of white faille Francais with a tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a boquet of bridal roses.

The bridesmaid wore a costume of pink albatross. Music during the ceremony was rendered by Miss Mary Farrell, organist at the church.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the residence of the bride's parents, 109 Copeland street, where a reception was held in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan, after a short trip, will take up their residence at Vinal Haven where he is engaged in business.

The presents received were many and were very handsome.

Children's Sunday.

At the West Quincy M. E. church, the pastor, Rev. J. H. Humphrey, preached Sunday an interesting sermon to the children on "The Race of Life." He said that success in the race of life depended upon making right preparations, running well and running toward the right goal. He pointed out the dangers of being handicapped by evil habits and the importance of training all our powers if we would be successful in the race. The goal or success in life consists in attaining a well rounded christian character—the most precious possession possible in this world, and passport to the world to come.

In the evening a very successful concert was given by the Sabbath School which was largely attended. The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and roses.

Rev. J. H. Humphrey will exchange with Rev. Mr. Chapin, of East Milton, next Sabbath morning.

Rev. Mr. Humphrey is giving a series of short, familiar talks, on Sabbath evenings, which are being very favorably received. The subject for next Sabbath evening is "What must I do besides believe to become a Christian?" The meeting will begin at 6 o'clock with a preliminary service conducted by the Epworth League.

Broke his Hip.

About half past one on Monday, the foreman of the painters was working on a ladder in the upper room of the new Willard school when the ladder slipped and the man fell breaking his hip. He was put on the quarter past two train and taken to Savin Hill, where he has a wife and one child. On arriving at the above station he was met by Dr. Fifield who ordered him to the City Hospital in Boston. The man's name is McKinley, and he is said to be a nephew of the author of the famous tarriff bill.

Committee in Boston.

The joint committee of the citizens of Quincy and the City Council met General Manager Kendrick, of the Old Colony railroad, by appointment, at nine o'clock Saturday. All the members were present except Dr. Everett and W. B. Rice, Esq., and were courteously received.

H. M. Federhen ably presented the case for Quincy. He explained how the committees had been appointed and read the resolutions adopted. Patrons of the central station could not conceive why it had been singled out for a reduction, while all the other stations had received material gains. Quincy was not a little picayune station but a business centre. Four street railroads started from there: one to Quincy Point and North Weymouth; one to Houghs Neck; one to Wollaston, Atlantic and Neponset; and one to South and West Quincy. The first two catered solely to the central station, while both the others did to a large extent. Quincy was the only city in Norfolk County, and with the exception of Weymouth over twice as large as any of the Old Colony towns between Boston and Brockton. But all these were greatly benefitted while Quincy was forced to put up with a great reduction. It was unjust, and an injury to the city. There was a demand for fifteen minute service to Boston early in the morning, and from Boston toward night; and also for half hourly service in other parts of the day where there was now hourly service.

Mr. Kendrick at the outset said the Old Colony did not want to hurt Quincy. The fact was that many trains had been run which had not been used by Quincy people. The city, he thought, had had unusual accommodations in the past. It was apparent to the committee, the system on which the new schedule was made up, to separate the long distance traffic from the suburban. He proposed that it should remain so with few exceptions. He did not suppose it made any difference to Quincy people whether they got into a Cohasset, Brockton, or some other train, if they only reached Boston about the same time. If it could be shown that there was much traffic between any of these stations and Quincy the trains would stop, but otherwise extra trains would be put on for Quincy as demanded.

Mr. Hodges enquired if the Quincy station was not entitled to as good service as it had received in the past.

Mr. Kendrick thought it was receiving this, that heretofore many accommodation trains had been run which were of no earthly use.

The Old Colony, he added, has a greater interest in Quincy than even the residents.

Mr. Federhen took exception to this; it could be only from a financial point.

Mr. Kendrick admitted that it was; and when asked if the receipts at the Quincy station were not much larger than at many other stations he said they were. He had been approached by one Quincy man who thought there should be five or ten minute service between 7 and 8 A. M., as it was very convenient when one missed the train he started for. Mr. Kendrick seemed to mix up this demand with that of the committee, and termed it very unreasonable.

Mr. Federhen offered a vigorous protest against such mixing, telling Mr. Kendrick he had the schedule of the committee before him and it did not call for any such service. The most that was asked was fifteen minute service and that only for a little while in the morning and at night.

Relative to the petition for a workingmen's train Mr. Kendrick said he had had an interview with the first signer F. A. Hobart of Braintree and explained the law to him, it evidently not having been understood by him. The petition had been presented to him by Josiah Quincy, and Mr. Kendrick offered to discuss the matter with him at his leisure, but had heard nothing from that gentleman since. The law required 200 signatures from each town to secure a workingmen's train. He had a proposition of a special rate for a workingmen's ticket when he should be waited upon.

Mr. Kendrick promised to do what he could for Quincy in a new schedule to be adopted July 1, and it is probable that there will be some extra inward trains in the morning, and outward at night; that a train for Nantasket in the morning will stop at Quincy, and also a return train at night; that the 12 M. outward will stop at Wollaston and Quincy; and that some of the Quincy trains will stop at South Boston. The interview lasted about three-quarters of an hour.

The New Willard.

The new Willard school building under Contractor Shackley is fast nearing completion. The walls of the building have been finished in what is known as Soapstone finish, and the last mason left the building Saturday.

Seventeen carpenters under Mr. Shackley are putting up the finishing which is of ash, nearly all the windows and doors up stairs have been cased in, and several of the rooms are all completed with the exception of the flooring which is being done by special contract, six layers of heavy paper being put between the floorings to deaden the sound.

The writer in company with Mr. Shackley made a tour of the building on Friday, and was surprised at the amount of work that is being put into the building and does not hesitate to say that when completed it will be one of the best appointed school buildings in the state; everything about the building is of the latest improvement, especially the heating and ventilating system which alone costs something like $15,000.

The building is wired for electric lights and is also piped for gas, and every room in the building is connected by speaking tubes and electric bells with the head master's room on the lower floor.

On the upper floor is a hall which is larger than any hall in the city and will be a grand place to hold graduation exercises, teachers' meetings, etc.

There is one thing however about the building which is an eyesore to many West Quincy people and that is the granite trimmings.

They say that Quincy, which is noted for its fine quality of granite all over the world should have a better quality than that used in the building, which instead of being the best Quincy is the poorest, and already several of the window caps have had to be replaced because they were faulty.

Watches that have been spoiled by botches restored and warranted. Williams, West Quincy. tf

—There were seventeen graduates from the Holbrook High school Wednesday evening.

New Presbyterian Pastor.

Last Sunday the Rev. John Ramsay, M. A. successor to the Rev. Eben Muse, began his pastoral duties in the First Presbyterian Church, South Quincy. Mr. Muse labored with indefatigable zeal to build the church and manse, and never relaxed his exertions until the work was accomplished and the debt all but paid. We regret to say that Mr. Muse now lies at death's door and cannot reap the reward of his labors. If he shall not here we hope he may rejoice where "The smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul."

That Mr. Ramsay is a worthy successor is beyond doubt. On Sunday night he made a stirring appeal to the flock for their co-operation in church work. He laid special emphasis on the fact that the day of "one man ministry" in the church is past. He showed his hearers their responsibility for the advancement of the good work, and is evidently determined there shall be no sinecures in that portion of the Christian church. His appeal made a deep impression.

A LEDGER representative got a few facts, from a friend who vouches for their authenticity, of Mr. Ramsay's career. For the information of those concerned we select the following:

Mr. Ramsay is a native of Glasgow, Scotland. He was educated in one of the famous old schools of that city, Hutcheson's Grammar School. Afterwards graduated with high honors in Glasgow University and took the degree of M. A. He next entered the Free Church Divinity hall, and on graduation took an excellent position.

In his educational course he was awarded over $1,200 competitive scholarships together with special scholarships in college of science and art.

In evangelistic work he received excellent training under a specialist in that department. He was a devoted worker in the welfare of youth, and occupied the position of president of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association.

He gained much experience in the religious welfare of children from his connection with the "Glasgow Foundry Boys' Religious Society," an organization of 88 branches in that city and its suburbs.

He received a good missionary training during his connection in this work with the Cranstonhill Free church, Glasgow. As a tribute to his devotion and success he was presented with a purse of sovereigns and a beautifully illuminated address.

We are pleased that the work in South Quincy Presbyterian church is taken up under such favorable auspices, and we bespeak for the young pastor the sympathy and countenance of his "brethren of the cloth."

Not a Swill Depot.

A Quincy fruit peddler got into trouble in Boston, Monday. He had purchased a load of bananas and had started for home, when discovering that some of his load had become aged he drove into a by-way and dumped them into the street. He was caught in the act by an officer who arrested him and took him to the police station, with the remark that Boston streets were not a swill depot.

In the Municipal court Tuesday morning, our Quincy friend was obliged to part with $8 of his hard earned cash.

Charity.

1st CORINTHIANS, 8th CHAP., 13th VERSE.

I noticed in your issue of the 13th that a fair in aid of Quincy Hospital is to be held June 17th. Well, may the results far exceed the most sanguine expectations of the movers. The object—a most laudable one, to benefit the one grand Catholic charity of Quincy, and to increase its usefulness—is to be commended. It seems that if a proper representation to the general public was made, that all would gladly contribute a paltry dollar a year towards the membership fund. We know that a large amount is expended yearly in Quincy for accident insurance policies; an amount which if donated to your hospital would drive many anxious thoughts from the minds of the management, and insure returns to enforced recipients of this great charity.

I do not fear the cause will fail from an insufficiency of funds. Oh, no! Such an undertaking cannot fail, so long as natives of this favored land are so notoriously generous and charitable, and that the alien by association speedily becomes so.

We have solid proof on reviewing the very precise report of the treasurer of the hospital for its first year. Many gracious givers, of really munificent amounts, are recorded; showing to poor suffering humanity that their best friends are their nearest neighbors. And the answer to the question asked so long ago, "Who is my neighbor?" is most practically answered with us today. May many more names be added to that honorable list of donors. I find many in the list of contributors who have given largely out of their abundance, and many more who have given largely out of their little.

Who doubts the text, that "The Lord loves a cheerful giver?" I cannot conceive how any man can impugn the motives to selfishness of one engaged in putting in force such a noble charity; using both his time and means unstintedly. Yet, alas! I have met just such carpers. How strange.

May every hill-top be crowned with such and similar manifestations of selfishness. All honor to the donor of your beautiful hospital; beautiful in situation, beautiful in associations and all its surroundings, and most beautiful in its exemplification of sweet Christian charity; and may he be abundantly blessed, in health, in home, and in all his undertakings. Such philanthropists deserve statues of imperishable material to perpetuate to the coming generations such deeds of love.

Quincy, it seems to me, has been particularly favored with well considered gifts; and I think it was the first town in this country to receive a gift of lands, the income of which was to be devoted to school purposes; and the giver, who was so interested in the welfare of posterity and in the cause of education, was driven by bigots and carpers out of the State. Humiliating episode in our history.

The second gift was also real estate, the income of which was to be devoted to educational purposes; also, supplemented to this, was a gift of several thousand volumes; a library considered by many to be of almost priceless value to the student of today.

The third gift is your very beautiful Public Library building, a receptacle worthy of its treasures.

The fourth gift, a fund for educational purposes, amounting to $200,000 or more today. To be utilized in the near future.

The fifth gift is your beautiful Merry Mount park, double the size of Boston's noted common, and in scenic effects far superior.

The sixth gift to the town, the beautiful Faxon park, commanding a very extensive view of land and ocean.

The seventh gift, the last, the best, the Quincy hospital, a beacon on a hill, ever ready to shelter and care for poor suffering humanity. Where the poor waif is not asked what creed, what race, or what your condition when seeking admission, but simply are you suffering?

Many public and private men in our present time inveigh loudly against what is called the insatiate ambition of mankind to amass great wealth; well, if the times are propitious for the acquirement of colossal fortunes, time has also brought more colossal benefactors. Has history recorded a Girard, a Peabody, a Montifiore, a Wilkinson, or a Fairweather, dead; or types of the Drexels, a Burdett-Coutts, or a Hirsch, living. Great public benefactors, almoners and dispensers of immense sums.

Good souls they are, of all creeds and no creeds; expelling all creeds and embracing all creeds; such loving humanities need no creed, they are above creeds; the Jew, the Catholic and the Prostestant. They have one abundant faith and love, and God is Love. They all do good works and their works shall follow them.

Now for years the town has been the recipient of gifts, not to be considered on money; gifts of much time and thought, a gift of love; continuous. Musing, I often wonder if the people realize the continuous service gratuitiously rendered to them year after year, for the benefit of the youth of Quincy, by that prominent scholar, preacher and teacher, the present head of the Adams Academy. And I am not aware that any acknowledgment, showing appreciation for such high service, has ever been made. The withholding, we know unintentionally, of some token of our esteem does not, I think, cause him one extra thought, but every thoughtful man must acknowledge that such loyal service should be recognized in a proper manner. It is true that the managers enter on their records yearly a sort of perfunctory vote, but the people, the whole people, should honor such splendid service as such service demands. No man lives engaged in these labors of love, which benefits his fellows, but enjoys a silent but sweet satisfaction when assured that his efforts for their welfare are appreciated. Yours,

WANDERER.

Lovell's Grove Engagements.

The Union Tow Boat Company has made the following engagements for Lovell's grove and barge Clifford: Iron Hall, branch 355, July 18; Hibernians, division 5, July 19; St. Frances de Salles church of Roxbury, July 22; Fr. O'Brien's East Cambridge annual parish picnic July 23.

—The eight annual June exhibit of the Hyde Park Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, and a fine exhibit it was, of strawberries, fruit, vegetables, flowers, bread and cake. Prizes were awarded.

Electric Freight Railway.

The granting of a location to the Quincy Electric Freight Railway is a matter demanding very careful consideration by the city government. There are those who doubt if such a railway will be a benefit to the city, but this will depend much on whether it is a nuisance; whether the company is allowed to do about as it pleases or whether salutary restrictions are imposed. The city has seen of late where it had not been careful in the past in granting locations to street railways, and for electric wires. The trouble lies in not anticipating the rapid growth of the city. The City Council is required by the act incorporating the railway company, to grant a location, but nothing is said, we believe, as to what restrictions shall be imposed.

We maintain that the citizens of Quincy were not warned as they should have been that a petition for incorporation was before the Legislature, and some do not know today that the proposed route will run through their land, their back yards, their house lots, causing a nuisance as well as a damage. Property-holders in South Quincy in particular should make the proposed route a study, and see if it does not encroach upon them. This running across lots, particularly through desirable house lots, is one of the objectionable features.

There are some streets also in the proposed route which should never be obstructed by such a railway. Take, for instance, School and Marsh streets. They are not wide enough to admit of it. A train of freight cars on these streets at the time of a fire alarm might seriously delay the fire apparatus.

The kind of rail, paving, length of train, when they shall be run, precaution at crossings, where sidings and spur tracks shall be put in, are among the matters which should not be passed lightly over.

Quincy's Summer Visitors.

One of the impenetrable swampy groves of Wollaston for many years has been used by the most interesting and social of the feathered species, the swallows, Audubois Airundo rustica, for a place of rendezvous, over which unmolested to hold their annual gatherings. This great family is spread over the whole of North America; they leave their southern homes about the first of April, and coming north spread themselves in divisions over every part of the country, where they are welcomed as harbingers of spring. Whether they select their mates before their migration, or afterwards, is only known to themselves.

They proceed at once repairing and building their nests; although very social each pair stands upon their family dignity and allow no neighbor to enter their dwelling. After rearing their two broods of young and taught them to use properly their ingeniously contrived bill, which is a wonderful insect trap, to catch and store their food, which is done on the wing, and attain the requisite speed of one mile a minute, which places them beyond the reach of all birds of prey, and also to acquire the swallow circlet, which will enable them to mingle in great throngs with ease and grace. Having thus been trained they are prepared to take their parts in the great assemblies.

About the first of August they abandon their nests, and as if by a preconcerted arrangement assemble at the close of the day from every direction, and by their numbers must be from a considerable extent of territory at the selected place. In introducing their progeny to the convention; each pair having quadrupled their numbers, a large portion must consist of youthful members. Being under the especial care of the Father of All and intuitively guided they are not disturbed by the croaking of a Malthus or an Atkinson that the earth cannot produce sufficient to support them, and the other seven hundred species of North American birds.

It is a beautiful sight to witness the happy greetings of these mystic beings as they meet over their leafy grotto. Myriads of birds coming together in one body, moving in every direction in an easy graceful manner without a jostle; the sweet notes of the male harmonizing with the octave lower twittering tones of the female; mingling and commingling in a long continued waltzing dance, until the sun has sank below the horizon and the evening shadows gather their shady retreat, then gliding down in sections to their bivouac for the night.

Some time after the sun has risen, the whole body of the swallows simultaneously emerge from their extended grove as if influenced by some electric signal. Taking their positions of the preceding night they perform with ardor and elegant motion the programme of their festivities. Having completed their salutations they separate in parties, returning to their accustomed haunts, and apply themselves to their daily labors. This round of socialities continues each night and morning throughout the season; the eager participants arriving early at their meeting place, awaiting the appearance of their festive companions to commence their waltzing dance.

On some bright, chilly morning in October, sometimes earlier, sometimes later, after holding their salutation services these accomplished rural excursionists, poising in mid air chanting their joyous Te Deum, and then without scrip or faltering doubt or compass or chart rise to upper space and unerringly wing their way to summer climes, where assemble the great family of their order. A. E. YOUNG.

Costly Monument.

The Granite Railway Company are at work upon a handsome and costly soldiers' monument to be erected at Utica, N. Y.

The monument consists of four sub bases or platforms in sections upon which rests a heavy moulded base 13 feet 6 inches by 13 feet 6 inches by 2 feet; resting on this base there is a die 13 feet by 13 feet by 2 feet 5 inches, and a cap 13 feet 10 inches by 13 feet 10 inches by 1 foot 6 inches, on the four corners of which are life size bronze statues representing cavalry, artillery, infantry and navy.

Above this cap there is a shaft 11 feet high which is encircled with a bronze war scene; above this shaft there is a polished plinth which is suitably inscribed.

On the plinth is the capitol of five pieces arranged in rotunda form on which is carved the coat of arms of Utica, the capitol being over-topped with a bronze statue of liberty.

The monument when completed will stand twenty-six feet high and the cost will be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Universalist Church.

Children's day was appropriately observed at the Universalist church, Sunday, at the morning service.

Rev. Mr. Maguire prefaced his remarks by reading from the fourth verse of the sixth chapter of Ephesians—"Bring them up in the Nurture and Admonition of the Lord."

He then outlined the duty of parents to their children and of the necessity of their early training in the paths of truth and virtue.

At the close of the pastor's remarks, the following children were christened:

Ralph Guild, son of Arthur C. and Annie Merritt; Olive Louise, daughter of Charles B. and Hattie Huston; Francis Everett and Ruth Augusta, son and daughter of W. Austin and Carrie E. Winslow.

The platform in front of the altar was very prettily trimmed with potted plants and flowers.

MILTON.

Miss Isabelle C. McIntyre of this town was one of the graduates from the Bridgewater Normal on Wednesday.

Burglars entered the residence of Mr. John R. Wade corner of Brush Hill road and Tucker street on Tuesday, during the absence of the family, and secured cloths and jewelry. Chief of Police Piece is investigating.

Adams street between the Quincy line and T. L. Pearce store has been resurfaced in a substantial way with crushed stone. The work will be continued toward the railway crossing.

Its in the air! The residents of East Milton are talking a boom. The increased railroad facilities have awakened the people to the possibilities of the place, and a healthy growth is predicted.

Accounts were allowed at the Probate court in Hyde Park, Wednesday, on the estates of Jesse Bunton, Francis Anury and Robert S. Watson late of Milton. Administration was granted to Robert B. Paffrey on estate of Elizabeth C. Paffrey late of Milton.

While Milton people are well satisfied with the train service, they complain because they can not get a timetable.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moorhouse have gone to England for a brief trip.

James Lord of Granite place is sick with la grippe.

Isaac Choate has sold his house off Washinghton street, to an out of town party.

The watering of the streets is greatly appreciated by East Milton people.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. CARD.

THE Undersigned wishes to return thanks to the people of Quincy and surrounding towns for their patronage during the past year. Thus far our sales and orders have been far ahead of anything we had reason to expect for the first year of our business in this city.

We wish to call attention to our fine line of new Spring Patterns in Wall Papers and Mouldings. We have a few job lots in Wall Papers that would pay real estate owners or other parties looking for Bargains, to come in and examine.

In the question of Paper Hanging we are there every time and in every case guarantee first-class work.

We have had about 20 years' experience in hanging Wall Paper, and think we can give satisfaction in every case.

Ceiling Decorating a special feature in our work.

We also keep a man for Whiting, Whitewashing and Tinting.

Orders taken for Repairing Carpet Sweepers and Wringers.

Parties wishing Shades made and hung would do well to look at our Samples and get Prices. Give us a trial.

Orders by mail promply attended to.

Address P. O. Box 863, Quincy, Mass., or Guy's Coliseum. Yours respectfully,

F. T. APPLETON.

SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1891.

Two Ways to Live on Earth.

There are two ways to live on earth:
  Two ways to judge, to act, to view;
For all things here have double birth—
  A right, a wrong; a false, a true.

Give me the home where kindness seeks
  To make that sweet which seemeth small;
Where every lip in fondness speaks,
  And every mind hath care for all:

Whose inmates live in glad exchange
  Of pleasures, free from vain expense;
Whose lives beyond their means ne'er range,
  Nor wise denials give offense:

Who in a neighbor's fortune find
  No wish, no impulse to complain;
Who feel not—never felt—the mind
  To envy yet another's gain!

Who dream not of the mocking tide
  Ambition's foiled endeavor meets—
The bitter pangs of wounded pride,
  Nor fallen power that shuns the streets.

Though Fate deny its glitt'ring store,
  Love's wealth is still the wealth to choose;
For all that gold can purchase more
  Are gods—it is no loss to lose!

Some beings wheresoe'er they go,
  Find naught to please or to exalt;
Their constant study but to show
  Perpetual modes of finding fault,

While others, in the ceaseless round
  Of daily wants and daily care,
Can yet cull flowers from common ground,
  And twice enjoy the joy they share!

Oh, happy they who happy make!
  Who, blessing, still themselves are blest!
Who something spare for others' sake,
  And strive, in all things, for the best!

STRAWBERRY TEA CAKE. Two eggs, reserving the whites of one, one cupful of sugar, butter the size of an egg, half cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of cream tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda. Bake in three layers. Filling: White of one egg beaten very stiff and three-fourths of a cupful of sugar; beat again, then add half a cupful of fresh strawberries bruised to a pulp, and beat till stiff. This gives a filling of a beautiful pink tinge.

LEMOM TEA CAKES. One egg, one cup of sugar, half a cup of butter, three tablespoonfuls of milk, the juice and grated rind of two small lemons, one teaspoonful of baking powder, flour enough to roll out. Cut with a cake cutter.

COOKIES. Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, three eggs, one (level) teaspoonful of saleratus dissolved in a spoonful of water. Flavor with nutmeg. Stir in sifted flour until the dough can be rolled with a rolling pin; the softer the dough is the better; then roll, stamp out in small cakes sprinkle sugar lightly over them while in the pans. Bake quickly.

PRUNE PUDDING. Stew one pound of prunes until very soft. Let the water boil nearly all away. Sweeten to taste. Remove the stones and mash to a pulp. Add a little cracker dust, enough to stiffen it slightly, and the whites of three eggs, beaten stiff. Bake in a shallow dish about twenty minutes. Serve with a sauce made of the yolks of the eggs, three tablespoons sugar and one pint of milk, cooked like a boiled custard.

—Dedham at a special town meeting Monday accepted Section 72, Chapter 423, of the Acts of 1890, and will be divided into voting precincts.

The Randolph and Holbrook water commissioners have purchased a Blake pump for the pumping station, capable of furnishing 1,500,000 gallons of water per day. The other pump has a capacity of 2,500,000 and is in daily use. The amount of water now being used is about 600,000 gallons daily.—Register.

☞ A little boy who had been punished for an exhibition of ugliness was sent to bed with instruction to pray that he might be a better boy in future and that his temper might be reformed. His mother stole to the door of his room to make sure that her commands were carried out, and this is the prayer that she heard: "O Lord, please take away my bad temper. And while you are about it you might as well take mother's."—New York Evening Sun.

☞ The editor of the Independence (Kan.) Star sued a delinquent subscriber for eleven dollars. The delinquent claimed that he never subscribed for the paper and did not propose to pay. The Judge instructed the jury that if the evidence disclosed the fact that the delinquent had taken the paper from the office, or caused it to be so taken, they should find for the plaintiff. It cost the man nearly a hundred dollars to settle what eleven dollars would have paid. It pays to be honest, even with the printer and publisher.

☞ It is said that "French parents possessing seven or more children have certain exemptions from taxation. In France there are 150,000 families so exempted." Many French customs have been copied by Americans, but this system of exemption from taxation does not seem to have been discovered in the catalogue of reforms.

Anecdotes.

"Madame, are you a woman suffragist?"

"No, sir; I haven't time to be."

"Haven't time? Well, if you had the privilege of voting, whom would you support?"

"The same man I have supported for the last ten years."

"And who is that?"

"My husband."

Ethel (excitedly)—"I've got a new wrinkle."

Maud (calmly)—"Well, my dear, I suppose at your age they are unavoidable."

"Are you on friendly terms with the defendant?" demanded a lawyer of a witness in court.

"Well, I ain't throwing no bouquets to him."

"My little girl, how do you wear out your dress sleeves so fast?" asked a mother when her child came home from school with a rent under her arm.

"I guess it's holding up my hand so much to let the teacher know I can answer the questions," was the quick response.

"My son, you must always frequent the company of your betters."

"All right, papa, but if the other fellows' father tell them to do the same thing, what am I to do?"

CITY COUNCIL.

of the rules took its final reading by vote of 18 to 1, Councilman Powers being the only nay.

New Schoolhouse.

The Committee on Finance reported a minor amendment to the order for plans for the new school house in Ward Three, which was adopted.

Councilman Gray opposed the order believing it time to cry a halt in making loans. His motion to lay on the table was defeated, and under a suspension of the rules the order was passed to be ordained.

YEAS—Bryant, Drake, Fallon, Hammond, Hayward, Jones, Little, Moxon, Newcomb, Pope, Powers, Pratt, Rinn, Roberts, Sherman, Warner and Wilde—17.

NAYS—Bass and Gray—2.

A motion at this point (10.20) to adjourn was defeated, and Councilman Newcomb and Drake left.

Culverts on Sachem Brook.

The order for new culvert over Sachem brook was slightly amended and under suspension of the rules unanimously passed to be ordained.

Licenses Granted.

The Committee on Licenses reported an order granting the following licenses:

Innholder—S. A. Merrill.

Common Victualler—Miss Hattie H. Connors, George Hatch and E. G. Sanborn.

Billiard—S. A. Merrill.

Hackney carriage—Albert O'Neil.

To sell fireworks—Mrs. Abby J. Higgins, Thomas H. Conlon.

The petition of Charles Lorendo for a common victualler's license was granted.

New Fire Station.

The committee on Fire Department reported an order for plans for a new central fire station, said plans not to cost over $400. Read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Street Sprinkling.

The Committee on Streets reported an order authorizing the Commissioner of Public Works to sprinkle streets, the expense to be charged to the general highway account; also that Section 4 of the new law be accepted. Report accepted and recommendations adopted.

Atlantic Avenue.

The petition for the rebuilding of Atlantic avenue was on recommendation of the Committee on Streets referred to the Commissioner of Public Works.

North Street Sidewalk.

A like disposition was made of the petition for a sidewalk on North street.

The Sewer Act.

Councilman Sherman enquired if the Committee on elections was not ready to report on the sewer act.

Councilman Moxon said the chairman was absent, and had been at the last meeting.

It was voted to ask said committee to report at the next meeting.

Water Street Again.

Councilman Jones offered a preamble and order for a hearing July 6, on the widening of Water street to 40 feet.

Councilman Moxon favored the adoption of Section 51 of the Public Statutes relating to betterments before this street was rebuilt.

Councilman Sherman thought sewer act should also be accepted first.

Councilman Jones hoped there would be no more delays. The betterment act relative to sidewalks would apply to Water street and that was enough.

The preamble and order were adopted.

All Right.

The Committee on Finance reported the June 1 financial statement correct, and report was accepted.

Adjourned at 11.20.

New York Fashions.

SHADE HATS.

The gypsy is a shade hat which promises to be very popular both for ladies and children and with undulating brim presents a contrast to other shapes that are almost universally turned up at the back, from whence the floral trimming falls over the low crown. Neapolitan, fancy braid or Leghorn are the kinds of straw most popular, but in rivalry come shirred hats of lace or silk or cotton mull, the two former finished with flowers and the latter by very fine white embroidery. Both kinds of mull are in white and pretty shades of pink, blue, heliotrope, pale yellow, gray or crimson.

WATERING PLACE COSTUMES

are being made of printed mousseline de soie that shows pretty floral figures and is so sheer that it must be worn over silk, of which last changeable taffeta is most popular. Embroidered crepe de chine is another beautiful fabric showing a wide floral foot border in natural colors with corresponding garniture for waist and sleeves while very small blossoms are embroidered in the interval, and at less cost crepon prettily embroidered in tiny flowers or sprays, is without the borders. New lace dresses are made of veiling net, either black or white over silk, and while not durable will last long enough for gay butterflies of fashion and is correspondingly inexpensive. Charming dresses for party wear are made of light, plain fabric over silk, to which it is attached small flowers set at intervals. This is a lovely idea and a dress of white chiffon over white taffeta bestrewn with pink rose buds has just been made up for a young member of the Astor family; her sister having fine pink net over surah to match, finished with white buds.

NOTES AND ANSWERS.

Sleeves made of a material different from the dress are much more stylish than of the dress. This fashion has been taken advantage of in the renovation of partially worn dresses, especially wools, that with fresh silk sleeves, touches of the same on the waist and a flounce or more around the bottom to match, are easily given a look of newness.

In answer to special inquiry on the subject, it may be repeated that Murray & Lanman's Florida water is undoubtedly among those who have given thought to the subject the only choice. None other can possibly compare to it in the floral fragrance that is concentrated in all its freshness and purity.

"Mrs. N" skirts are growing wider at the bottom while often remaining very narrow at the top and this effect may be given by successive prolonged plaitings that extend out as they reach the lower edge. Thin fabrics are now sometimes also made with the fullness more evenly arranged and not a few show the gathers well on the sides and front.

LUCY CARTER.

By a formal order issued from the War Department the field or union of the national flag in use in the army will, on and after July 4 next, consist of 44 stars in six rows, the upper and lower rows to have eight stars and the second, third, fourth and fifth rows seven stars each, in a blue field.

Teachings of Science.

In some of these cases of habitual, as distinguished from drunkenness only functions or actions are perceptibly changed, while in others the structure of the brain and nerves is more or less profoundly affected. Often among the first symptoms will be observed a perversion of moral sentiment. There will at least be an indifference to the dangers of drink and a general recklessness of conduct. This is a natural result of the narcotic, benumbing influence of the poison. There are apt to be improvidence, sensuality, an absence of restraint of the lower passions, malfeasance, in office, unfaithfulness to trusts, indifference to the feelings and claims of parents, wife and children, and disregard of the advice of friends. There will generally be noticed unsteadiness of the hands, and often of the movements of the lower extremities, inquietude, especially if the doses be not regularly increased, want of refreshing sleep, at first fitful, but often more constant, particularly when the accustomed amount is diminished or withdrawn; and now the general appearance and expression of an habitual drinker appear. The irregular motions can, for a time, be restrained by a decided effort of the will. They are worse in the morning, especially when the sleep has been broken, but are steadied by breakfast and the usual dram. Headache, buzzing in the ears, irritability of temper, cloudiness before the eyes, and in more severe cases flashes of light and various hallucinations may follow. There are uncertainty of purpose, mental instability, though sometimes dogged obstinacy, feelings of dread but without the purpose to avoid evil or danger.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

☞ A New York drummer once stopped at a crossroads tavern in Texas for dinner. The coffee was so thin you could read a paper through it, and the landlady, as she put down the cup, said: "I'm afraid, mister, you will find this rather weak." "It's all right," said the drummer, as his eye counted the grounds in the bottom of the cup through the amber liquid, "It's all right and don't bother. If your coffee is weak your butter is awful strong, and the general average will do very well."

☞ After many years of bother, the colored man is to have a hotel in Boston where entertainment can be had, same as the white man. This, it is rumored is to be erected at the South End and if the plans are carried out, will be quite an institution.

For the Patriot.

Our Water Supply.

What was proven at the hearings on the petition of the city for a new water system:

That the plant of the Water Company is a good one, well constructed, of first-rate material, and ample to supply those parts of the city where mains are laid and to carry the extensions required.

That the lay out of the mains has been such as to properly allow for extensions without taking up any main now down. That the water shed above the reservoirs is large enough to supply 30,000 people with 50 gallons of water daily, if sufficient storage basins are made. That the water shed is a remarkably good one and that the few "outs" about it can be easily and cheaply remedied.

That the water now furnished by the Quincy Water Company is better than that furnished to many of the towns in the state by public system.

That the typhoid fever of Quincy comes from the wells and not from the water furnished by the Quincy Water Company, there being only about one case in fifteen from houses using the Quincy water, and those not attributable to the water.

That the total amount of impurities is only about four grains per gallon, most of that too, being entirely harmless. That the water is steadily improving. That the Company went about its business in a purely business manner, and as a permanent thing.

That when more than a million and a half gallons of water are needed daily, the water from Blue Hill river can be brought into Town brook by cutting a channel that will cost not over $1500, and that the surveys to determine the connecting of the two sources of supply had been made three years ago by the Quincy Water Company. That the organization of the Water Company was open to the public, and that for nearly three months the public was invited to become stockholders.
